Arson Squad Probes $20,000 Turner Station Fire

3 Theories Aired for Fire Gutting Shopping Center

probe is being headed by Capt. Nelson Williams of the Arson Bureau.

The pre-dawn blaze was discovered by a newspaper carrier about 4.30 a.m. Wednesday. He telephoned Dundalk and Edgemere firemen who in turn called two volunteer companies after reaching the scene and seeing that the fire had gotten a head start.

The fire, which began in an empty second-floor room, damaged six of the nine business establishments in the building.

Four of these, a variety store, beauty shop, restaurant and shoe repair shop, were so extensively burned they were unable to resume business.

The variety store is owned by William C. Darden, a retired steel worker, who is president and chief stockholder of the Balnew Corporation.

The Balnew Corporation, which erected the building at a cost of $100,000, held emergency meetings this week to plan steps for rebuilding the center.

Meanwhile the arson squad, under a cloak of secrecy, continued to probe for the cause of the fire.

maining there until early 1948.

In January of that year, however, she returned to the doctor's home in Maplewood, it is stated and the couple entered into marital relationship which resulted in the birth of the daughter the following October 16.

Later, this relationship was discontinued, according to the papers, and Mrs. Mickey was given the use of a separate apartment in the house and $40 a week for maintenance of herself and the child.

The complaint asserts, however, that he now is behind in payments and refused to acknowledge the paternity or the legitimacy of the child.

Further, he "has frequently asserted and claimed 'that the child is illegitimate,'" according to the police.

The court is asked to declare the Maryland divorce void, establish the legitimacy of the child, compel Dr. Mickey to support the child and give it over to the custody of the mother.

The physician was represented by Robert S. Hartgrove of Jersey City and the child by the law firm of Gilhooly and Vauch, while Mrs. Mickey is represented by Sidney E. Jaffe, court attorney.

or the Navy.V-12 program, or those who were deferred from service during World War II in order to pursue a course of instruction leading to their profession.

In this group will be men who had less than 21 months of active duty in the last war.

Other Registration Dates

This first special registration embraces persons who received their degrees before Monday. Those receiving degrees afterwards, will register on the date they are awarded or within five days thereafter.

Those men who belong to components of the Organized Reserve Corps are not required to register, Colonel Stanwood said.

The Department of the Army already has called for 922 physicians, 500 dentists and 100 veterinarians during November, December, and January. Colonel Stanwood reports that about 25 of this number will come from Maryland.

bisects the school grounds, or on adjoining roads.

Three others were picked up during Monday and Tuesday, including one at his home in Baltimore.

Cottage Held Overcrowded

There were no homosexuals among the escapees, Mr. Veney said.

Between 40 and 42 boys were in the cottage when the escape was made. Since he was appointed superintendent early in 1949, Mr. Veney has contended that this number is too large for the two cottage supervisors to handle.

The superintendent has been engaged in discussions with State officials for some time in an effort to get smaller cottages.

Punishment Discussed

Boys from 8 to 19 years old are kept at the institution. Mr. Veney is having talks with Juvenile Court officials to determine what is to be done with the ringleaders. At present they have been "isolated" he said.

Any older boy can "shoulder" the security, cottage doors open, Mr. Veney explained.

Heavier locks have not been put on because the youths may be trapped in case of fire, if the persons with a key is not immediately available, he said.

Holocaust Suits Ask $242,500

New York City, who was knocked unconscious by a falling body, is suing for $25,000.

Circumstances Recalled

It was cited that Mrs. Harris dropped the infant, then jumped from a third-story window when the unexplained fire broke out. She and the baby were killed.

Alvin Harris Sr., who was asleep in the apartment, awoke and ran into the street for help and then returned to the house, where he perished in an attempt to save his two children.

The 18-year-old daughter Edith sustained injuries, including fractured ankles and a broken arm, when she leaped from the third story window. Doram lost most of his teeth when the body of one of the falling women struck him.

Multiple Violations Charged

Named defendants in the suits are the title-holders of the property and the building inspection engineer.

The litigations charge violation and non-enforcement of requirements for safe exists, fire resistive walls, portable fire extinguishers or a fire alarm system.

They cite, moreover, that there was but one exit from the third story, and that the walls enclosing the light or air shaft were of combustible material without any fire resistive rating.

High School Pupils Are Guests at YMCA Dinner

Among the teen-age guests at Wednesday's YMCA banquet at the Hotel Emerson were the following Hi-Y's (reading clockwise from the rear): Janet Burke, Lee Saunders, Diane Talbott, Henry Smith, Richard Saunders, Melvin Goode and Helen Anderson.

600 From Metropolitan Y Area Mark Founder's Day

Some 600 persons, representing all branches of the metropolitan YMCA, gathered in the Hotel Emerson ballroom, Wednesday night, to hear Harold Sibley, president of the National Council of YMCA's, deliver the annual Founder's Day address.

Speaking on "Christian Influence on World Leadership," he pointed out to the diners in beautiening tones the job the YMCA has done in rehabilitating the war-torn areas of the world.

He also lauded the 54 YMCA camps that were established in Europe after the last war to care for 800,000 displaced persons.

Calls USO "a Marvel"

Mr. Sibley, who was the wartime president of the national USO called it "one of the marvels of democracy" and thanked the YMCA for putting life and leadership into the organization.

"Our freedom is unique," he continued, "but today it is being challenged by Communism. The people must accept responsibility. We must develop leadership on the voluntary basis.

"To develop leadership men must have the opportunity to try it out — for this purpose, serves the Y."

The program commemorating the 100th anniversary of the founding of the YMCA started at 6:30 p.m. with a short talk by Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro, which was followed by the banquet dinner.

Gerald S. Wise, president of the Baltimore Association of YMCA's, in his annual report spoke highly of the half million dollar improvement on the Druid Hill YMCA.

He also spoke of the plan to establish a full-fledged branch in Turner's Station by the beginning of next year.

Branches Well Represented

Among the branches represented at the banquet were Druid Hill and Morgan State College. The Turner Station Hi-Y, the Metropolitan Community Hi-Y, and the Sparrows Point Hi-Y were also represented.

Persons present included: Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. J. Theodore Wolfe, Melvin Brett-Goode, Henry Booth, Jack Walker and Fred Wallett.
