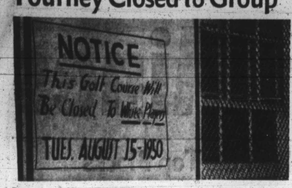
'Invitational Open' Golf Tourney Closed to Group



Because a golf tournament is in progress, colored golfers were denied use of the Mt. Pleasant Golf Course on Tuesday, the day set aside for them there. To make up for it, the Park Board allowed them use of the Carroll Park Course, but had to bar white players, as the sign shows.

resentative, said that the company had no control over who would participate in the tournament. No mention of discrimination was made, it added, in a contract which delegated all regulatory power to the PGA.

by the Middle Atlantic section of the PGA.

Responsible for the rejections, said, was a Middle Atlantic committee, consisting of Irvin Schloss, host pro; Andy Gibson and Jimmy Bass, all of the Baltimore area.

Mr. Capps said the tournament is open to members of the PGA and open "by invitation" to amateur and professional golfers with tournament status. He said the Middle Atlantic committee was allowed to name entrants who would lend "local color" to the affair.

Racial Problem Recognized

Final approval, he concluded, remained in the hands of a national committee, comprised of Lawson Little, Dave Douglas and Clayton Haefner, nationally known golfers who acted upon the selections of the local committee.

When Samuel Stewart asked Mr. Capps if he thought their applications were rejected because of race, the PGA man answered, "I understand your problem."

Even application blanks were obtained after a delay. Samuel Stewart, Mr. Martin, and Mrs. Marguerite Brown, were told on Tuesday that entry blanks could only be obtained from Mr. Capps who had not arrived.

Yet, when Mr. Stewart telephoned the Mt. Pleasant clubhouse a scant half-hour later he was told that entry blanks were available.

Those Rejected Top-Notchers

The Eastern Open is being hailed as Baltimore's first venture into "big time" golf, but it left a sour taste in the mouths of Samuel Stewart and Mr. Martin, both recognized as top-notch among colored golfers.

"I sure would like to play in this one," Mr. Stewart said, as he watched the big names in golf go through their practice sessions.

According to the regular schedule, colored golfers may play at Mount Pleasant on Tuesday, Clifton Park on Wednesday, Hillsdale on Thursday and at Carroll Park on Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Barred Without Consent

Without their consent, colored golfers were forced to give up their "day" (Tuesday) at Mount Pleasant to allow the lily-white entrants to practice for the tournament.

Carroll Park, a nine-hole course, was designated "for colored" on Tuesday.

The jim crow schedules were established by the Park Board two years ago when a Federal Court ruled that the city courses should be open to all.

After filing entry blanks and fees Tuesday, the four would-be participants were turned down the following day.

PGA Fails to Okay Entry

Howard Capps, PGA tournament supervisor, told two of the golfers that their applications were rejected because they were not approved

Mines in the Way

A few days ago in South Korea, Lieutenant Benefield's company was advancing and ran into a heavily mined area. The advance had to be made and the only way to make it was to remove the deadly land mines in the area.

But this was considered virtually impossible, for the mined area was in full view of the enemy and directly in his field of fire. Volunteers were called for and Lieutenant Benefield volunteered.

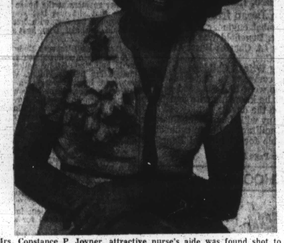
'Clean Out Two Thirds Before Cut Down

Then in broad daylight, 100 yards from the enemy lines, and with absolutely nothing between him and the enemy, he walked out into the mine fields and began breaching the mines.

He had finished about two thirds of the mines when he was cut down by enemy fire.

He died several hours later, but the company was able to get through the area and for his heroism he has been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross.

Found Shot to Death



Mrs. Constance P. Joyner, attractive nurse's aide was found shot to death in her bed, Wednesday morning. She had been dead since Sunday. Police are looking for her husband who was last seen at that time.

Body Found 4 Days Later

they found a .32-calibre revolver under a sofa cushion in the room where the body had been found.

Single Shot Fired

Police said that there were four full cartridges in the pistol and one spent cartridge.

The Joyners had been rooming at the house a little over a week, Mr. Holloway said.

The dead woman's father, Joshua Pridgen of 1417 Druid Hill Ave., claimed the body. Funeral arrangements are set for 1 p.m. Saturday with burial at Mt. Auburn Cemetery. Her mother, Mrs. Myrtle P. Davis is expected to come from Virginia to attend the services.

Besides her parents, and husband, Mrs. Joyner is survived by two children, a boy, 4, and a daughter, 9 months old.

A native Baltimorean, Mrs. Joyner left Douglas High in 1945. Her father is a dental technician at University Hospital.

Elks' Lawyer Hits Suit by Initiate

A $20,000 damage suit charging that an Elk initiation ceremony had possibly caused permanent injuries to Raymond Mills of 1200 Argyle Ave. was vigorously opposed this week by Roy S. Bond, attorney for Monumental Lodge No. 2.

In denying the charges and defying Mr. Mills, Mr. Bond termed the claim "a wicked falsehood concocted by a disloyal person who never would make a good Elk."

In his Superior Court declaration Mr. Mills contended that he suffered a dislocated hip on March 5 when he was one of 32 initiates entering the lodge, whose headquarters is at 1528 Madison Ave.

Points to Order's Progress

The lodge's attorney issued the following statement:

"It would be far better if men would work together . . . rather than waste their time in an effort to tear down an order that has built itself up by the traditional good it has accomplished.

Prior to entraining for Chicago, Mr. Bond commented:

"I am hastening to the Grand Lodge Convention in an effort to do some good for my fellowman.

"I would be very sorry if I had done nothing more in my life than tear down instead of endeavoring to build up such a grand old order as the Improved Benevolent Protective order of Elks of the World."

who wanted to visit in the South. When the friend decided to remain out of the city, Mrs. Russell decided to keep working, he said.

Couldn't Care for Son

The job interfered with proper care of their son, the husband testified, stating that after working from 6 in the afternoon until 3 in the morning, the mother was too tired to get up and prepare breakfast for the child. He was not making much money, he said, and his wife wouldn't give up her job.

Later, he said, Mrs. Russell left and went to the home of her mother. He told the court that as late as last year he had sought a reconciliation with his wife.

He said that she told him that too many things had happened during the interim and she felt there was no possibility of resuming the marriage.

Their son, now 20, is married and self-supporting, he added. Mr. Russell was represented by Gregory Hawkins, attorney.

GI's in Korea Prove Mettle

question at least. Colored Americans will fight—against Russia or any other nation, when called upon to do so.

And not only will they fight, but they will do so heroically.

Tales of Heroism

War correspondents speak of outnumbered Tan Yanks repelling heavy Korean Red offensives, and despite heavy losses regrouping and launching counterattacks.

They tell of a sergeant from Detroit covering himself with glory by holding his machine gun fire until an enemy patrol was trapped and then cutting loose, killing 30 North Koreans inspired by the communist doctrine.

They tell of colored and white Americans lying on the battlefields, in the hospital wards and in heroes' graves, side by side.

These are the facts. There can be no misinterpretation.

Disappointed After Last War

When the boys marched home from World War II, they hoped they were coming back to the democracy for which they fought—but in many cases, they were disappointed.

They have gone off to Korea this time, still fighting for something they believe in, but which often lets them down. Some day soon, let us hope, they will be marching home again.

They have proved that they will fight. And upon their return, they expect a better reward than segregation and its attendant ills.

Crownsville Aide Bar Hit by Cleric

ANNOPOLIS — The State policy of prohibiting the employment of colored attendants at Crownsville State Hospital was assailed this week by the Rev. David H. Croll, president of the local NAACP branch.

He made the criticism shortly after officials and the Maryland State Employment Service said they would have to go to Cumberland in search of white attendants for the colored institution.

The Rev. Mr. Croll and Dr. Aris T. Allen, physician, conferred with Crownsville officials recently to seek employment of attendants. They were told the patients did not want them.

About eight months ago Crownsville officials said colored attendants might be employed in the future, but three weeks ago they said "now is not the time," the Rev. Mr. Croll said.

Dr. Allen said he has 20 applications from colored persons for the job of attendant at the hospital.

The local NAACP is continuing its efforts to have qualified persons employed as attendants regardless of race and also to have appointed to the Annapolis police force person from the minority group.

3 Men Denied Bail After Triple Murder Hearings

Two men, accused of shooting their victims and a third man, accused of killing another with a piece of wood, were denied bail and held for the grand jury following murder hearings in Northwestern police court, Tuesday.

Case No. 1 involved John Brown, 43, of the 1600 block of Brunt St., who was charged with shooting Alonzo Shivers outside of a Fremont Ave. cafe in a free-for-all brawl on July 14.

Testimony revealed that the fight developed following an argument between William Dailey, 41, of the 1300 block Upton St., and Andrew Washington, 30, of the 1300 block of Stockton St.

Andrew's brother, Howard Washington, 32, of the 200 block W. Hill St., and his cousin Alonzo Shivers came to his aid while Brown backed up Dailey, it was testified.

Shot and Fled

Witnesses said that Shivers drew a pistol and approached Brown who shot him when they were about 12 inches apart. Following the shooting, Brown fled, but surrendered to police the next day.

Magistrate Thomas L. Fitzpatrick held the Washington brothers under $100 bail each on charges of striking Dailey. Bail was set at $1000 for Dailey who was accused of pointing a gun at Howard Washington.

In case No. 2, Altey LeBoard, 32, of the 700 block W. Lexington St., was charged with shooting John Truitt during a battle outside of an "after hours" place on July 1.

Returning from Hospital

Miss Elizabeth Hunter of the 1700 block Pierce St., testified that she and LeBoard were returning from the hospital where she had gone to have an injured eye treated, when they decided to stop in an "after hours" spot on Pine St.

While there, Miss Unter said, Thomas Bennett, 28, of the 600 block W. Mulberry St., began teasing her about the patch on her eye. Testimony did not disclose how she had received the eye injury.

When they left and sought a cab, Miss Hunter testified, Bennett, Truitt, Francis Smith and a man called "Gus," followed them from the place and started fighting LeBoard.

Smith testified that Truitt struck LeBoard, knocking him into Bennett, from whom LeBoard snatched a 32-calibre revolver.

As Truitt, Bennett and the man called "Gus," allegedly waved at LeBoard over, he fired the fatal shot which struck Truitt, Smith admitted that earlier in the evening he had the alleged murder weapon, but had given it to Bennett. Both of these men were held under $250 bail on deadly weapon charges.

In the third case, Walter Spruill, 25, of the 2000 block Mulberry St., was accused of striking Charles Manley with a two-by-four piece of wood on July 26, and causing his death four days later.

According to testimony, Spruill struck Manley in the back of the head, during a street argument between Manley and Milton Bond, over the former's wife. Manley died in Johns Hopkins Hospital as the result of a fractured skull.

Bond told the court that when he asked Spruill why he had struck Manley, he answered: "I just got mad."

Not represented by counsel, Spruill did not testify. However he did say that he believed Manley had a weapon and when Manley put his hand in his pocket, he struck him with the piece of board which he found in the gutter.

"I have been cut—once and I didn't want to get cut again," Spruill averred.

Job Increase Noted in State During July

Unemployment insurance payments in Maryland totaled $1,619,719 in July the State Department of Employment Security revealed this week.

This was $384,672 less than was paid out in June of this year, when 107,875 benefit checks were issued for a total of $2,004,391.

The July benefits also represented a decrease of nearly 50 per cent of the amount paid out during July, 1949, which was $3,137,544. This would seem to indicate that there is less unemployment in Maryland now, than there was a year ago.

During July, 1950, insured workers received a total of 86,873 checks as compared with 148,510 issued the same month of 1949.
