The Great Marshal Ney.

A recent English book about Marshal Ney, Napoleon's heroic lieutenant, "the bravest of the brave," brings out some interesting facts. This Frenchman was really a German. He was born at Saarlouis, now in Prussia and then and always German. He spoke only German as a child. He was red haired, with a wide face and round blue eyes. Five feet eight inches in height, he had a short body and long legs. His comrades called him "le rougeot," which was equivalent to "carrots" or "bricktop." He was forty-six years old at Waterloo. So was Napoleon. So was Wellington. Marshal Ney was a man who was trained to the hardships of a workman's life. His father was a cooper, and in his boyhood work in his father's business he was accustomed to toil and exposure. This enabled him to sleep placidly in the snow on the return from Moscow, wrapped in his cloak, "with the starved, ragged soldiers of the grand army keeping guard and the Cossacks prowling around in the darkness."

The Statistical Fiend.

We all know the bore that begins a sentence, "Statistics show." He can tell you how the daily flow of beer in St. Louis compares with the amount of Mississippi water that passes the city in twenty-four hours. He can state the tonnage of all ocean greyhounds, bulldogs, Pomeranians and curs of low degree. He knows how many men were slain in battles from that of Abancay or Abouklr to that of Zurich or Zellchow. He speaks as one having authority, and even those who run at his approach shake the head solemnly: "If old Augur says so it must be so." What a relief it is to find Sir William Ramsay admitting that the most accurate of statistics may lie! Some time ago the statement was made that 50 per cent of the total abstainers in a regiment stationed in India had died within a year. It turned out that the whole number was two, and one, while taking his morning walk, had been eaten by a tiger.—Philip Hale in Boston Herald.

A Cardboard Planet.

One remarkable achievement of Sir William Herschel was in connection with the planet Saturn. He had arranged to erect his telescope at Windsor castle to enable Queen Charlotte and the ladies of the court to see the wonders of the ringed planet, but on the evening arranged for the observation great banks of clouds covered the sky. However, he explained that that would not matter, and after the instrument had been carefully directed the queen and her attendants looked through it and saw the great planet and its marvelous rings quite distinctly. Herschel, it seems, had expected bad weather and during the day had made a cardboard model of the Saturnian system and erected it in the grounds, a lamp at the back providing the necessary illumination.—Westminster Gazette.

Overshadowing the Rothschilds.

One hundred years ago the Rothschilds were the only great international bankers. They were able to finance the need of nations, but the money they loaned was chiefly the money representing their colossal family fortune. Today there are a dozen great international banking firms, each of which is larger than the Rothschilds were a century ago and whose aggregate loaning power reaches an amount which would then have been almost inconceivable. There are now a thousand banks where then there was one, each representing the concentrated loaning power of thousands of people. They offer vast credit because the funds of the people, loaned through them, reach vast sums.—S. W. Straus in National Magazine.

What They Knew of Luther.

Of the painful lack of general information shown by the college student one instance will suffice. In a written test (whether in a college for young men or women is immaterial) the question was asked, "What was the secret of Luther's success as a reformer?" The question was left unanswered by the majority of the class. Some frankly avowed they did not know who Luther was. Some confounded the name with that of Luther Burbank. One answer which greatly horrified the professors was this: "The secret of Luther's success was his diet of worms."—Suburban Life.

Love and Hate.

Love once more; perhaps this time you may succeed in being loved back again.

Enemies are only useful as long as you are rising. Once at the top you must do away with them by making them your friends.—Epigrams of Queen Elisabeth (Carmen Sylva).

Giving Up.

"I gave up smoking to please Rosa and drinking to please Nellie."

"What did you give up to please Marie?"

"Nothing as yet. She wants me to give up the two other girls."—Pittsburgh Post.

Defines Economy.

"What is the meaning of economy?"

"Economy, my son, is going without something you do want in case some day you should want something which you probably won't want."—Exchange.

Their Class.

"What are the kind they call fugitive poets?"

"I suppose they are the ones whose style is chased."—Exchange.

A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance.—Proverbs.

Machiavelli.

Nicolo Machiavelli, from whose surname has been coined a synonym for treacherous craft, was a writer of nervous and concise Italian. He took high rank as a dramatist, his comedy of "Mandragola" being pronounced inferior only to the work of Voltaire. Leo X. admired it so much that he had it played before him in Rome. His book on the "Art of War" won the praise of so competent a judge as Frederick the Great of Prussia. His policy in statesmanship embodied in his work "The P..." was the direct antithesis of ... sentiment t...
