Concession Manager Held on Embezzlement Charge

The manager of the refreshment concession at the Royal Theatre hotly denies charges that he embezzled more than $1,000 from concession sales.

Paul Johnson, 35, 500 block N. Monroe St., is being held in $2,500 bail on charges that he fraudulently sold or used 200 gallons of ice cream, 90 pounds of hot dogs, and 200 dozen rolls, valued at $1,022.56.

Johnson had been working as manager of the concession for almost four years. However, the alleged embezzlement only covers the period from September 25 to October 5.

William Bornfriend, 2600 block Queen Anne Rd., supervises the concession in the Royal and other local theatres for the Berenis and Leab Co. Police records list Bornfriend as the complainant against Johnson.

Co-Workers Shocked

Other employees at the Royal were shocked at charges against the mild mannered concession manager. One puzzled employee said: "It sure was a surprise when I heard about it. Paul always had on sweater and pants, and didn't own a car. If he took all that money, what did he do with it?" When questioned about the charges in his small second floor apartment, Johnson said: "The whole thing is a frame-up, and I am the victim of circumstances. How could I take that amount of money when I was under constant supervision?

"At one time the manager of the Royal had keys to all my concessions. Some mornings, persons were seen coming from my stock room with packages."

Johnson also stated that three money bags, containing sales receipts from the concession, had been gifted. He said he reported the thefts to Bornfriend, but the supervisor did nothing about it.

Date of the man's trial will be determined by the State's Attorney's office.

Switchboard Operator on Hospital Duty 23 Years

Mrs. Narcissus Pinkney (she blushes at the first name) has handled the busy switchboard of Provident Hospital for 23 years. She was on duty in September, 1928 when the Provident staff moved into the present Division St. building, and the first doctor and nurse walked through the front door.

She's a Tradition

Thus, the smiling face of Mrs. Pinkney at the information and switchboard desk to the left of the hospital entrance, has become a fond tradition at Provident.

She has no idea how many calls flash over the big double switchboard during the course of a week, but just standing beside her for half an hour will convince anyone interested that her job is not easy.

Especially is it trying when an incoming line lights up, and Mrs. Pinkney plugs in to hear an excited male voice asking, "How's the baby?"

Wants Maternity Ward

Patiently, the operator plugs the call in to the maternity ward.

Once in a while, such excitement on the part of a caller might be overlooked, but not when the word "wife" or "husband" is so often substituted for "baby."

But experience has taught Mrs. Pinkney to take these things in stride, along with the hectic emergency periods that make a hospital's switchboard look like a Christmas tree.

She admits that there was one experience on the switchboard that she recalls above all others, but staunchly refuses to talk about it.

"It was so silly, I'm ashamed to talk about it," Mrs. Pinkney declared.

Lives Around Corner

Living at 519 Mosher St. for as long as she has worked at Provident, Mrs. Pinkney has found it most convenient to dash around the corner to work.

She was born in Lancaster County, Va., but raised in Baltimore. Her husband is John H. Pinkney and they have no children.

In former years, Mrs. Pinkney was active in civic affairs, but lately, she says, "My life has been wrapped up in my work here."

And such a life with one ear tuned to the pulse of a hospital for eight hours a day—she's got to be good!

Official Explains Aim of Interracial Council

The purpose and function of the International Council of Community Churches was explained recently in a letter to a local supporter by Roy A. Burkhard, one of the council's directors.

The letter was addressed to Richmond West of 4700 Falls Rd. It made the following explanations:

The council was organized at a convention at Lake Forest in Aug. 1950. It grew out of a merger of the Biennial Council of Community Churches, all of which are colored, and the National Council of Community Churches, most of which are white, but a few of which are interracial.

Directors of Both Races

The directors of the departments represent the colored and white churches. There is a growing conviction of all the churches that they get away from color divisions.

Beginning this year, the president will serve only one year. He receives no salary. All officers and committee chairmen receive no pay, and only partial expenses to special meetings. Each year there will be a different president, either clergy or lay, colored or white.

2 Paid Persons

The work of the council is done by laymen and clergymen, and the only paid persons are an office director who receives $4,000 a year, and an office secretary who receives $2,400.

Purposes of the council are (1) to support each other; (2) help communities that need to merge little competing churches; (3) help communities without a church to form a new church; (4) to inspire and help existing churches; (4) to help churches find ministers; (5) to provide fellowship; and (6) to help churches grow in a world vision.

Mr. Burkhart called the council "the greatest experiment in racial brotherhood ever achieved in the Protestant Church." The offices are at 1944 W. First Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

Dr. Stanley Jones Inspires Pastor

The experiences that he had in attending the Aschrom or retreat of Dr. Stanley Jones in Bridgewater, Va. were like a spiritual baptism and a spiritual renewal, the Rev. Arthur J. Payne, pastor of the Enon Baptist Church, told the Methodist Ministers Meeting at the N. M. Carroll Home for the Aged.

The Rev. Mr. Payne, the principal speaker, said that he felt that Dr. Jones, the noted minister and religious writer, is doing something for human and racial understanding through his spiritual guidance and unbiased policies at the retreats.

The Rev. Mr. Payne attended the retreat on the campus of the School of Brethren from July 16 to July 26 along with 120 people. Dr. Jones told them that they had come to the retreat to lay aside their prejudices and feelings of inferiority.

Praises Services

Mr. Payne praised the morning services in which every one rose at 6 a.m. to meditate and read the Bible in the silence and quietude of the morning. Also he said there was great inspiration gained from the continuous 4-hour prayer service that went on.

"Everybody felt ilk, one great family there," he asserted.

At the beginning of the meeting, a report of churches was heard.

The Rev. J. H. Peters of Washington, said the Methodist Church in his city formulated a resolution complimenting the city Commissioners for the integration of enlisted and white fire departments. He said Congressmen had criticized the act as illegal.

Other ministers giving reports were the Revs. T. N. Hodges, J. T. Barnes and F. F. King.

The meeting and a dinner were held in the new Elvira M. Bond Dining Room which was dedicated Sunday. The dining room is part of the renovations at the Home for the Aged which will cost about $85,000 when finished.

The walls of the dining room have a glistening white plastered finish. The fluorescent lighting enhances the radiant appearance of the spacious room.

Garrett D. Ralings, president of the board of managers, welcomed the ministers to view the home the Rev. J. O. Williams presided and the Rev. B. M. Hargrove offered a benediction.

Suggests Making Sermons Artistic

"You have to give the people something worthwhile, something they can digest and give the sermon an artistic touch," the Rev. W. T. Holland, pastor of Ebenezer AME Church, told the AME Ministerial Conference, Monday noon.

Discussing "The Art of Preaching," the Rev. Mr. Holland said "Preaching is a business" in that a preacher must dress up his sermon or give it an artistic touch like the manager of a store who dresses up and decorates the windows and goods in his shop to make his products appealing.

The Rev. Mr. Holland told the ministers: "You must sell your personality to the people. We, as ministers must get our messages over in a simple way so the masses of the audience can understand them."

Pulpit Decorum

He mentioned appearance and pulpit decorum, reading the scripture correctly, and organization as areas to be achieved in the art of preaching.

A lengthy discussion followed his address. Several ministers stressed selection of the sermon and the selection of words as being important in preaching. The ministers debated the issue whether appearance and pulpit decorum is important to the art of preaching.

Some felt that a minister is effective in getting his message over, then that is more important than appearance. Dr. Holland said an appealing appearance is helpful in getting the message over.

Rev. Felix Presides

The Rev. A. J. Felix presided. The Rev. T. J. Jackson, chaplain, delivered the invocation and benediction. Mrs. Ida R. Franklin acted as secretary.
