Father of 10 by 2 Sisters Faces 10 Morals Charges

Already Serving Two-Year Prison Sentence for Delinquency, as State Supports Brood

Willard Gaymon, father of a total of 10 children borne him by both his wife and her sister, was back in court, Thursday.

The 30-year-old man still is serving a two-year sentence received in Juvenile Court four months ago for a family situation in which he slept in the same house with his wife one night, and his sister-in-law the next.

He was convicted at that time under the contributing to delinquency law, and Judge Charles L. Moylan called him a "stud horse."

Faces 10 More Charges

On Thursday, Judge Herman Moser in Criminal Court informed Gaymon that when he finished serving the two-year sentence, he (Judge Moser) will decide what to do with him on the following:

Seven paternity charges involving this woman's 16-year-old daughter and two non-support charges related to the children of his wife.

Gaymon pleaded guilty to all of these counts except that involving the 16-year-old mother-to-be, of guilty of her, he pleasted.

Taxpayers Support Family

Judge Moser learned that once the Juvenile Court trial, the 10 children belonging to the sister-in-law and wife have been placed in the care of the Welfare Department which pays $40 a month for each child.

The jurist pointed out that to give Gaymon an additional sentence only would add an additional burden to the taxpayers, now forced to support his family.

At the earlier hearing in Juvenile Court, it was revealed that both sister-in-law and wife shared the husband at a home in the 700 block Dover St., and each knew about the relationship of the other.

The wife reportedly told Policewoman Cornelia Smith that she had heart trouble and could not allow herself to be upset about the situation.

The wife's sister, Mrs. Annie V. Graham, who was given a suspended sentence when tried with Gaymon on the "contributing" charge, told Judge Moylan, "It's all been done now," when he asked if she were not ashamed of the situation.

7-year-old Situation

It was said that the "family" arrangement began seven years ago when the wife left and her sister moved in.

The man's relations with the sister-in-law continued after the wife returned, six months later. All three admitted, to Judge Moylan that there was no "objection" to the setup.

Mrs. Graham had seven children in the seven years. Mrs. Smith revealed, adding that the woman has two other children from her own marriage.
