War Hero, Wife Hang Selves

discovering the suicide note.

Miss Claggett told police detectives that Mr. and Mrs. Roberts had appeared despondent since his arrest on Saturday afternoon.

Meanwhile, she said, were discussing the case across the kitchen table when she came home at midnight Sunday.

Accused of Annoying Girl

Roberts was arrested on a charge of molesting an 8-year-old girl in a downtown Newark theater. He denied the charge and posted a $1000 cash bail, pending a hearing in Family Court Monday morning.

The complaint against Mr. Roberts, according to the police, was made when the girl, sitting next to him in the theatre, told a spectator in the audience he was bothering her. The child's father was notified. He summoned the theatre manager, who called the police.

Mrs. Roberts believed her husband innocent and shared his grief and humiliation suffered by the accusation.

Military services for Mr. Roberts were held Wednesday night at the Beckett's funeral home by members of the old 369th Infantry Regiment of New York City, under Col. George Weaver, commanding officer.

First to Get Croix de Guerre

When a plaque in memory of Col. William Hayward, commanding officer of the 369th Infantry in World War I, was unveiled at the 15th National Guard, New York City in 1946, it bore the names of Roberts and Sgt. Henry Johnson of Albany, N.Y., both of them members of the famed "Harlem Hell Fighters" who were regularly honored for bravery.

Military Rites Scheduled

A contingent of soldiers from Fort Dix, the American Legion Post American Legion and a delegation from radio station WOR, New York City, will participate in services for Mr. Roberts at Clinton Memorial Thursday.

Mrs. Roberts is survived by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Meyners.

Roberts, who until his untimely death Monday, was the only living of the men whose names were inscribed on the plaque, was the first American soldier to be awarded the French Croix de Guerre.

He was cited for action on May 15, 1918, when Roberts and Johnson were on guard duty, a mere hundred yards away from the German lines in the Argonne Forest.

They heard noises and soon discovered a group of nearly 40 Germans cutting barbed wire. Throwing care to the wind, the pair hurled hand grenades and poured rifle fire into the entrenched Germans.

NEEDHAM ROBERTS

Injured in Hand Combat

Roberts's gun was jammed and he was forced to engage in hand-to-hand combat against the Huns.

Roberts bayoneted one enemy through the middle, but not before one of the Germans pushed a blade through his right hand.

Johnson, who came on the other end of the trench taking the enemy with a bowie knife, severely wounded, Roberts grabbed another German who, in spite of being down, shot him in the right arm.

He almost lost the arm, but continued to toss grenades in the midst of the enemy to cover Johnson.

28 Dead Germans

When the heat of battle had died down the next morning 28 Germans were counted as dead.

Roberts had spoposed to many bond rallies during World War II. He portrayed himself in the motion picture, "Home of the Brave" and was awarded the Purple Heart on May 27, 1932. When he came home from France, Trenton staged an official welcome for him.

He was the son of the Rev. Norman Roberts of Trenton. He was employed by a radio station WOR in New York City.

Mr. Roberts leaves a daughter of a previous marriage, Mrs. Juanita Kelly; a sister, Mrs. Emma Garretson; brother, Guy Roberts.

Interment will be in Fairmount Cemetery.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts were moved to the Morgue on Monday to await funeral arrangements.

testified that the cab followed her "almost every time" she left home.

Mrs. Smallwood identified Lanzo as operator of the cab and Wooden as a front seat passenger who addressed her as "Hi Baby."

She said the cab once blocked the intersection of Eden St. and Ashland Ave. and prevented her from crossing the street.

Offenses Told

The first incident occurred one afternoon in mid-February and she jotted down the number of the cab but did not report it, Mrs. Smallwood said.

When she was walking to a Gay St. bakery on April 2, the cab, followed her to the bakery and back home.

Mrs. Smallwood called to her husband, Elmer Smallwood, when the cab reached her home the second time, she testified.

A few minutes later the machine returned and Mr. Smallwood noted the taxicab bureau registration number. The couple the suit against a segregated Army, dismissed, contends that Tomlinson failed to file an appeal from his 1-A classification within 10 days after receiving notice last Oct. 8 in not doing so, Government lawyers assert, he lost his right to protest the action.

Lost Letter Seals Army Bias Case

This is part of the Government's argument that Tomlinson did not exhaust all administrative Selective Service processes before going into court and is liable for criminal prosecution for failure to report for induction.

Board's Affidavit

An affidavit that Tomlinson took no appeal within the 10-day period was filed last week by officials of his draft board.

Tomlinson, on the other hand stated that after he received the Oct. 8 notice, he went to the draft board office to find out why he had been classified without a physical examination.

He said he was told by Mrs. Copper that everyone was given a 1-A status until it was proved they belonged in some other class.

Tells of Notices

Later, Tomlinson asserted, he received a notice from the board advising him to ignore the first letter and await further orders.

Shortly afterward, according to Tomlinson's affidavit, he received another notice from the board ordering him to report for induction.

His appeal was filed after the second letter, Tomlinson's counsel contends.

Franklin Williams, NAACP attorney representing Tomlinson, declared during the hearing that the draft board's filing system was loose.

It was entirely possible, he argued, that the letter was sent and the draft board copy lost. Several draft boards use the same office.

Judge Scores Egotism

Judge Ganey said that, in his opinion, a letter Tomlinson wrote the draft board requesting that he not be placed in a segregated outfit was "silly and based on nothing but egotism."

The board, the jurist asserted had no more authority to comply with this request "than it had to stop a war."

Review of Case

Tomlinson filed a petition for injunction to prevent his induction "into a jim-crow Army" unit last December.

The Government filed motion for dismissal shortly afterward contending that the defendant's name in the suit were not the responsible parties.

The motion was denied by Judge Ganey, although he agreed that with one possible exception there was question of the defendant's responsibility.

It was important, he said, that the issue before the court not be evaded.

Racism Main Issue

Last week, Kallick argued that Tomlinson's reclassification killed the issue.

His reclassification was automatic on his 26th birthday last February. After that age, the draftee must consent to induction.

Tomlinson's attorneys argue that he has never fought induction into the Army, but that he is protesting his call to service in a segregated outfit.

He contends that his placement in the Army should not be based on race.

Near-Blind Man Leaps Off Bridge

hubby . . . please forgive me, I pray God will."

An eyewitness to the suicide leap, Louis Drew, 18, of 2118 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., told police he saw Mr. Lewis climb the stone railing of the bridge. Interfere there for "about five minutes," then jump, feet first, below.

His body fell into Rock Creek Park.

Drew flagged a policeman and a taxi driver, but it was too late. Mr. Lewis was dead when they reached him. He was pronounced dead at 2:55 p.m. and the District coroner later issued a certificate of death by suicide.

The tragedy attracted a large crowd of Easter week passersby who were in the vicinity at the time.

Worked as Butler

A native of Spottsylvania, Va., Mr. Lewis was a Mason and a member of the Mt. Gilead Baptist Church.

For 25 years, he had served with his wife as a butler-cook team in the homes of many notables throughout the country. His employers had included the late Sen. George Patton, Colonel Colliday and Mrs. Bessie Christian, prominent Richmond, Va. Virginia.
