State Teachers' Association Plans 83rd Annual Convention

When the Maryland State Teachers Association holds its 83rd annual convention in Baltimore, Nov. 2 to 4, they will hear Robert S. Moyer and Dr. Regis L. Boyle as principal speakers.

Mr. Moyer, education writer for the Baltimore Evening Sun, will speak at the Maryland-Scholastic Press Advisers Association section meeting. His topic will be "Important Range Objectives for Student Publications."

He will also speak to the correspondents of the Maryland Teacher, official publication of the Maryland State Teachers Association, at a luncheon meeting Nov. 18, at the Hotel Stafford.

Holds NEWA Award

His topic will be "Interpreting Education News." Mr. Moyer holds the 1949 award from the National Education Writers Association, for his interpretation of education news for his readers.

This session will be held at the Baltimore City College, at 2:30 p.m. Nov. 3. Headquarters for the teachers' association is 1101 N. Calvert St.

On the same day, Dr. Boyle, adviser of The Easterner, pupil newspaper of the Eastern High School, Washington, and a member of the summer faculty of Catholic University, will discuss "Staff Organization-How it Functions."

Want One of These Precious Tots in Your Home?

These little tots are ward's of the Family and Children's Society of aBltimore, who offers adoption service to the residents of the city and surrounding areas. The society is a Community Chest beneficiary agency.

FAMILY AND CHILDREN'S SOCIETY:

Community Chest Money at Work

(Editor's Note: This is the third of a series of articles to inform the public how the Community Chest dollars are spent.)

Since sound family life is vital to children, to adults, to the community and to the nation, the Family and Children's Society, a nonsectarian Community Chest agency, is a most important public welfare organization.

The society offers aid in several phases of family life, one of which is adoptions.

Why do people hesitate to adopt a baby? They say they want one. The home needs one. The children need homes.

Do they fear the questioning—the legal procedure? Habits that may arise in the child that won't fit in their homes? The long wait for placements?

Understanding Helps

After discussing adoptions with the agency's head workers, it was found that, people resent questioning to a degree. They don't seem to realize how important it is that the society have their full background for better placement.

Achild is place in a home with the background, as near to the child's potential background, as possible. This puts a protection on both child and parents.

Legal procedure—the bug-a-boo to many, is so deftly handled by the society, it is hardly recognized by the prospective parents.

This emphasizes the need for having the proper information. With this information in hand, the parents are spared seeing lawyers, going into courts and even knowing the names of the former parents.

Take Chance on Habits

As to habits, or what the child may turn out to be, Psychiatrists agree that this is a guess. Children of highly intelligent parents oft times are idiots.

The society tries to avoid this as far as is humanly possible by not releasing a child until it has had all the tests that will assure, under normal circumstances, a healthy, sound child.

So in the long run its the parents who benefit by the seeming inconvenience.

Legal Requirements Cited

Requirements: While the society sets up certain rules and regulations, there are also Maryland State laws which must be adhered to.

Interviews Confidential

Hence, couples must be married. People will over 50 are not considered for foster parents. Persons must be of Protestant faith, must have adequate home facilities and income and must be residents of Maryland.

By income, the society does not mean wealth. It only means steady income. Long terms of employment are favorable.

The society's staff is interracial, all interviews are in strictest confidence. Applicants may select their own interviewer.

Another service offered by the society is counseling, in which experienced caseworkers help troubled people out of their difficulties.

Such situations as problems of old age, unmarried parenthood, young people separated from their families, broken homes, where one parent is gone, and the other needs help in doing a double job, are handled by the agency.

Housekeeper Service Furnished

Housekeeper service: Through this service, trained housekeeprs or "mothr substitutes" are provided to take care of the children and the home during the absence of the mother, usually because of illness.

The society pays as much of the costs of this service as circumstances permit.

Though usually short-lived, goes to minors, over 16, who are not members of a legally responsible family; unmarried mothers who wish help in their planning, marginal income families and individuals, who by the meeting of a special need, are able to improve their economic, physical or social conditions.

Referral information to other community resources are give. The society is located at 204 W. Lanvale St. Rember, its a member of the Community Chest of Baltimore, a Red Feather agency.

Settlement Out in Golf Case

The Park Board, this week, gently but firmly rejected an offer by the Monumental Golf Course to seek an out-of-court solution to the problem of municipal golf course use.

In a letter to Harry A. Cole, attorney for the Monumental Club, the Board said it was "studying the whole problem of racial segregation in recreation" and did not feel a discussion on the golf problem should be held at this time.

Hearing Off Indefinitely

Since last August, the Monumental Club, through Mr. Cole, has been seeking a conference with the board on the golf course issue.

The club was promised a hearing in September. This was postponed until October, and last week the proposed hearing was postponed indefinitely.

The Monumental Club contends that a settlement of the golf course use controversy can be made out of court more easily and quicker than through litigation.

Will Plan Future Steps

At present, certain days are set aside for colored golfers to use the municipal links and white golfers play on other days.

The Monumental Club wants the courses open to all golfers without regard to race. At its next meeting the club will decide what steps are to be taken in the future.

Esther McCready Pays Own Way

Miss Esther McCready, nursing school student at the University of Maryland, is repaying to the NAACP the money advanced to her for necessary expenses.

The NAACP sponsored and financed the court case which resulted in Miss McCready's admittance to the school despite the university's attempt to send her to Meharry Medical College instead.

In repaying the expense money advanced to her, the young woman told Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, NAACP president, "I wish to thank you and all the NAACP members for all the help you have given me. I will conscientiously do my best to justify the confidence which your members placed in me."

Tenants' League Plans Mass Rally

Protests Heeded by Zoning Board

Refuses to Allow Repair Shop Near Windsor Ave.

The Board of Municipal and Zoning Appeals this week turned down the application of a non-resident who sought to convert three garages for auto repairs in the rear of the 2200 block of Windsor Ave.

At a public hearing on Tuesday afternoon in City Hall, residents of the area appeared to protest the move by the applicant, Abraham Bloombaum, 2016 Bryant Avnue.

Represented by Josiah Henry, attorney, the residents told the Board that rezoning the area from a residential to commercial to allow auto repairs in the garages would depreciate the value of their properties.

Termed Undesirable

James H. Murphy, AFRO circulation manager who lives at 2209 Windsor, said that oil and grease from auto repairs and increased traffic in the narrow alley where the garages are located would create a nuisance.

Milton R. Branson, school principal who lives at 2331 Windsor Ave., emphasized that if the request was granted the way would be open for additional undesirable commercial properties.

Mr. Henry pointed out that colored residents of the area who now constitute 85 percent of the population is anxious to keep the neighborhood residential.

Applicant Non-Resident

The applicant, Mr. Bloombaum, and his daughter, Miss Bessie R. Bloombaum, testified they had owned the property for 20 years and that an auto repair shop in 3 of the 27 garages in the area would not create a nuisance. The same view was expressed by Frank Polock, who resides on Reisterstown Rd. and rents the property for auto repairs.

Residents of the area who attended the hearing besides Messrs. Branson and Murphy are: Mrs Milton Ambey, A. C. Warrington, Everett Lane, Mrs. Ruth Lewis, Mrs. Elva Woolridge, Mrs. Bettye M. Phillips and Harold Jennifer.

Beauregard Ave. Protest

Also appearing before the board on the same day were residents of the 4400 block of Beauregard Ave. in Wilson Park, who sought clarification as to building plans of a firm which is about to construct two semi-detached two story homes in the area.

When it was made clear that the new homes would not be construed flush to existing homes on the site, the protest was withdrawn. Spokesman for this group was Mrs. Annie Martin of 4411 Beauregard Ave.

William C. Bloom, chairman of the board presided at the hearing. Other Zoning Board members in attendance were: Edward Arnel, James K. Cullen, Herman Hamerman, Vincent L. Palmisano and Golbert D. Rubin.

GOVERNOR ORDERS PROBE OF PA. AVENUE GAMBLING

Governor, Mayor Want Vice Probed in Lower Avenue Area

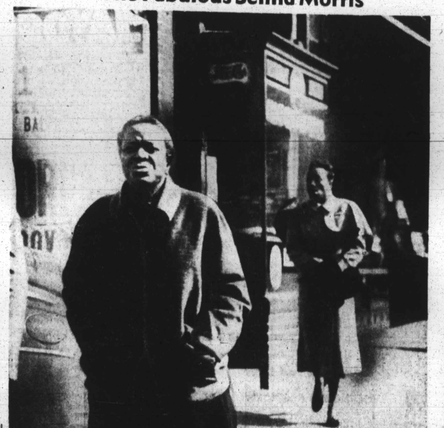
The Fabulous Selina Morris



Gambler fleeing from place operated by Selina Morris, above, at 589 Oxford St. was shot and killed by Patrolman Jerome Glass. Woman in background is a passerby.

'Move Glass,' Asks NAACP; 'I'll Investigate,' Says Lane

Answering an NAACP request been shot and beaten for removal from the force of Officer Jerome Glass, Governor Lane said Monday that he will order an investigation of the police methods.

Officer Glass was brought before the State's Attorney today to answer charges of killing James Hargrove, 27, his second victim within a year.

Correspondence between the NAACP and Governor follows:

"The Association has been attempting to protect the citizens of Baltimore against the various police brutality. We have certainly been investigating these cases and often as House we felt involved real evil and has been involved in any number of cases where men have signed by Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, president; and, Robert B. Watts, NAACP attorney. A telegram expressing similar sentiments was dispatched four days later.

Governor's Answer

"This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of Oct. 19 co-signed by Mr. Robert B. Watts to express your disapproval of the police methods of Officer Jerome Glass of the Northwestern District.

"I appreciate your calling this

People Aroused

"In most cases, the victim has been guilty only of disturbing the peace. The people are aroused and are constantly calling on us to do something about this officer.

"We feel that Officer Glass is temperamentally unfit for the job. He uses his gun in cases where he should use his head. There are many officers who have been on the force for years who have never had to use their weapons and certainly none has used them as Officer Glass.

"We are trying to decrease the crime rate, but it can only be done by creating respect for the law. Officer Glass is creating disrespect and fear. Even the merchants on his beat call and ask us to do something about him.

"We feel that a letter from you will help us have this man dismissed." This letter, dated Oct. 19, was

Glass Freed

Following a 30-minute hearing this afternoon (Friday) during which six witnesses testified, Officers Jerome Glass was exonerated in the gun-slaying of James (Kid Boy) Hargrove.

The witnesses testified that "Kid Boy" had a gun when he was shot by the policeman on Oct. 17, following a disturbance which began in a house at 589 W. Oxford St. The officer was called by Mrs. Selina Morris. Witnesses repeatedly referred to the house as a "club

Vice Operates Wide Open

By JOE BROWN

Prostitution is practiced openly on Lower Pennsylvania Ave. from Hoffman Street to St. Mary Street, I learned Wednesday night.

Although Northwestern police station is located about two blocks away and policemen are patrolling the area, the "scarlet women" plly their trade unmolested.

Even though, Wednesday night was considered a "slow night" and comparatively few people were on the streets, I tallied at least 20 women, whom I believed to be engaged in this illicit practice.

During the stroll I was approached by seven women who were soliciting. The first woman, short, brownskinned, whispered "Do you want to have a little fun?" I encountered her between Preston and Hoffman Sts. on the eastside of Pennsylvania Ave.

Continuing down Pennsylvania Ave., although I passed several women loitering in the doorways I was not approached until passing Orchard street walking toward St. Mary's.

"Let's Talk"

This time the woman said: "Let me talk to you."

I stopped and she asked "Would you like to have a nice time?"

I crossed Pennsylvania Avenue and walked North and stopped at a store. Loiterers hang out near this spot. Cut rate wine (known to some as "Sneaky Pete) is sold in this area.

Between West Biddle and Preston, I was approached by another girl, who passed the remark "How about a little sport?"

Continuing towards Hoffman Street, another woman asked: "Are you looking for me, "beautiful?"

Beer Popular

On Wednesday night, one of the largest spots in the area was the closed. A gilded sign in the window stated that "the spot was "off limits to servicemen."

I asked a policeman why. He remarked that he did not know it

Bishop Fields Under Arrest

Whether signs should be posted on the Havre de Grace Masonic building led to a disturbance that resulted in the arrest, Tuesday, of "Daddy" Bishop Ralph F. Fields, radio evangelist.

He is charged with striking 79 year-old Alexander Whitfield, a Masonic lodge official, who objected to the signs which advertised one of Bishop Fields's services.

Now free under $500 bail on a charge of assault, and battery, the Bishop will appear Monday morning (Friday) in Havre de Grace Justice Court.

Drove Up for Service

The dispute occurred when Bishop Fields and about 30 followers drove to Havre de Grace to conduct a religious service in the Chesapeake Lodge Masonic building on Girard Ave.

Earlier, someone had posted signs on the building advertising the services. Mr. Whitfield, a trustee of the fraternal order, removed the signs.

When Bishop Fields arrived and asked what had become of the signs, Mr. Whitfield allegedly replies, "They are to be no signs on this building."

There are two versions of what happened next:

Mr. Whitfield contends that the bishop cursed him, pushed, and struck him.

On the other hand, Bishop Fields denies hitting the elderly man, but admits pushing him, kinda playfully.

After the altercation, Bishop Fields and his group began parking for the return trip to Baltimore. Meanwhile police had been called.

While officers were inside talking with lodge members, Bishop

Chissells' Next Trip Abroad to Be Easier

Dr. and Mrs. R. Garland Chissell, back from a summer in Europe, declare that their next trip abroad will not be so strenuous.

"We tried to do too much at once," Dr. Chissell said.

"For example, we spent four days in Rome. We could see Rome in four days, four weeks would be better."

Mr. and Mrs. Chissell was accompanied by their son, Garland, Jr., a student at Johns Hopkins University.

"It was better in Paris and still better in Italy, but the continent is enormous between Europe trying to recover from war and the U.S."

Selina at 55 Is 'Power' On Lower Avenue

Back in the days when part of Greenwillow St. was known as Union St., a buxom lass from Princess Anne was singing on street corners with a quartet—today she is power in the lower Pennsylvania Ave. area.

Selina Morris came from the Eastern Shore when she was two years old. That was 53 years ago.

Around 1915, before the first World War warmed up, oldtimers remember Selina and three other young women who were the "toast of the street corner quartets."

Back in those days, folks down in the bottom (Pennsylvania Ave. below Dolphin St.) used to park Daly's Y which was then located in the 900 block, while Selina sister, Anna Morris, entertained as a singer and dancer. Selina's son, Cliff Morris, is a night-club singer and entertainer.

Knew Neighbors

The Morrises lived on Pendle Court, near Greenwillow St. and knew almost every one of the neighbors in houses prowling on the old cobbled-stone streets.

When Selina grew into womanhood, she moved into a house located at Greenwillow St. and Pennsylvania Ave.

"There's Selina's place," the little school poets would whisper.

In a short span of time, Selina became the Belpend of the Avenue.

Just to see her on the street was better than an all-day sucker to the curious youngsters.

"See, there she is—there she goes."

They would rush home and tell their parents, "We saw Selina."

By the roaring twenties, Selina was accepted as the undisputed boss of the area. Most of her cohorts agreed that at that time, "she could do no wrong."

A policeman recalls that while

Killing by Officer Is Cause of Probe

The recent police killing near an Oxford St. house, just off Pennsylvania Ave., where men were playing cards, has set off a probe of gambling activities in the area.

The house at 589 Oxford St., is padlocked following the Oct. 17 slaying of James Hargrove by Officer Jerome Glass, who answered a trouble call from Mrs. Selina Morris at that address.

Mrs. Lillie M. Jackson, NAACP president, reported Monday that the place was closed down after she telephoned a complaint to Chief Inspector Joseph M. Wallace.

She said she told the inspector that irate residents were in the NAACP office complaining that wide open gambling was going on at that time.

This gambling, they said, apparently was condoned by police on the beat, who they claimed, are spectators at the games, often making witty comments as onlookers.

This prompted her to ask him "Does the police department license gambling hodies?" Mrs. Jackson told the inspector that she was going to visit the Mayor herself to check on the complaints.

The inspector assured her she said, that it is not the policy of the police department to permit gambling.

In regard to her personal visit to the Oxford St. address, he advised her that this would not be necessary, stating that he would take care of the matter.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Jackson made the trip, ahead of the door-rudlocked

Previous to this, the NAACP had asked Governor Lane and Police Commissioner Beverly Fiber for a "complete investigation" of the incident.

Stemming from the NAACP complaint, Inspector Wallace revealed Thursday that he had received telegrams from the Governor and Mayor D'Alesandro requesting an investigation of activities at the Oxford St. house.

But with this house tightly padlocked it was indicated by a raid Wednesday night at a house in the 1000 block Pennsylvania Ave. that a widespread investigation is under way in the entire area.

The police reported that a card game was in progress at the raided premises in the 1000 block and 19 persons charged with disorderly conduct forfeited collateral when they failed to appear for a hearing in Northwestern Police Station on Thursday.

Back Bunche for Top UN Job

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Official announcement of Dr. Ralph J. Bunche's appointment as professor at Harvard University was made Wednesday by Paul H. Buck, university provost.

At the same time influential Government sources have indicated that he is being viewed as a possible candidate for Trygve Lie's post as Secretary General of the United Nations.

Currently Dr. Bunche is senior director of the United Nations Trusteeship Council. His name also has been mentioned as a possible head of a commission to establish peace in Korea.

On Leave of Absence

Dr. Bunche's professorship at Harvard was voted by the corporation Jan. 16, 1950 and by the Board of Overseers on April 10. Dr. Bunch accepted at that time, but was given a leave of absence to carry on his current commitments in the United Nations.

At Harvard he will be professor of world government.

Since that time, Dr. Bunche was selected as the Nobel Peace Prize winner for his work as United Nations mediator in Palestine following the assassination of Swedish Count Folke Bernadotte. His suc-

"I want to be a radio and television repair expert," James Cook, 505 McMechen St., told the AFRO, this week.

Mr. Cook has been studying for two weeks at the Maryland Technical Training School, 1023 E. Baltimore St.

He spent two years at Douglass and one year at Vocational School before the Army took him in for nine months in camp and three years as an auto mechanic.

When found by the AFRO, Mr. Cook had taken the top off the 1941 Buick engine of his car in

Dead Man Called Chronic Gambler

James Hargrove, 27, second fatal gun victim of Officer Jerome Glass, was described as a chronic gambler.

Officer Glass in written report of the shooting said that when he answered the trouble call to the house at 589 Oxford St., Hargrove was in the room, which was full of cards and card players. His 23-year-old girl friend he was supporting, admitted that he was unemployed and gambled for a living.

She added that he was a quiet sort of person who seldom drank but became nasty and unruly when he did.

She knew little of his background except that he came to Baltimore ten years ago from Lake Alfred, Fla. where his mother resides. He had no brothers nor sisters.

Hargrove, she insisted, never carried a gun, but she admitted that he once served three months for shooting a man in the stomach.

Officer Glass reported that when he pursued Hargrove and three other men who ran out of the back door of the Oxford St. house, a volley of shots were fired at him.

He fired twice in return, he

Pa. Ave. Body to Sponsor First Halloween Parade

Halloween will take a new aspect on Pennsylvania Ave. this year when the Pennsylvania Ave. Business Association sponsors its first annual Halloween parade, and floats, bands, and costumed individuals will vie for attractive prizes in the contest.

The parade, which will form at Pennsylvania Ave. and Gold St. at 7 p.m. Oct. 31, will be open to any man, woman or child in costume.

By providing a healthful activity for the colored youth of Baltimore, the Business Association hopes to cut down the many acts of vandalism and mischievous good spirits which usually erupt at Halloween.

Two $50 Prizes Offered

Hendin's Hollywood Fashions and the Pennsylvania Ave. Business Men's Association have offered $50 in prizes for the three best.
