Convictions of 2, Doomed In Bus Slaying, Appealed

Counsel for two men condemned to the gallows in the slaying of a trackless trolley operator argued against their convictions before the Court of Appeals on Thursday.

The attorneys, Louis Marchi and Ernest Perkins, sought to convince the high court that the constitutional rights of Russell S. Lewis, 25, and Gerald S. Day were denied.

Particularly, the attorneys cited that they were denied their motion for a separate trial of the two men; that a statement was taken from Day by police out of the presence of Mr. Marchi, who already was in the case as his man's attorney; and that the statement from the men were obtained by inducement.

Feebley Statement Quoted

The attorneys referred to an alleged statement of Capt. William C. Feebley to both men, and which was quoted:

"It doesn't make any difference which one cut him, each is just as deep in it as the other. Everybody is being truthful will get the most consideration, and I am going to tell the court just what trouble we had getting you fellows to take this responsibility."

Officers Identifies Suspect

Lewis, an AWOL soldier, and Day, a GI student, were convicted of first-degree murder in February.

Officer John Gardner, off duty the night of Oct. 5, said he spotted them near the darkened trolley operated by Orville Bjork-son, white, and recognized Day. Both men fled, but were arrested within the next several hours.

Bjorkson, who had pulled the trolley at the terminus at Westport and Carter St., was slashed some eight times.

D.C. GI Promoted to Master Sergeant

WASHINGTON

Wilfred B. Black of Washington was recently promoted to the rank of master sergeant in the U.S. Air Force. He is assigned as chief of the Personnel and Cost Unit, Alaskan Air Command.

Prior to active duty in the Armed Forces in January, 1943, he was engaged in the dry cleaning and tailoring business at Fort Myers, Va.

Served Abroad During War

During World War II he served in China, Europe and Africa. Sergeant Black arrived at Elmendorf AFB, Alaska, in May of this year from Westover AFB, Mass.

At the present time his wife, the former Miss Mary Stevens, lives at 25 Jones St., Springfield, Mass. His mother, Mrs. Gertrude Black, resides at 1726 First St., N.W., Washington, where his 15-year-old son, Robert, is going to school.

Father Kills Kin Through Mistake

RICHMOND

Each apparently mistaking the other for a burglar, Wallie Coleman, 20, of 200 E. 10th St., struck his father-in-law in the face with a milk bottle and in turn was shot dead by the elder man about 2:30 a.m. last Wednesday.

Stage for the tragedy was set when Joseph Conner, 18, Carvers's brother-in-law, saw a man attempting to get into his bedroom window, awakened his sister and brother-in-law, then went to his father's place of employment and returned with him to the house.

Young Joseph explained the situation to his father, watchman at Jahnson's Foundry, and the father took the company pistol, a .38 calibre Smith and Wesson, returned to the house with his son. The son remaining in the front yard while the father entered the house from the rear.

One Shot Proves Fatal

Opening the back door, gun in hand, Simmie Conner, 46, the father-in-law, was struck full in the face with a milk bottle by his son-in-law, who thought he was the burglar.

Mr. Conner fired one shot in self-defense, the bullet entering the side of his son-in-law's face.

When the smoke cleared away the elder man learned that his son-in-law, thinking he was the burglar, had used a bottle as a club from the front room of the house and in returning the attack, he had shot and killed his own son-in-law, thinking he was the burglar who had struck him.

Given a hearing in police court the following day on a murder charge, the elder man's case was continued to Oct. 31, but expectations were that he would be acquitted on the charge against him, the case being dismissed as an accidental death.

NBC Has 100 Jobs Going Begging in N. Y. Area

By Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK — The National Broadcasting Company revealed last week that it has immediate openings for some 100 technicians.

In addition, it was pointed out that there are job opportunities for secretaries and for creative writers, without regard to race, creed or color.

Ernest de la Ossa, NBC director of personnel, made these revelations during a roundtable discussion of "The National Broadcasting Company and the Negro National Community" held Wednesday at the RCA Building.

Highly Selective

He revealed that of the 2,300 employees of NBC in New York there are now only 25 colored, about five of whom may be considered in above-average jobs. Each month, he said, between 1,000 and 5,000 persons are interviewed in order to fill about 20 jobs.

Object of the conference, called by Aseneo H. Eagles, vice-president in charge of press, was to provide an exchange of ideas concerning NBC's relationship to the national colored community. Other conferees were present.

In addition to Mesars. de la Ossa and Eagles, NBC speakers were Sidney Beltrach, manager of continuity acceptance, and Bert Brooks, recently appointed vice-president in charge of public relations.

Exclusion Foments Suspicion

Before they spoke, Lester B. Granger, executive director of the National Urban League and William Gibson, editor of the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers of Baltimore, described the colored community and outlined briefly what it expected of the radio networks.

"Because of the lack of economic equality and because of a sort of cultural exclusion, the colored community, in some instances, has developed a great suspicion of whites," Mr. Granger explained.

"This suspicion," he continued, often leads to a super-aggressiveness which sometimes stands in the way of mutual understanding.

Sins of Omission

Mr. Gibson pointed out that lack of employment opportunities and the use of stereotypes on the radio as well as in the motion picture industry are generally resented.

"Often," he pointed out, "the things that are not said can do just as much harm as the things that are said.

"The failure of Life magazine to include anything worthwhile about colored Americans in its recent mid-century issue and its failure to include any photographs of colored Americans in its recent 'Picture History of World War II' are cases in point," he asserted.

Mr. Beltrach reparted that NBC in order to avoid the use of offensive epithets, has changed the lyrics of such songs as "My Old Kentucky Home," "Mississippi Mud," "Without a Song," "Basin Street Blues," and others before permitting them on the air.

He said that other racial groups—the Italians and the Irish—have protested characterizations showing them in an unfavorable light.

George Schuyler was discussion leader and was assisted by Dr. Anne Cook, head of the dramatics department at Howard University, Dan Burleigh, columnist, and Constance Curtis of the N.Y. Amsterdam News.

Following the discussion, the conferees were guests at RCA Victor at cocktails and a buffet. Later some of them attended a television premier, while others went to the Radio City Music Hall.
