OUR CREED

We believe that America can best lead the world every from racial and national antagonisms when it extends to every man, irrespective of race, color or creed, his human and equal rights. Nothing so sure, fusing us as one, as the realized dream to help every man in the free land of all we hope to keep so anyone is held back.

"We are Americans. And, as Americans we speak to America . . ."
—Frederick Douglass

THOUGHTS FOR THE WEEK

From the summit of power, men no longer turn their eyes upward, but begin to look about them.—LOWELL

Bill Curran Was the Kind of 'Boss' We Never Needed

William Curran, political barrier in Baltimore for more than 30 years; referred to variously as "genial" and "political boss", but who said, himself, "the people just don't want a boss any more," is dead.

His biography, printed in such detail as to take up nearly a whole page in a local daily, is a typical story of the poor, but ambitious second-generation immigrant to this country.

Mr. Curran was born poor. He was left fatherless at the age of seven. He worked hard for his education, and he worked hard in politics.

But the fact that he never held an important political office to which he aspired is a sort of poetic justice, for Mr. Curran was one Gladman for whom colored people did not exist.

It is in sharp all the prejudices and indifferences of the lily-whites were gathered into one place—in one man.

"His life and his politics were a contradiction of basic American principles."

A biographer, writing of him in 1950, said:

"The phenomenon of a party boss who articulated on fundamentals of government, who pleads for an improvement in political maturity and political ethics—and who, at the same time was up to his ears in the petty intrigue of practical politics — has long been a source of puzzlement to Baltimore intellectuals."

Certainly Mr. Curran's life was a contrariety. His actions were a mutation of government by the people and for the people.

There was only one way to demonstrate to Bill Curran that colored people were important and that was for them to get together in a large enough area to elect a Negro to City Council or the State Legislature.

But, even when this was done, quite practical politician Curran

Dr. Jenkins And Regional Schools

In commenting upon the recent appointment of Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, president of Morgan State College to the Board of Control of Southern Regional Education, the Baltimore Sun as is its wont, falls into the pitfall of wishful thinking.

The Sun sees in Dr. Jenkins's acceptance of membership of the board a "change of attitude" toward regional education and a "suggested agreement" on his part that the educational advantages of such a plan outweigh the ugly racial issue involved.

Nothing is further from the truth. We are certain that Dr. Jenkins has not changed his attitude on the issue of racial segregation in education and we are equally assured that his acceptance of membership on the board is no indication that he is in agreement with previous and present efforts to set up regional schools upon a purely racial basis.

While pointing out that Dr. Jenkins accepted the appointment with certain "personal reservations" and while quoting him as saying that he is "vigorously opposed to those phases of the program which tend to extend and crystallize segregation to graduate and professional education," the Sun has shifted its editorial emphasis in such a manner as to give the impression to the hurried reader that Morgan's president is "solid" on the proposed program.

Actually, the presence of Dr. Jenkins on the board is one of the greatest safeguards we could have against any extension of the plan of segregated education.

The whole idea of regional schools has stemmed from a desire on the part of certain Southern states, Maryland among them, to bypass U.S. Supreme Court decisions calling for the offering within State borders and at the same time equal educational opportunities and facilities for all qualified citizens.

While it is true that the regional plan can be and has been worked successfully on an economic rather than a racial basis, we are convinced that the present agitation for regional institutions has no such origin.

In other words, a regional plan based upon economic necessity and operating on a completely non-segregated basis, would be acceptable. Any other would be highly undesirable.

It is in the interest of the former that Dr. Jenkins agreed to serve. He has not changed his attitude toward segregation one iota and cannot have one.

AME Journal Report Inadequate

An independent auditor analyzing the financial report of the Journal of the Baltimore Annual Conference, AME Church, calls it misleading and inadequate.

He does not say that it shows shortages. He does not infer it. His analysis does not deal with that phase of the matter.

He is concerned with the fact that as a financial report, the document is a failure and not worth the paper it is written on.

A financial report is two-sided. It deals with current money received and money spent in all departments, money left over from previous years, investments, bank balances and property owned.

The conference report appears in detail only in one aspect namely income. All the rest of the report is fragmentary.

The independent auditor puts a finger on the problem when he says there is no evidence that the bookkeeping system was set up adequately or that the reports were audited by a certified public accountant.

The whole idea of financial report is what could be expected of eighth graders. Of trustees of public institutions, we have a better is expected.

Trained bookkeepers and accountants are available. The conference should make use of them.

Columbus Had 3 Colored Navigators

Three colored navigators, the Pinzon brothers, accompanied Christopher Columbus in his daring discovery of America, on the frigates "Pinta" and "Nina," which were owned by them, according to Arthur Smith, 1500 block Monument St.

Mr. Smith, local historian, reports that Columbus set sail from Palos, Spain, on Friday, August 3, 1492 on his vessel the "Santa Maria." Martin Alonso Pinzon was commander of the "Pinta," while his brother, Francisco Pinzon, served as pilot. Vincente Yanez Pinzon was commander of the "Nina."

On Friday, October 12, 1492, Columbus and his navigators reached the shores of America. The men went ashore to offer prayers to God for their safe voyage. This marked the advent of Christianity in the new world—America.

Made Further Exploits

Vincente Pinzon later made further exploits in the new world. In 1499 he sailed from Palos, across the Atlantic Ocean in February, 1500. Pinzon reached the shores of South America. He was sore hurt by the Amazon River, and gave that body of water it's present name.

When Pinzon returned to Palos, Spain in September, 1500 he was immediately appointed Governor of lands he discovered, by Queen Isabella.

However, he did not take possession.

RAMBLINGS AND RUMINATIONS

Don't know how the law defines "justifiable homicide," but it almost had another case to try the other day.

Happened in Philadelphia, of all the local bars, television equipment had a crowd gathered around the set watching the World Series.

"Twas the memorable sixth inning of the third game. The bases were loaded, with two outs.

The count was three and two.

The crowd sat, all eyes glued to the television set. No one noticed the obscure little man as he walked through the open door and dropped a nickel in the juke box, which someone had neglected to disconnect.

THERE AIN'T NO JUSTICE

Now that the "Bigger Show" has folded its props and departed, I can't help but chuckle over Dave Ellington's announcement: "We cannot start the performance until everyone is seated."

After a lot of scuffling and grumbling, everyone finally sat down and cleared the aisles . . . whereupon the show began.

The first number, "The Star Spangled Banner," everyone stood up pleased.

HARD TO BELIEVE

Saw a press dispatch stating that at Fort Hayes, in Ohio, the sergeants now serve breakfast in bed on your birthday. Provided, of course that you've been a good little soldier all year.

Plus that, on the special day, you are allowed to sleep as long as you wish.

Why! this is wonderful. Now all they have to do is adopt this system for Alice in Wonderland's "Unbirthdays" (you know, 365 days in a year, one is your birthday, all the rest are your unbirthdays) and I'll rush right down to the nearest recruiting office.

CAN YOU IMAGINE?

Privates in the Army are now paid $75 a month! Egad! when I think of the $1 we were getting when I was "in," it's frightening.

They must really have some whoop-de-doo poker games these days.

THIS'LL KILL YOU

Seems to be a contest on for the most bizarre way to commit suicide. But in my mind the winner of the fellow in Detroit who made an electric chair then sat in it.

Don't see why he had to go to all that trouble. Most've had a guilty conscience and wanted to murder somebody.

JUST A REMINDER

In case you hadn't noticed, summer seems to have flown the coop. Always have a sentimental spot in my heart for summer. Off days at the beach . . . moonlight boat rides . . . Sunday morning golf . . . weather reports and barbecues. Yep! summer is a good season of the year . . . Besides — There ain't no OIL BILLS.

Dr. Goodloe Faces 7 Years in Prison

WASHINGTON—The last avenue of avoiding a prison term was virtually closed to Dr. William A. Goodloe, widely-known physician, last Monday when the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review his conviction on charges of performing an abortion, obstructing justice, and attempting to bribe a witness.

The doctor, at whose home Joe Louis, former heavyweight champion of the world, and his aunt Julian Black, were guests when Joe was climbing the ladder to pugilistic fame, faces a term of seven years in prison.

He was sentenced to five years on the abortion charge and two years each on the obstruction of justice and bribery charges, but the sentences are to run concurrently after the five year sentence has been served.

No Comment

Dr. Goodloe was not available for comment Monday. He was said to be at his summer home at Atlantic-on-the-Bay, a summer resort on the Chesapeake Bay.

Convicted of performing an abortion on Gloria M. Huffman, a white woman of Baltimore, Dr. Goodloe was convicted of conspiring to bribe Miss Huffman to absent herself during the grand jury investigation of the abortion. He also was found guilty of offering her a bribe.

Miss Alice L. Galusha, a white clerk, was indicted jointly with Dr. Goodloe, but she was granted a severance and later the charges against her were dropped.

$350 Operation

According to the trial record, Capt. Andrew Gleason, a vice squad officer, arranged with Dr. Goodloe to perform the abortion on Miss Huffman at Dr. Goodloe's home. Gleason allegedly paid him $350 for the operation.

While visiting in Washington on April 13, 1950, Miss Huffman became ill and was taken to Gallinger Municipal Hospital. Her condition was diagnosed there as an incomplete abortion. Police were notified and an investigation began.

Miss Galusha called on Miss Huffman at her home in Baltimore on April 20, 1950, and offered to pay her expenses if she would leave town and not appear against Dr. Goodloe before the district grand jury.

On April 22, 1950, Miss Galusha appeared at the Baltimore apartment of Miss Huffman the second time and offered to buy her an airplane ticket and furnish her with expense money if she would depart immediately for California.

Two Baltimore police officers, hidden in a closet in the apartment, heard the conversation and arrested Miss Galusha. She had more than $600 in her possession. At the time Miss Huffman was under subpoena to appear before the District of Columbia grand jury.

At the trial, Dr. James M. Pair, a Baltimore physician, testified that Goodloe and Miss Galusha visited his office and Miss Galusha left saying that "she was going to try to persuade someone to stop whatever they were trying to do to Dr. Goodloe."

Goodloe is a graduate of the Howard University Medical School and has been a practicing physician here for more than 25 years.

Shiloh Organist Blames Wife's Aunt for Breach

Interference with his home life and the exercise of the dominion over his three children is blamed by Oscar L. Waldon, 212 42nd St., NE, organist at Shiloh Baptist Church, for his marital difficulty with Mrs. Martina Waldon, 1419 Trinidad Ave., NE, who is suing him for maintenance.

Mr. Waldon, an ex-GI student at Howard University, admits paternity of their three children, but denies that he had any knowledge that she is now pregnant. Mrs. Waldon is a graduate of Howard University, a Government worker, and night school teacher.

Mr. Waldon says also that he is financially unable to provide a separate home for his family. At this stage he blamed his ills upon the wife's aunt for her domination against his wishes and over his protests.

She asked the court to compel Mr. Waldon to go back to the asylum in the premises where he now lives, or to vacate it.

He says further that the only restraint he has placed on the teacher was when he momentarily held her when she said she was leaving and taking the children.

Dismissal of the complaint is asked.

Library Program Improved Under Emerson Greenaway

The six-year administration of Emerson Greenaway as director of the Enoch Pratt Library, may be looked upon by colored citizens as a period of improvement.

Mr. Greenaway's predecessor, Mr. Carl Milam, came here in 1945, shortly after the famous court decision which opened the Pratt library training class to colored students.

NAACP Brought Suit

The decision of the court upheld the NAACP suit which contested the library's right to discriminate against colored applicants for the training class inasmuch as the library is supported by city funds.

At that time, only three colored librarians (all trained in other cities) were connected with Enoch Pratt, and all were assigned to the branch at Pitcher St. and Fremont Ave.

It was under Mr. Greenaway's administration that colored librarians were assigned to branches in interest white Republicans in the 4th District.

So on the basis of voting strength, we hope the Governor will understand the position of the Koger organization.

EMERSON GREENAWAY

library on Cathedral St.

Professional and Clerical

There are now four trained librarians and two colored clerical workers at Pitcher St.; one clerical worker at Branch 2, Calhoun and Robins Sts.; one librarian at Branch 5 in the 800 block Broadway; and one librarian at Branch 11, Central Ave. and Watson St.

Mr. Greenaway's administration also began the weekly noon book talks and weekly poetry discussions which featured speakers of both races from all Maryland colleges.

Members of the Morgan State College staff and noted authorities from other cities served as lecturers for these projects.

The noon-hour talks featured such persons as Dr. D. O. W. Holmes, president emeritus of Morgan College, and Dr. Ethel Nixon of the psychiatric staff at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Dr. Ford Popular

A popular speaker for the poetry hour was Dr. Nick Aaron Ford, head of the English department at Morgan. Citizens of both races always are welcomed at these and any other of the public programs, at the central library.

One of Mr. Greenaway's last official acts before he left Baltimore was to order down the sign "White Women Public Lavatory" which had been posted near one of the public rest rooms at the central library.

Mr. Greenaway is a native of Worcester, Mass., and before coming to Baltimore, he did library work in his home State and Connecticut. His successor at Enoch Pratt is Miss Amy Winslow who formerly was his assistant.

POLITICS

From the DEMOCRATIC Viewpoint

By LLOYAL RANDOLPH

Far be. it from me to participate in the family quarrel of the Statewide Republican Organization headed by Liswood Koger, Sr., and the Republicans who recognize the leadership of Marse S. Callaway.

But it appears to me that the Koger organization has a justifiable complaint, if figures are considered.

The Colored Republicans in Baltimore alone out-numbered the white Republicans more than two to one and on a State-wide basis, the ratio might be even. There is no question that at least 90 percent of the registered Republican voters cast their vote for McKeldin for governor.

The record total voters show that Governor McKeldin was elected not only by the Republicans but by a large number of Democrats.

Congratulate Governor

We congratulate the Governor on the many fine appointments of colored to jobs and boards that he has made. But has he appointed a sufficient number to the various available jobs in proportion to the Colored Republican vote? The answer is clearly no. Therefore, we think the Koger organization is on sound ground when they criticize the Governor on the sufficiency of number of his appointments.

For example, there were 38 jobs in the Supervisor of Elections office for the Governor to fill at least 19 colored job holders should have been appointed, but he only appointed 2. There are 4 sitting magistrates for the various police stations. Governor McKeldin only appointed 1 colored.

There are 6 traffic court magistrates—how many Republican colored did the Governor appoint? Answer, none.

In the State Sales Tax Division the Governor has not appointed one colored enforcement attorney, even with the wealth of talented Republican lawyers available.

No Assistants Named

In the Attorney General's Office there are no colored assistants as yet. In the State Income Tax division, there are no clerks or stenographers.

The same is true in the State Accident Commission and the State Insurance Department.

There are more than 23,000 registered Republicans to 10,000 registered Republicans in the 4th District.

So on the basis of voting strength, we hope the Governor will understand the position of the Koger organization.

From the REPUBLICAN Viewpoint

By MARSE S. CALLAWAY

According to my colleague who writes from the Democratic viewpoint, there are ten cities which have city ordinances against discrimination in housing and 18 states with statutes for "full and equal accommodations, advantages and privileges for all citizens.

Needless to say, Baltimore is not one of the ten cities, nor is Maryland one of the 18 States.

Now the question arises, who is responsible for this condition? By whom can it be remedied?

Governed by Democrats

The quick answer is that Baltimore is governed by a Democratic mayor, Thomas D'Alesandro. Every member of his cabinet, and every City Councilman, is a Democrat.

All he has to do is say the word and we could have a city ordinance against discrimination, not only in housing, but an ordinance which would make it illegal to prevent colored citizens from entering any movie house or theatre.

In this way, the mayor could control the operation of all public places and there would be no more segregation

The same condition applies to the State's failure to pass a State Civil Rights Law. The present Legislature and its predecessors, as far as I can remember, has been controlled by the Democratic party and they have never passed a Civil Rights law.

Changes Needed

This will come about when the people of Maryland elect a legislature which will have a Republican majority.

The Democratic Party will accept the votes and support of colored citizens, but it will not do anything for them. It-as unfortunate for us, but true.

I will take this back as soon as the Democratic Party of this State or City nominates a colored person for election to the City Council or the Legislature.

Our Readers Say

Cites Group for Goodwill

Dear AFRO: It seems appropriate during the period of Jewish religious observance to remind ourselves of the close interest existing between our group and our Jewish neighbors.

During the past decade, our Jewish friend, faced with problems very much akin of our own, have helped to break down a number of racial barriers.

Many of us now living in new neighborhoods will recall the United States Solicitor-General, Philip Perlman arguing forcefully before the Supreme Court on restrictive housing covenants. Others of us today work at the Aberdeen Proving Ground as colored personnel. Locally cite one instance, the Association of Pennsylvania Avenue Merchants, many of them members of the Jewish group, have cooperated with the AFRO-AMERICAN and others in the promotion of jobs for colored individuals.

Many colored persons have been employed locally by cab companies.

W. C. FLIPPEN

Supporting Crownsville

Dear AFRO: Until I read an article in the AFRO-AMERICAN concerning Crownsville's employment policy I was not aware that you had a Westbrook Pegler on your staff. And I might add that the distinction is a dubious one.

Mrs. Juanita Mitchell is writing from blind, prejudiced, emotional bias. Such inflammatory statements can only build hatred in the readers of the papers. If her statements about the policies of Crownsville in regard to the employment of colored persons had one shred of truth in them, then I would be as aroused in her favor as I am against her.

If she were writing, and if you were printing out of ignorance, it would be deplorable enough. However. Mrs. Mitchell is aware of the truth. If you are not, you haven't made an attempt to find out. She has been told the truth and I have heard her told the truth. She simply prefers not to believe her eyes.

It is discouraging to the white person who is actually thinking about his/her prejudices of colored people and striving to overcome it to be hit in the face by colored people who are high in the esteem of their race.

You are biting the hand that is really trying to overcome racial hatred, and it makes one feel like saying, what is the use.

I am not writing this as an employee of the hospital, even though I am secretary to the superintendent, Jacob Morgenstern. I am writing it as a white reader of your paper who feels you have not been objective or fair in carrying this material in your paper.

Is There a Christ on Every Planet?

By JOHN JASPER

Here Are AFRO's Queries

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the query the AFRO-AMERICAN has put to eminent thinkers. Their replies will be carried in a series of articles in these columns.

Fred Hoyle and Raymond Arthur Lyttleton's new theory of creation sets forth the following:

The universe is constantly recreating and destroying itself.

New suns are born hydrogen in the interstellar spaces. When they contract to a certain point they explode, creating planets which are drawn into the orbits of sister suns.

BISHOP W. J. WALLS

On many other planets there must be life as on ours.

If there are thousands of stars and many planets, are there many Gods or is there one God?

Are There Many Christs?

Are there many Christs on many planets, each of them the only Son of God, who was crucified, dead and buried and rose again to sit at the right hand of His Father?

Or is there one Christ who went through life and death on all our planets at the same time?

Most of us have read the Biblical story of creation as written in Genesis.

We know the earth is not flat, with four corners.

We know the revolving earth, and the motion of the sun, is responsible for day and night.

We know the earth was not created and man was not made in a single week. The processes required more days, but millions of years.

How does theology propose to keep up with modern knowledge of astronomy and the universe? Should theology try to do so?

In addition to the Old and New Testaments, should we not add a third section to our Bible which will reinterpret the facts of creation and of life for earnest Christians of the 20th Century?

The following answer is given by Bishop W. J. Walls of Chicago, prelate of the Second Episcopal District, AME Zion Church:

First, I answer on the matter of the Christ, which your question proposes.

There could not be the same redemption of a World Savior on other planets of the same nature as of this planet even if they were inhabited.

There is every reason to believe that Jesus Christ had the only real universal and essential approach to the reasonable and yet poetic definition and proclamation of universal truth.

Nothing appeals to the psychology of man, individually and collectively, to equal his contribution of personality, words and deeds, to a political situation. I find it necessary to declare my position on affairs both political and social.

I am an ardent Democrat and in full accord with the economic and social program of the Democratic Party; also, any other organizations with the same program, such as labor unions, especially the CIO.

REPORTERS' REPORT TO THE PEOPLE

Newsbeat

By RUFUS WELLS

In covering a murder case a reporter picks up scores of motives, theories, and solutions. To select the right one out of the batch he would have to be a "Twilight detective, psychologist and a mind reader. Since most murders are neither of them, they report the most reasonable theories and let the police worry about the solutions and motives.

Wells

Take the case of the killing of Normas Hunter, SPCA agent, last Saturday night. Strength-ran smack into two big questions:

1. What brought on the argument which resulted in the shooting?

2. Why was Hunter in that particular neighborhood at that time?

So far both questions are officially unanswered.

Rumors around the neighborhood are that the agent was looking for for a woman who he got into the argument that led to his death. Some of the neighbors say Hunter frequently was seen in that part of town on Saturday nights.

As one old resident of Aisquith St. told me:

"When a white man prowls in a colored neighborhood at night he is looking for one thing . . . trouble, and quite often he finds it."

At first no one could explain Mr. Hunter's presence in the area. But Tuesday (three days after the shooting) Miss Mary Shearer, president of the SPCA, came up with the explanation that he was answering an anonymous call.

Was the SPCA called to report his death or was he in the commission on his own for a definite purpose? Your guess is as good as mine.

Lonesomania

By BUDDY LONESOME

In trying to protect Officer Jerome Glass, somebody in the police department is going to get his toes stepped on, and hard.

When Patrolman James Smith was uncovered omiously placed in a jail cell overnight like a common criminal, it was because of an accusation by a man facing a prison term for lotting just like a drowning man will grasp at a straw, so you would expect a person, especially in view of Judge Sherbow's well publicized "go to jail policy," to implicate ANYBODY. It's wonder it hasn't happened more often than it has.

But in Glass' case, you have an altogether different situation. Both the man and woman accusing the quick - trigger policeman, are respected, hard working citizens and home owners.

They presented a well defined, intelligent, accusation against a policeman, which is supported by records of the Park and city police.

But still nothing has been done about it.

It seems that the investigating officers are trying on these complaints the cracker barrel policy, instead of "scaring them to death, so they won't testify."

In this case, however, it didn't work.

Not only are the accusers standing their ground, but their stubbornness is making the police "investigation" look increasingly silly. Besides, Captain Fechley wrapped up the investigation two weeks ago.

Scratch Pad

By MAE MORRIS MEDDERS

Come Tuesday, and Governor McKeldin will put an end to the guessing, and announce his choice for the job of executive secretary to his Commission on Race Relations. As things stand now, three main contenders are in the running, but the way I hear it, the Baptist minister is the favorite, and is on the inside track, way out front.

Medders

Not out of the picture are an ambitious young Republican lawyer, running unattached, and a well - known Democrat backed to the hilt by his associates.

The minister is a Republican and is being jockeyed by one of them who wields a lot of influence.

Across the finish line is a pot of gold, represented by some $8,000 which the commission's secretary will have to operate on for two years in the executive post.

Stay Out of Town

Speaking of ministers, I hear that one who recently was banished from town by a local judge is back in the city, not long ago. Careful there brother, the judge heard you were here.

And speaking of race relations commissions, what is Mayor D'Alesandro waiting for? He's had all summer to name the city group, and as yet, he hasn't acted.

The job of executive secretary to the local race relations group won't be created until the city commission is set up with a budget.

And when that political plum is dangled under the noses of our politicians, the state race will be off again. Shades of the Freakness!

TO MY SON

(Written by Mrs. Edna Redding, 1316 Ashland Ave., who recently wrote the poem to her son, Pfc. John N. Redding who was stationed at Sampson Air Force Base.)

Tonight, my son, I am thinking of you.

And wondering just what to do. You called and said don't write to this place,

You were being shipped to another base.

It has been sometime since we received a line.

We are hoping and praying that you are fine.

And hoping you are well and happy and content.

Dad and I, we send our love.

Son, always remember God up above.

He is you' Keeper—your Helper, your Friend.

Remember Him above all men.

There is a name I love to hear. It eases my doubts and calms my fear.

Son, as you journey to and fro, Call on God wherever you go.

The Lord is your Shepherd, that's all you need to know.

And always remember, son, He'll protect you wherever you go.
