Jack Carter to Be Seen in 'Mice'

WASHINGTON

Jack Carter, known for his performances in "Porgy and Bess," "Stevedore," and other plays, will appear in Washington next week when "Of Mice and Men" opens at the new Arena Stage.

He will play Crooks in the dramatization of John Steinbeck's famous novel, which is the second production of Washington's venture in central staging. "She Stoops to Conquer," initial offering of the Arena Stage, proved so popular that it has been held over an additional week and does not close until Saturday.

Mr. Carter, who has been on the stage since he was 14, is a native of New York City and appeared for years as leading man with the well-known Lafayette Players.

He played Crown in "Porgy and Bess" in New York City after scoring a success as Lonnie Thomas in "Stevedore," and he also took the title role in Orson Welles' production of "Macbeth."

"Of Mice and Men" will run Sept. 11 through 23.

Diet and Eye Health

Is there a connection between eating and good eyes? Yes, says Dr. Martin N. Boskin, one of Maryland's leading optometrists. He says, "Each vitamin from A to K (with the possible exception of vitamin E) is useful to good vision. A wisely balanced diet of milk, butter and dairy products, green leafy and root vegetables, fruits, especially the citrus ones and tomatoes (they are fairly low priced now) eggs, meat, fish and chicken will supply the needed vitamins.

"Additional A and D vitamins present in the fishliver oils are needed throughout a child's life, from birth through pre-adolescence to maintain good vis on."

He also recommends that you take care of your eyes at the first sign of eye strain—bearing in mind the old proverb "a stitch in time saves nine."

Dr. Boskin's offices are at the Penn Optical Company one of the finest establishments in the entire East and his examining room is furnished with the latest scientific equipment available.

The eye-examination is exceedingly careful and courteous treatment is given to one and all.

Prices are extremely low, too at the Penn Optical Company and service quick with repairs frequently being made while the patient waits. —ADVT.

Co-Starring in Met Drama

A lighter moment in "Johnny Holiday," now at the Met with William Bendix and 12-year-old Allen Martin co-starred, in a story concerning underprivileged boys.

In Spotlight at Royal

The Ravens are sharing the stage spotlight at the Royal along with Calvin Boze's orchestra, Ruth Brown, throaty chirper, and other outstanding acts.

TOPS IN HORSEPOWER

The Navy's new 3,500-horse-pow twin-turbine engined plane, Skyshark, develops more horsepower on take-off than any other engined plane now being flown.

Emily Post Might Object to This

Barbara Stanwyck and Walter Huston seem to be enjoying themselves in this scene from "The Furies," now playing the Regent Theatre.

Movie Shows Old Rites

"The dold Apache marriage ceremony, reported to be one of the most beautiful ever performed by any society, is used for the screen wedding of Jimmy Stewart and Debra Paget in "Broken Arrow," showing Sunday and Monday at the Bridge Theatre.

In the ceremony, a small incision with a knife was made on the index finger of both bride and groom. Then their fingers were bound together and a chant was quietly intoned:

"Now your blood mixes.

Now for you there is no rain. For one is shelter to the other. Now for you there is no cold. For one is warmth for the other. Now there is no loneliness. Now forever, forever, there is no loneliness.

There are two bodies but now there

Is but one blood in both of them

And you are the same person

Go. Ride the white horses to your secret place."

HARVEY—Mrs. Sallie Harvey, Miss Elizabeth Harvey of Burlington, N.C.; and Henry Harvey of Roanoke, Va., were the guests in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Henry Baltimore, entertained over the Labor Day weekend.

'First Run' Films

"JOHNNY HOLIDAY" NOW AT THE MET

"Johnny Holiday" is a heart-warming drama fashioned around a rugged, retired U.S. Cavalry sergeant, a confused boy, and a mare and her foal. It's a story of underprivileged boys.

The film stars William Bendix, with 12-year-old Allen Martin in the title role. Ronnie's story is like one culled straight out of Horatio Alger.

With the exception of a few brief Indianapolis street scenes, "Johnny Holiday" was filmed in its entirety at the Indiana Boys School at Plainfield.

AFRO NEWSBOYS TO SEE 'JOHNNY HOLIDAY'

The Met Theatre will be host to AFRO newsboys this Saturday at 10:00 a.m. at a special showing of "Johnny Holiday." All attending will receive free comic books.

ON STAGE, SCREEN AT THE ROYAL

The current season opens with a lineup of stage attractions including Calvin Boze's combo, Ruth Brown, chirper; Apus and Estrellita, a touch of Harlem and South America; the Ravens, and Harold King, tops on skates.

On the screen, Willard Parker in "Body Hold," an exciting film concerning the wrestling game.

PULSE-POUNDING EPIC, 'FURIES,' AT REGENT

A lusty action epic set against the roaring background of the great Southwest just before the turn of the century, "The Furies" is the exciting story of a Texas cattle baron who bought his ranch-empire with guns and ruled it through violence.

The film co-stars Barbara Stanwyck, Wendell Corey and Walter Huston in his last screen appearance.

"ALL QUIET" GREAT FILM, AT THE HARLEM

"All Quiet on the Western Front," one of the most acclaimed motion pictures of our time, is currently showing at the Harlem. The second feature is "The Skipper Surprised His Wife."

"All Quiet," a war drama, co-starring Lew Ayres and Louis Wolheim, is a grim saga of World War I as seen through German eyes. Gripping battle scenes are relieved by poignant romances with the enemy and war humor that is universal to all armies.

The film is not an indictment of any one country. It shows the futility and inevitability of war, now that the whole world once again is answering the call to arms.

Widmark Lauded for Role in 'No Way Out'

NEW YORK (ANP) — When Frederick O'Neal returned to New York from Hollywood after completing "No Way Out" his praise was all for Richard Widmark, who is co-starred in this 20th Century-Fox motion picture with Linda Darnell.

"One day," O'Neal said, after we had finished shooting one of the thrilling scenes, Widmark came over where I was standing and asked, 'Well, how did it look?' What kind of a guy do you think I am? What do you think people will say?"

"For a minute, I couldn't answer. Widmark had done such a terrifically impressive and realistic bit of acting, I had no answer.

Wilmark Real Actor

"Then, a slow smile spread over his face and he said, I know what you're thinking. I'm a so-o-b.' I knew then that he had been merely acting his part. And he is a back of an actor, believe me. When you see the film, you'll hate his guts. He has a nasty role, but he plays it for all it's worth. Widmark is a real actor."

Unfortunately, O'Neal's part in the picture was cut as were some of the other scenes. The entire ending was changed from the original, but with these changes the picture still remains what O'Neal had said, "a terrific indictment that pulls no punches and leaves nothing to the imagination."

Audiences will squirm at the stark realism and lines of the picture. But that was the only way it could be presented if it were to be presented at all and no apology is needed for it.

The vigorous directing keeps the picture moving at a fast clip all the time. For once, all persons are pictured as human beings with aspirations and inspirations.

In White Man's World

Here is the story of a lone colored interne in a white city hospital, equal with the white doctors on the staff and called doctor by all of them, not in the general usage of the south where titles supplant Mr. and Mrs. but in the professional sense.

Sidney Poitier, the doctor, had to learn lots of things to play this part. He had to learn the technique of the difficult "spinal puncture" which many doctors never have used.

"No Way Out" ranks with that great film "Intruder in the Dust" for honesty of purpose and sincerity in presentation and brings to the screen some pretty good acting by the competent colored members of the cast.

They include Amanda Randolph, Dote Johnson, native Baltimorean, who won fame in "Paisan." Maude Simmons, Ruby Dee, Mildred Joanne Smith, Ossie Davis, supporting Poitier, and many others used in the riot scene.

NO MORE UNIT TAGS

TOKYO (ANP) —General MacArthur's headquarters has set up a new policy by which identification of individual units fighting in Korea will not be released.
