TWO OLD SAILORS.

Why One of Them Ignored Executive Officer Dewey's Commands.

In his autobiography George Dewey, the hero of Manila bay, records that Farragut's methods were always simple. There was a saying that his principal place for filing papers was his coat pocket. Generally he wrote his orders himself, perhaps with his knee or the ship's rail as a rest. The author recalls that one day when he was writing he looked up and said, "Now, how in the devil do you spell Appalachicola? Some of these educated young fellows from Annapolis must know." The author continues:

"A man who had such an important command could hardly have been more democratic. One night I had given orders for a thorough cleaning of the ship the next morning. I was awake very early, for it was stiflingly hot. Five o'clock came, and I heard no sound of the holystones on the deck, so I went above to find out why my orders were not obeyed, and my train of mind for the moment was cut by that of the disciplinarian. There was no activity at all on deck. I looked around for the officer of the deck. It was an old New England whaler, brown as a buccaneer, who had shipped for the war from the merchant service. I recollect that he wore small gold rings in his ears, a custom with some of the old fashioned merchant sailors who had traveled the world over. I found him seated up in the hammock netting, where it was cool, with Farragut at his side.

"'Why aren't you cleaning ship?' I asked.

"'I think I am to blame,' said Farragut, with his pleasant smile. 'We two veterans have been swapping yarns about sailing ship days.'

"The old whaler did not see how he could leave Farragut when Farragut wanted to talk, and inwardly perhaps he did not fail to enjoy his position as superior to the young executive officer's reprimands."

EARLY QUAKERESSES.

Mary Fisher the First to Be Publicly Flogged in England.

No feature of the early Quaker movement was so surprising to contemporary historians as the prominent part taken by women of all classes and positions in spreading its message. "They were not a whit behind the men," remarks one seventeenth century chronicler, "in courage or in contempt to material obstacles, imitating them not out of a womanly precipitancy and boldness, but upon a determinate advice * * * changing, as it were, their sex and being transmuted from women to men."

A staid matron named Elizabeth Hooton was the first to be "convinced" by Fox's teaching and became in the year 1649 the first woman preacher among the Quakers. Ann Downer, the young daughter of a clergyman, carried the message to London, gathering round her the nucleus of that Society of City Friends which grew to be the model and rallying ground for other towns and nations. Margaret, the wife of Judge Fell, was the "nursing mother" of the infant church—the center of all its activities, the helper and the ultimate appeal in all its distresses.

Mary Fisher, a servant girl from Yorkshire, heads the long list of heroic sufferers in England who were publicly flogged for their religion. She, too, with an older woman, was the pioneer who brought the Friends' doctrine to New England in 1656 and tasted the first fruits of the persecution which was meted out to her fellow believers, even to the extremes of mutilation and death, by those who were themselves the survivors of the Mayflower.—Mabel R. Brailsford in Englishwoman.

Musical Tones In Architecture.

It has long been believed that each of the mammoth buildings of the world will vibrate in response to some special musical tone. Architects believe they have found the tones for such famous structures as the cathedral at Cologne, Notre Dame in Paris and St. Paul's in London. Certainly it is true that each of these buildings returns to the ear of the listener that one tone intensified and augmented to a surprising extent. The corollary statement that this keynote, if sounded long enough and with sufficient force, would bring disaster has never been proved.—Christian Herald.

Human Skin as a Polisher.

I had always supposed that the chamois possessed the skin best adapted for polishing purposes, but recently in a leading jeweler's shop I learned otherwise. Nothing, it seems, can impart such a luster to plate as the human skin, and all the best articles are polished, quite literally, by hand—rubbed gently by the lower arch of the hand at the base of the thumb. "We keep a girl to do nothing else," said my informant, and I reflected that I had discovered a new industry and a new definition of "palm oil."—London Opinion.

Who Gets the Medals?

"I understand that you have a fine track team here," said the visitor to the guide who was showing him through the college. "What individual holds most of the medals?"

The guide pondered. "Well, sir," he said, "I guess it is the pawnbroker downtown."—Exchange.

No Wonder.

"You are always talking about the high cost of living."

"Well, that's about all I hear at home."

"From your wife?"

"No, from my wife's father. We are living with him, you know."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Strong on Bills.

Winkle—My wife would make a good congressman. Hinkle—Why? Winkle—She's always introducing bills into the house.—Judge.

Repentance is a goddess and the preserver of those who have erred.—Julian.

NATIONAL TASTES IN EGGS.

The Spaniard Boils His a Minute and Then Drinks Them Down.

How do you eat an egg?

To a stranger the manner in which you eat this part of your breakfast may indicate your nationality. Nearly every nationality has some especial way of cooking and serving eggs for breakfast, and, quite unconsciously, the average person's order of eggs will reveal his nationality.

Americans are said to prefer poached eggs. The foreigner when traveling who sees a man order a couple of eggs poached on toast almost immediately jumps to the conclusion that only an American could have given the order. Hard boiled eggs, served whole, are another American dish, and "deviled eggs," where the yolk is mixed with various condiments, is strictly American. Fried eggs, too, are more common in America than elsewhere.

Hard boiled eggs are eaten in Germany, too, but they are usually prepared in a glass, chopped with butter, salt and pepper. The German likes his soft boiled eggs very soft, indeed, and breaks the contents into a china cup, eating them from the cup. The "egg cup" is an invention of Germany, but the German cups are large enough to contain several eggs. "Sour eggs" are eaten in Germany too.

The average Englishman likes his egg boiled for three and a half minutes, no more and no less. He is particular about the time. He prefers a small egg cup that holds one egg, the shell of which is not removed. The Englishman then removes the top of the shell. Bread and butter, instead of the toast of the American, is eaten with the Englishman's eggs.

The Frenchman removes the top of his egg, too, but then he stirs the contents vigorously and adds bits of bread and butter to the egg. Sometimes squares of bread are dipped into the egg.

No Spaniard would dream of letting an egg boil three minutes—that is, if he prefers his eggs prepared strictly in the native fashion. The egg is allowed to boil only one minute and is then broken open and the contents poured into a glass, the real Spanish epicure drinking it off as if it were water.

In Italy eggs, to be perfectly prepared are started on their boiling by being put into cold water. When the water comes to a boil the egg is done. It is eaten on a large plate with bread.—Chicago Tribune.

Wealth of Detail.

Former Governor Proctor Knott of Kentucky used to tell a story of a native who appeared as a witness in a mountain murder trial where Knott was an attorney. The mountaineer took the stand, chewing tobacco, and gave his name, his age and his place of residence. Then one of the lawyers asked him to describe his first meeting with a certain person who figured in the case.

"Well," drawled the native, "he rid through our place a-straddle of a dun colored critter a-blowin' of a fox huntin' horn and a-wearin' of a bearskin overcoat, and hit was hot weather. I axed him if the critter he were a-ridin' were a geldin' or a 'riginal, which he 'lowed it were and driv on."—Saturday Evening Post.

WOMEN ARE BAD LOSERS.

That Is Why, It Is Said, Stock Brokers Fight Shy of Them.

Nobody loves a stock broker, least of all his customers. This affords a touching, if somewhat subtle, reason why he does not want any women speculators on his books.

There is another reason. I hate to mention it, but you wring it from me. Women are not good losers. At times, under stress of great speculative losses, I am told they become lachrymose. The one stock broker of my acquaintance who catered to women speculators is now in a madhouse. They were all long of Steel at 50 the time it broke to 8, and all the water squeezed out of it in that decline was wept back into it by these women. It was an economic disaster.

Stock brokers carry home with them all the troubles of their customers, and this poor fellow was no exception. He used to lie awake all night picking at the counterpane and grieving over beauty in distress. Finally he went crazy. They have given him a set of stock broker's books up there in the asylum, and it would break your heart to see him. Jeanne d'Arc and Harriet Beecher Stowe are long of Copper; Catherine de Medici and Mrs. Browning are short of Rubber; Maria Theresa and George Eliot are pyramiding in Steel. Every now and then somebody is stopped out, and then there are dreadful times. Charlotte Corday's, Cleopatra's, Mme. de Stael's and the mother of the Gracchi's margins are exhausted. He calls to them for more. They weep. I cannot go on. Women have much to answer for.—William Van Antwerp in New York Post.

Victoria's Harmless Cosmetic.

Douglas Jerrold, the English humorist, was prolific of puns in conversation and in correspondence. Professor Brander Matthews in the Century quotes one of his best.

In a letter written just after Queen Victoria had been fired at Jerrold declared that he had seen her out driving and added that "she looked very well and—as is not always the case with women—none the worse for powder."

Good System.

"Old man, you always look bright and cheerful."

"Think so?"

"You certainly always look cheerful. Have you no troubles?"

"Yes; I have troubles, but I never sympathize with myself."—Washington Herald.

Feminine Repartee.

"Do you like my new hat?"

"I didn't like it well enough to buy it yesterday when the milliner offered it to me."

"Oh, I see. Naturally you were obliged to take a less expensive one."—Detroit Free Press.
