Help The Kidneys.

Chestertown Readers Are Learning The Way.

It's the little kidney ills—
The lame, weak or aching back—
The unnoticed urinary disorders—
That may lead to dropsy and Bright's disease.
When the kidneys are weak,
Help them with Doan's Kidney Pills,
A remedy especially for weak kidneys.
Doan's have been used in kidney troubles for 50 years.
Endorsed by 30,000 people—endorsed at home.
Proof in a Chestertown citizen's statement.

Hyland Crew, High street, Chestertown, Md., says: "I had pains in my back and head and my kidneys were disordered, causing me no end of trouble. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Toulson's Drug Store and they made me feel a great deal better in every way. I do not believe there is a better kidney medicine than Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

GETTYSBURG NOW AND THEN.

There is now a bright July morning,
All nature is blithesome and gay—
On a fence rail the robin is singing—
In the bushes the shy chipmunks play.

Once, the rushing of armies together,
Shook the earth with a terrible jar;
Once, men grappled hard with each other
And bullets went whizzing afar.

Then all was the direst confusion—
Bomb shells bursting hot over head,
Soldiers were reeling in anguish,
While riders and horses lay dead,

The slashing of sabres and muskets,
And death's hail rattling so fast;
With curses and cries of the wounded,
And artillery hurrying past

Where fighting and marching and fighting,
From dawning of day until night,
Kept women in sorrow and wailing,
And the war stream rolled on in its might.

Now, the plow-share upturns a new furrow,
The new moon ushers in a new tide—
'Neath the stars the brave soldiers are sleeping,
The Gray and the Blue side by side.

Hushed is the loud roar of battle,
Silence covers the graves of the dead—
May silence forever envelope
The causes of war that are fled.

All over the wild fields of carnage,
Now clovers and white daises bloom;
Where cannon were bellowing loudest,
Now the honey bee buzzes her tune.

Time has softened a nation's contentions,
And sorrows most heavy to bear;
Hatreds and raging dissensions
Have vanished like smoke in the air.

There are now but sad recollections
Of tumults that shook all our zone;
Peace has covered the face of the statue, "Mnemosyne"—
Statue of stone.

Above us, unseen, swings a censer,
To and fro, by a pendulum fine;
"Forgiveness," as incense floats upward;
It is held by the Spirit Divine.

—ROSALIE M. SCHUYLER.

POULTRY NOTES.

PROVIDE PLENTY OF SHADE.

Providing shade for the fowls and chicks during the hot summer months is one of the important matters which a large majority of poultry keepers entirely overlook.

Many experienced breeders, as well as amateurs, are neglectful in this respect, and it is well that we all stop to consider the question.

Constant exposure to the direct rays of the sun day after day will ruin the strongest and healthiest flocks. It will surely make the poultry plant a losing proposition, and is very apt to become the indirect cause of complete failure. Numerous diseases are the result of hot-weather conditions, and in addition to these, which are directly traceable to that cause, are many which are greatly aggravated by it. Fowls are subject to a trouble which corresponds with sunstroke in human beings, and there are many sudden deaths in the poultry yard which are really cases of sunstroke, and which the poultry keeper cannot account for in any manner simply because he never gives any thought to the real cause.

The heat has a general debilitating effect upon the fowls, and this is usually evidenced by various forms of fatal bowel trouble, all of which are termed cholera by the averaged person. Real fowl cholera is comparatively rare, but this disease and other similar ones may surely be expected where there is to be found a combination of filthy houses and yards and exposure to the hot sun.

CHOLERA REMEDY.

The preparation known as Douglass mixture is one of the best home remedies for cholera and other forms of bowel diseases. The recipe is: Sulphuric acid, one-half ounce; copperas, one-half pound, and water, one-half gallon. A tablespoonful of this mixture should be placed in the water for about a dozen hens daily. Even though the fowls escape disease itself, they are unfitted for laying, and they drag through the summer months in a weakened condition physically, which is apt to prolong the molting period and retard egg production till late in the winter.

The sun will also actually burn the delicate shade of coloring in the feathers, and the effect of constant exposure to the sun and rain will absolutely prevent the growth of perfect plumage, even though the birds have blue-blooded ancestry back of them. This is an important consideration to breeders of fancy fowls.

In the case of little chicks and young stock in general, there is even greater need for protection than for older fowls. Excessive heat will take the life and vigor out of a little chick, and will stunt the growing young chick to such an extent that they will never mature to full size and weight, and consequently will be of very little value. One of the somewhat common and to some people mysterous troubles with chicks in summer is the bare condition of the body. Oftentimes a chick may be seen that is almost devoid of plumage, and the skin is quite red and very much inflamed. This is one of the results of continued exposure to the sun. In mild cases, the bird may be put into good condition by confining it to a coop or protected run and anointing the effected parts with carborated vaseline once a day, until the skin assumes its normal condition, at which time the plumage will again begin to grow. Where this treatment will not remedy the trouble, it is best to kill the bird.
