Jean Noel, 22 Others Go On Trial Wednesday

A long parade of defendants will march before Judge E. Paul Mason in Criminal Court on Wednesday morning. A total of 23 are charged with lottery violations.

The trial which will draw the most attention, however, will be that of glamorous Jean Noel, former Morgan State College co-ed.

Miss Noel, 22, was the sole occupant of a luxuriously appointed apartment in the 2400 block of Lexington st. which was raided on May 9.

Tip Caused Raid

The raid, the result of a tip contained in a typewritten letter addressed to the vice squad, netted $1,200 in cash and numbers tapes indicating $76,000 in number's play.

Following her arrest, Miss Noel disclaimed any knowledge of the numbers operations but indicated "a brother" was responsi- for the setup.

Police obtained a warrant for this "brother" but whether he was ever seized will not be learned until Miss Noel's trial.

Sought Caddy Owner

The owner of a 1952 Cadillac bearing D. C. license plates beginning with the letter "K" was also sought by police in connection with the Lexington st. raid.

The Cadillac, a convertible, was seen near the place by police while they watched the house prior to the raid. But the driver sped off when they approached.

Since her arrest, there has been much speculation on whether or not Miss Noel would tell the State's Attorney just who was behind the $50,000-a-day operation found in the apartment.

She has been free in $2,500 bail since her arrest.

Signs In Lexington Market

These signs appear on restrooms located on the Paca st. side of Baltimore's Lexington Market.

The city-owned market was recently constructed at an estimated cost of $5,000,000.

Civil Defense Asks More Help

Sherley Ewing, deputy director of Civil Defense for Maryland, recently referring to the great need for people to man the observation posts in the Ground Observer corps in all the counties of Maryland, quoted Gen. Benjamin W. Chidlaw, commanding general of the Air Defense command.

General Chidlaw said in speaking before the convention of the National Association of State Directors of Civil Defense, "An example of the Ground Observer corps effectiveness can be drawn from results of operations during a typical one - month period since the start of 'sky watch.'

"In one critical area, 18 successful interceptions were made on unidentified aircraft — due solely to original plots received from the Ground Observer corps.

No International Change

"Certainly it must be admitted by everyone here," General Chidlaw continued, "that little or nothing has happened on the international scene, which reduces in any way the threat with which we are faced.

"There has certainly been no perceptible change in Soviet intentions.

"Most important from an air defense and Civil Defense point of view, the Russian time - table still remains unknown to us."

Ewing reiterated his plea for volunteers to man the Observation Post so that the gaps in the radar screen might be filled immediately.
