'Birth Of Nation' Suit Waits For Trial

The case of The Birth of Nation" is still hanging fire with no date set for arguments in Circuit Court, it was learned this week.

Harry R. Shull, a Washington motion picture distributor, filed suit here on June 13 against the Board of Motion Picture Censors and Police Commissioner Beverly Oler, charging that the ban against the showing of the infamous picture was unconstitutional.

Although Attorney General Hall Hammond voluntarily gave an opinion cutting the powers of the Board of Motion Picture Censors, his office filed a demurrer in court opposing Mr. Schull's suit.

Board Banned Film

The Washington distributor has been trying to show the bigoted movie in Maryland for some time. The Board banned it on the grounds that it might incite crime or riots.

The movie favors the South's side in the Civil War The film depicts colored people in a highly unfavorable manner The NAACP has fought the showing of the film all over the country.

Smith Directs Concert Band

WASHINGTON

The Modern School of Music concert band is presenting a series of outdoor concerts in neighborhood parks and squares.

The series, directed by Arthur E. Smith, founder of the school, will be continued Sunday at 6:30 p.m. in the triangle at 10th and U Sts., NW.

The concert this Sunday will feature a male and female vocal soloist and a harpist. The concerts are free.

Lucky In New Role

times I Feel Like a Motherless Child."

Accompanists for the evening were Mrs. Poulson, Miss Jefferies and Lionel Jiggetts. Mrs. Maraget R. Franklin, president of the Baltimore guild, congratulated the board on the excellence of the program and presented awards to the participants.

Mrs. Poulson, State organizer of Junior Boards, announced that the S. Coleridge-Taylor and W. C. Handy boards will present public recitals in the near future.

Congratulations were given by Louis Shub, pianist and instructor, who formerly taught several of the participants at the Baltimore Institute of Musical Arts.

Charles Stanley, organist and music teacher, and the writer of this column were also introduced.

Moments Musical

By ADAH K. JENKINS

A concert of unusual interest was spoted when the Maryland Symphony Society made its recent debut at the Baltimore Museum of Art.

Practically all of the members of this year-old group are non-professional musicians, including men from all walks of life and several housewives.

The fact that it is an interracial orchestra establishes a decidedly new precedent in Baltimore, the success of which should be of much interest to the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, the Chamber Music Society and like groups in our city.

Cassell A. Charter Member

Albert Cassell, well-known violist and several other musicians are members of the group. Mr. Cassell is also a charter member in the string section of the City Orchestra.

Congratulations are in order to Dr. Hyman Rubenstein, concert master, and Dr. Joseph S. Blum, president, for the decidedly forward-looking policy of the society.

The annual recital by pupils of Maye John Styles was held Thursday evening at Union Temple Baptist Church. Mr. Styles is a well-known, local singer and pianist of wide concert experience.

"Stars Of Tomorrow"

"The Stars of Tomorrow" gleamed brightly at their recital Wednesday evening at Sears Community Hall.

The concert was sponsored by the Lovey E. Husketh Board of the Baltimore Music Guild, National Association of Musicians. The late Mrs. Husketh was the organizer of the Junior Division of the guild.

Participants included students of Morgan State College, the Baltimore Institute of Musical Arts, Mrs. Constantia Reckling and Mrs. Emma Poulson. Mrs. Poulson, counselor of the Husketh board, was assisted by Mrs. Celia McLeod, also a counselor. Mrs. Alma Thomas, Theophilus Poulson and a corps of young women who served as ushers.

Max Statham Guest Artist

Guest artist was Max Statham, a former pupil of Mrs. Poulson and at present a student in the music department of Hampton Institute. He gave a highly proficient rendition of Rachmaninoff's "2nd Piano Concerto."

Leonora F. Brown, soprano, was warmly applauded for "Who'll Buy My Lavender" and "As We Part." Robert Graham showed considerable promise in two piano numbers, Paderewski's "Minuet" and the Adagio from "Moonlight Sonata."

Miss Brown and Mr. Graham will represent the junior boards of the guild at the annual Convention of the NANM in New York this summer.

The younger members of the Husketh Board were represented by seven-year-old Barbara Strickland at the piano and Ralph Murray, vocalist.

Evidences of growing musicianship were present in the playing of Shubert's Sonata No. 120 by Judith Murray. Constance Jefferies also exhibited considerable technic in Chopin's Value in E Major for piano.

"Morning" (Speaks) and "Crucifixion" were appealingly sung by Lillian Poulson, soprano. Mr. Poulson Jr. displayed a pleasing baritone in "I Hear You Singing" and the Burleigh version of "Some-
