GETTING ON THE STAGE.

Dangers That Beset New Eggs in the Vaudeville Basket.

The most amazing thing to a theatrical manager is the utter lack of comprehension on the part of applicants of what professional work really means.

When I was writing vaudeville sketches I used to get letters from young fellows in country towns who wanted to go into vaudeville. For some unaccountable reason they figured out that that was the easiest way to break into the entertainment business. As a matter of fact, they were choosing the very toughest end of it all. In vaudeville there is no stage manager to tell one what to do and how to do it. He must rely entirely upon himself. Furthermore, he must do his own booking, get his own transfer agent to take care of his baggage, negotiate his own railroading and even pack his own properties. In fact, he has a thousand and one troubles to divert his mind from his proper business. It never seems to dawn upon the aspirant that it's much better to get into a great organization, where there's somebody to attend to every problem for him and where he has a chance to learn the details of stagecraft.

A clever vaudeville man, to begin with, must have a good act, and if he be unknown he must know how to talk his act to the managers. If he employs an agent he is at a disadvantage, because these persons work for the management of the theaters. Furthermore, the vaudeville man must remember that he comes out on to the stage with nothing behind him, practically no properties, no chorus girls to divert attention. The eyes of the people are centered on him. He must do it all. It is by far the most difficult business in the world to succeed at, unless one is very talented.—George M. Cohan, in the New York Sun.

SCARED THE LION.

Bravery and Daring Displayed by an African Woman.

In "Hunting the Elephant In Africa" the author, Captain C. H. Stigand, in telling some lion stories, admits that there is a certain thrill in connection with the king of the jungle. The Somalis say that a lion makes you jump three times—first, when you hear him roar; secondly, when you unexpectedly meet his spoor, and thirdly, when you first sight him. They say that even a bold man is thus frightened three times by a lion, but after the sudden shock of seeing him is over he is no longer afraid. And in this connection he tells us a good story of female heroism:

"At a village near Fort Mangoche, also in Nyasaland, a man was sitting one night at the door of his hut drumming while his wife was cooking food inside. The hut was an isolated one, being several hundred yards from the rest of the village.

"Suddenly the woman heard the man call out, 'A lion has got me.' She took a burning fagot from the fire, ran out and smacked the lion in the face. The astonished animal let go, and she dragged her husband into the hut and hastily put up the poles which form the door. The man died a few minutes after, and the woman sat there with the dead body.

"Presently the lion returned and scratched gently on the door. This he repeated several times till it got on the woman's nerves. At last she could stand it no longer, so she took another fagot from the fire, unbarred the door and fled to the village, leaving the dead man. The lion then walked into the hut and took him."

How We Got the Gas Jet.

Possibly very few people know that we owe the ordinary gas jet to the accidental use of a woman's thimble. After the dinner of the British Commercial Gas association Professor Vivian Lewes told how Clegg of Redruth used to burn the illuminant straight from the open pipe and turn it off by plugging the pipe with some clay. Upon one occasion his lump of clay was missing, and, picking up his wife's thimble, he put this on top of the pipe. Much to his surprise, the gas escaped through small holes which had been worn by the constant use of the needle, small burning jets of gas resulting. From this Professor Lewes traced the evolution of the gas jet.—London Globe.

Surf Birds.

That birds of the family termed surf birds in the Hawaiian Islands should leave that paradise of the Pacific to go and rear their young in the tundras of Alaska would seem to many an extraordinary proceeding, yet the turnstone and the black bellied plover and the Pacific golden plover make the long journey of about 4,000 miles thither annually.

Classified the Family.

"Everybody in our family's some kind of an animal," said Bobby to the amazed lady visitor.

"What nonsense!" she exclaimed.

"Well," replied Bobby, "mother's a dear, my baby sister is mother's little lamb, I'm the kid and dad's the goat."—Dundee Advertiser

Shooting Through Glass.

A rifle bullet may be fired through a pane of glass, making a hole the size of the ball without cracking the glass. If the glass be suspended by a thread it will make no difference, and the thread will not even vibrate.—London Telegraph.

Poor Eve.

Eve (in the garden)—Adam, I've got to have another dress. Adam—Eve, you're the most resolute woman I've ever known. You're always turning over a new leaf.—London Tatler.

Where the Time Is Lost.

"Do you think we'd save much time by leaving the 'dear sir' off our letters?"

"Not much. Where time is lost is in the hesitation you feel about writing 'yours respectfully' to some people."—Washington Star.

Why Did She Think So?

"No," said the mistress of the boarding house, "we cannot accommodate you, I am sorry to say. We only take in single gentlemen."

"Goodness!" said Mr. Warden. "What makes you think I'm t[illegible]?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

LIFE WITH THE ESKIMOS.

Their Flesh Strewn Ice Huts Resemble Slaughter Houses.

My first view of the interior of Uck-Gluck's arctic residence would have been a disheartening one to a tender foot. To me, after nine hours of freezing, nothing had ever seemed quite so welcome and cheering as the hollowed out stone in which a liberal quantity of seal oil and moss was burning. (The moss was used as a wick, and so answered the purpose of both lamp and stove.) Three children were crowded together at the end of the igloo staring silently. Uck-Gluck's kooner or woman stood with an infant in her arms, grinning broadly and cheerfully at us.

The room was about eighteen feet in diameter and was a veritable shambles. Uck-Gluck possessed a reputation as being a great hunter, and he had been especially successful of late. Masses of flesh lay strewn all about the floor. There seemed apparently to be no effort or desire to keep it in one or two piles. It lay everywhere. There was the whole carcass of a walrus, cut up and strewn about, and almost directly at the head of the raised "platform" of ice which formed a bed for the whole family there was a great pile of entrails, preserved for dog meat. The walls of the igloo were spattered with blood, and weapons of the chase lay everywhere. These included spears and harpoons, long knives and a rifle that fired powder and ball.

A large quantity of meat, killed earlier in the season, had arrived at the age and stage where it possessed a very bad odor. This was not for the dogs. Uck-Gluck and his family would have fed them the fresh meat before they would have sacrificed this particular pile, which was just reaching that mellow and ripe condition which strongly appeals to their palate.

Bernard and Outta came into the igloo a few moments later, and so delighted were Uck-Gluck and his wife to learn that both of the kablunaks or white men were to eat and sleep under their roof that they disported themselves like children, dancing about and laughing and chattering in their own tongue. Bernard told me that in his pleasure Uck-Gluck was saying that in return for the honor the white men were showing him he would give the kablunaks the greatest hunting that white men had ever had.

As we had come to hunt, and as Uck-Gluck was noted all along the coast for his prowess, this was highly satisfactory. Bernard brought in his oil stove, and we began at once to prepare our supper, as we had eaten nothing but frozen meat since morning. We fried our own deer meat, heated a number of ship biscuit, a can of corn and a can of tomatoes and made about a gallon of tea. Uck-Gluck and his family accepted the tea and biscuits as great delicacies, but only Ishya, his wife, took advantage of the stove to cook her meat. With their knives the Eskimos cut off chunks from the meat strewn about and devoured it raw, laughing and chuckling as they feasted. One of the children, a boy of seven or eight, ate a strip of pure fat that must have weighed nearly a pound.—James Oliver Curwood in Leslie's.

Shattered His Idol.

Swinburne's admiration for the scenery inspired the walk which every morning, wet or fine, he took across Putney common. It led also to visitors to see the poet walk.

One modest admirer, says the London Chronicle, traveled far to catch a glimpse of Swinburne in the flesh and, having read of the poet's habits, visited the hostelry at which he called each morning in passing. There sat the literary demigod reading the Pink 'Un, a flashy, low grade paper. But worse followed.

Said the pilgrim to the girl behind the bar, "I suppose you know that is Swinburne, the great poet?" Came the answer: "Yes; I've heard so. But he isn't much good to us. He only drinks beer."

He Missed It.

After the services were over one of the congregation turned to his wife and said, "On my way to church I picked up a button and put it in my change pocket, where I had a quarter."

"Gracious, my dear!" anticipated his wife, very much horrified. "And you dropped it into the collection basket by mistake?"

"No, confound it," replied her husband, "I put in the quarter!"—Magazine of Fun.

Imagination.

"They tell me that it is imagination that keeps the doctors busy," said the patient.

"I guess that's right," replied the physician. "I'm kept pretty busy making out bills which I foolishly imagine are going to be paid some day."—Yonkers Statesman.

Diet For Workers.

After exhaustive researches in Paris a famous French scientist has recommended a diet equally divided between meats and vegetables as the best for working people.

Couldn't Scream.

"I was afraid you'd scream when I kissed you."

"I didn't dare. Mamma was in the next room and would have heard me."—Houston Post.

The youth who does not look up will look down, and the spirit that does not soar is destined perhaps to grovel.—Disraeli.

Railway Trains In England.

I can prove in a moment by any traveler that our trains are infinitely more luxurious than the trains in England. But still, and notwithstanding, I say the English railway service is better. Why? Because it's more human; it's more considerate. You aren't driven and urged to step lively and called at in loud, harsh voices and made to feel that you are being tolerated aboard something that was never made for you at all, but for the employees of the company. In England the trains are run for the people, not the people for the trains.—From Theodore Dreiser's "A Traveler at Forty."
