The Dollar

Just a dollar on a mission sent, makes a lot of people glad each time the coin is spent. You pay it to the butcher for the meat to give you strength; he takes it to the grocer from whom it goes at length, some pretty lace or cloth his better half to buy, or help to get her winter hat to make her rival sigh. The dry goods man sent on the coin to pay the market bill, and though the coin is often spent it stays a dollar still, and every time 'tis spent at home, some act of good is done; in booming local industries it's bound to make them run. But if you take the shining coin and break the local chain, the chances are that from afar twill not return again. If once it passes out of town the butcher and baker, the grocer and the dry goods man; the furniture man and carpenter, the wagon man and blacksmith, the shoeman and printer, every one will lose the chence to touch the coin ere the setting of the sun. Just keep the little coin at home just keep it moving well, and everytime it changes hands somebody's goods 'twill sell. That single little dollar has this a wondrous power to make somebody happy a dozen times an hour. It pays the bill and wards off ill and ne'er its power relaxes, to soothe the doctor, buy the coal and pay for clothes and taxes.
