Ford Pickets Ask Public's Support

Asking for more co-operation from the citizenry in their continued picketing of Ford's Theatre, the Committee For Non-Segregation in Baltimore Theatres, in conjunction with the NAACP, announcing that they would seek fair treatment of the matter in the daily press.

In an open letter commending the AFRO and Louis Azrael of the News-Post for fair treatment of the story, they stated that the Sun papers decided to use the item "only when something happened at Ford's Theatre, that would be an unusual story."

Fail to Report on "Barrier"

To date they (the Sunpapers) have not published the details of why the Hughes-written play, "The Barrier" did not show at Ford's Theatre as scheduled.

The letter suggests that community leaders write letters to friends and solicit their aid in helping in this fight for democracy.

Emmanuel Sunday School Teachers Graduation Class

Exercises Held for Training Class

An exhibit of creative work and an address by James Camphor Jr. featured the exercises of the teachers training class of the Emmanuel C.C. Sunday School.

The Rev. Wilbur H. Waters, minister at Emmanuel presented certificates to the nine teachers who completed their first year of study under the leadership of Mrs. Katie Miller.

Tribute Paid Instructor

The pastor paid tribute to Mrs. Miller as a pioneer in Sunday School and church work. Mrs. Miller also received a basket of flowers, a purse from the class and an orchid from the Sunday School.

The course, of which the teachers have finished the first year, is a four-year course consisting of the general outline study of the Old and New Testaments, training in Christian Pedogogy and Methods.

Teachers given certificates were:

Mesdames Lucille Peal, Carrie Horsey, Margaret Boyer, Odessa Troy, Charlotte Ferrell, Virginia Blake, Misses Delores Waters, Era Ferrell and Mary Watkins.

Wisdom Is Same in All Faiths-Holmes

Older men cannot tell young people how to live, but they can point out the distilled wisdom of the ages, President Emeritus Dwight O. W. Holmes told listeners at Morgan State College Chapel services Sunday morning.

"Adages, wise sayings, the Ten Commandments," he said "are the same in all religions and all nations."

The Bible is the best of all books, but much in it is said as well in the writings of Confucius, Mohammed and Prince Gotama, the Buddha.

"In our youth," Dr. Holmes said, "Methodists were certain no Baptists could be saved, and the only person worse than a Catholic was an ignored Democrat.

Seek the Good

"Today there is tolerance and understanding not only of denominations, but of many faiths and cultures.

"Religion is a way of life and to seek God is to seek the good.

"Fear of hell punishment prevalent 50 years ago among young people has given way today to the belief expressed by Omar Khayyam that heaven and hell lie within the individual."

The time is now to grasp your opportunities, Dr. Holmes said, recalling that Dr. Ernest Just, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Stephen Foster, Stonewall Jackson, Jesus Christ and Ralph Bunche did their best work when they were comparatively young men.

Curator Attends Luso-Brazil Study

Mrs. Dorothy B. Porter, curator at Howard University Library, attended the sessions of the International Colloquium on Luso-Brazilian Studies which met at the Library of Congress, Oct. 25-28.

The conference brought together distinguished specialist from Brazil, Portugal and the United States for the purpose of arousing interest in the culture of the Portuguese speaking people and to discuss their common problems.

Mrs. Porter, who spoke at the session on Instruments of Scholarship," called attention to the interest for a study of the Afro-Brazilian peoples and suggested research tools to aid scholars in this field.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Porter attended the receptions given for the visiting delegates by the Brazilian and Portugese Embassies.

BALTIMORE URBAN LEAGUE:

Community Chest Money at Work

Theodore H. Elliott, a graduate of Howard State College, is shown in the chemical laboratory of the agency.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of articles to inform the public of how the Community Chest dollars are spent.)

By KENNETH CARTER

On Nov. 17, 1949, an important conference was held at the Rustless Division of the Armco Steel Corporation. The big corporation was losing time and money on trial and error method which was being used to pickle stainless steel.

At that conference, which was attended by the plant manager, chief chemist, personnel director, and a representative of the steel workers union, they decided to establish a pickling control laboratory.

The next problem was to locate a man who would be able to develop standards for the use of acids in the preparation of stainless steel. They decided to take a man with the proper qualifications regardless of his race, color or creed.

Urban League Does Trick

The Baltimore Urban League was contacted and from League files came the name of Theodore H. Elliott, Howard University '38, chemistry major.

The stage was set, but could they find the man Elliott?

They found the 35 - year - old chemist, a native Baltimorean, working as a photo-offset lithographic layout man in a local printing shop. He showed interest in the offer.

After a series of meetings between professional members of the Urban League staff, who provide employers with a consultation and advisory service on problems of race relations in industry and officials of Rustless, they agreed Elliott was the man.

Capable Job

On Dec. 27, 1949, Theodore Elliott, sans fan-fare and without incident, reported to work with other employees of Rustless.

Today, almost a year later, Rustless reports that chemist Elliott is very capably doing the job he was employed to do and Elliott states that he has found his fellow-workers friendly and cooperative.

The story of Elliott is symbolic of the purpose for which the Urban League was founded—it is typical of the sort of agency that benefits from the dollars invested in the annual Community Chest Drive.

Once financed by volunteer contributions, the League in 1926 became a member agency of the Baltimore Community Fund. It receives practically all of its support from the fund.

Works Cooperatively

It is an organization that works systematically with management, labor, government agencies and the general public to expand and improve job opportunities.

Moreover, it is an agency which gathers and interprets the facts on race relations and the social and economic problems of the colored community.

Aside from maintaining a trained professional staff, headed by executive director Furman L. Templeton, the League functions with interracial committees on education, community relations, industry, housing, health and public relations.

Mis Velma T. McEwing, League acting-industrial-relations director, says that as a fact-finding agency they have a general knowledge of the employment situation in the city of Baltimore.

"Sometimes we have trouble finding qualified workers in the skilled trades and have to seek them out of town.

Jobs Available

"There is plenty of work for tile-setters, tool-makers, etc. and we continue to have more jobs for stenographers than we have stenographers.

"If people in Baltimore who have particular skills would come in and report them, eventually we could place many of them in industry."

Speaking of the outlook for future high school and college graduates, she maintains that: "Vocational guidance should be based on personal aptitude and not on availability of work opportunities."

Although there are Urban Leagues in 56 cities in 29 states and the District of Columbia, local leagues decide their own programs.

Their affiliations with the national body requires that they be interracial, have a professionally trained staff, and they are accept the general philosophy and League movement.

Mr. Templeton describes the objectives of the whole Urban League as a body that "seeks to achieve its objectives by the use of fact and persuasion."

Spare Gilbert, Urges Congress Candidate

Louis Romolo Milio, attorney, who is running for Congress from Maryland's Third District, added his name to the long list of those who have written President Truman asking clemency in the case of Lt. Leon A. Gilbert.

Mr. Milio's letter pleads with the President to have the compassion of President Lincoln, when he reviews the case of the soldier found guilty of misbehaving himself before the enemy in the Korean fighting.

Quoting some of Lincoln's famous statements, Milio writes of Lincoln's words when he pardoned a technical deserter who was condemned to death: "Well, I think the boy can do us more good above the ground than under the ground."

In closing his letter to the President, Milio stated: "True the boy was proven wrong, but life is dear even to a man who is in error."

DILLARD MOURNS MRS. MC ALLISTER

NEW ORLEANS — A period of meditation in tribute to Mrs. Ethel Clark McAllister was held at Dillard University on October 4. Mrs. McAllister was secretary to Dr. A. W. Dent, president of Dillard, until her death on September 30.
