TELLS OF TRAVEL ABROAD.

J. Henry Baker, President of the Board of Liquor License Commissioners of Baltimore, Tells of His Experiences in the War Zone.

J. Henry Baker, president of the Board of Liquor License Commissioners, who, with Mrs. Baker and their son, John Tull Baker, spent the summer in Europe, arrived in New York on Monday aboard the Laconia. He went to Baltimore city immediately, reaching Union Station in the afternoon. On the same train were President George Weems Williams of the Park Board and Judge Carroll T. Bond.

Despite his experience, Mr. Baker looked well and, like the rest of the party, was bronzed by the voyage. His baggage was intact which he said was an extraordinary circumstance, in view of the fact that he had to pass the German, Austrian, and French custom officials.

"My trip was not shortened by the declaration of war, as was the case with many other tourists," said Mr. Baker. "It was exciting, but was enjoyed every minute of it. To properly appreciate his own country, I might add, a man should go abroad. Home is the healthiest place after all during the painful process of mobilization. In Germany it is soldiers, soldiers. I am not surprised that war has broken out, as it seemed to be the only outlet for the country's military energy.

"I was in Dresden when the Archduke Francis Ferdinand was assassinated, which is claimed by some to have been the cause of the war. A few days later we arrived in Innsbruck, Austria, where all the buildings were draped in black in honor of the Crown Prince and his wife. Everywhere there were the soldiers.

PARIS IN A TURMOIL.

"Paris was in a great state of excitement. The day I arrived President Poincare came to town. It seemed as if everyone was on the streets. The next day I heard the verdict of 'not guilty' in the murder trial of Mme. Caillaux. It did not arouse much enthusiasm, as the populace expected it. They did not seem to approve of the court's decision very strongly. The French idea of selfdefense differs from ours materially. At that time it seemed to me that everybody was talking of mobilizing or fighting. The last thing I heard was that the Judges were to fight a duel because of a quarrel over the trial.

"Then followed the murder of M. Jaures, the French Socialist, further exciting the Parisians. When war was declared I had great difficulty in getting a check cashed. I am sure that the line of people waiting to get money from the Bank of France was a half mile long. Stores refused to accept my checks. Nothing could be purchased, as they were completely out of small change and unable to procure any. Sometimes we were in actual want for the necessities of life.

"On August 1 the hotel porter came to me and said: Get out at once. The Government will need all the trains for the soldiers. Then he left for the war. When we reached the station all was confusion. Many Americans were glad to leave their baggage. On the same train with us there were many soldiers on their way to the front. Their wives and children were there to say 'Good-by.' The women were crying—young and old—as only French women in their sorrow can cry. The expression on their faces haunts me now. They realized what the separation meant.

WIRELESS ORDERED DOWN.

"Traveling by way of Havre and Southampton we started for London. As we entered Southampton, an English torpedo boat stopped us, ordering the captain to take down his wireless. The port is closed,' they wigwagged, 'anchor where you are.' Then a pilot of the Admiralty came aboard and took us to Southampton.

"Conditions in London were better than in the Continental countries. Every American was doing his level best to get there. I was inconvenienced by not being able to close from Saturday of one week to Friday of the next. Change was scarce as a bear with a tail. That has been remedied now since the Bank of England started to issue one-pound notes. They must be accepted as legal tender.

"It is estimated that there are 30,000 Americans in London at present, all eager to get home, and many of them are scantily supplied with money. I am sure that the American Citizens' Association will look after them. Few of then will be in want. I attended several meetings of the association. The men in charge know what to do and how to do it. Baltimoreans having friends in Europe need not be alarmed."

Referring to his trip home, Mr. Baker said: "It was not known until several hours before leaving time whether the Laconia would sail. We left Liverpool on Saturday afternoon in the face of possible hidden mines and with all kinds of dreadful rumors current. It was reported, for instance, that there were three German cruisers near and that we had a single British cruiser as a convoy. Our vessel was said to be under the protection of the Admiralty. Whether this is true I cannot say.

SIGHTED SPECK ON HORIZON.

"Soon after we were on the open sea, the sides and how of the boat were painted black and brown. The protective coloring was applied to her funnels later. Several days out we sighted a speck on the horizon. 'A German warship,' some one cried. Others were equally positive that it was the missing convoy. It came no nearer and never was identified.

"The wireless was used for receiving messages only. No messages could be sent by the anxious passengers. Strict orders were issued by the captain for all the portholes to be covered with blankets. The windows of the saloon were carefully curtained. The only illumination visible from the outside was the red and green lights essential to navigation.

"In addition to Mr. Williams and Judge Bond, I met B. Howard Griswold in Paris and later in London.

☞There is a scarcity of houses of a desirable character in Chestertown for rent. A gentleman desiring to remove his family here from Baltimore stated to us this week that he had tried everywhere to rent a house but there are none to be had. Why don't some of you vacant lot owners build one?

TYPHOID FEVER

HOW TO PREVENT ITS SPREAD

ISSUED BY THE

State Board of Health

OF MARYLAND.

When TYPHOID FEVER appears in a family the source of the infection must be looked for in drinking water or food taken within the preceding twenty days. The patient may not have been infected at home, but if a second case occurs this second infection will in all propability be traceable to the first patient. In a majority of instances the drinking water has become infected. Your first business, therefore, is to find out the quality of your drinking water.

You can do this by asking your local health officer for instructions about shipping us samples of your drinking water. The daily supply of drinking water should be boiled.

The infectious material of thphoid fever is produced in but one way. It grows always in the bowels and sometimes in the bladder. It, therefore, escapes from the sick person in the stools and urine. If we kill the germs in the stools and urine as soon as they are passed, there can be no spread of typhoid fever. These discharges should, therefore, be disinfected as soon as possible. You will need a large quantity of a good disinfecting solution.

RECEIPT FOR A GOOD DISINFECTANT.

To four gallons of water add enough salt to make a strong brine. Put this in a five gallon demijohn or jug and add a quart of crude carbolic acid. Shake it up well and you will have a good disinfectant for stools and urine.

The crude carbolic acid, known as U. S. P. 99 per cent., is very good, and a quart will cost about 50 cents. There is a cheaper grade, known as a 36 per cent. acid, which is nearly as affective.

About a pint of this solution should be put in the chamber or bed pan before it is used, so that the discharges will begin to be disinfected as soon as they leave the body. There must always be at least as much of the disinfecting solution as there is of the discharges, so that more of the disinfecting solution may need to be added after the discharges are passed. If the stools are thin and watery their disinfection will be accomplished in half an hour or so, but if the stools are thick or formed very much more time will be required. On that account it is best to have a covered jar or bucket into which the bed pan can be emptied, and to empty this jar only once in 24 hours. If the discharges cannot be finally thrown into a sewer, they should be buried in the soil at a convenient spot where there is no chance of their fouling a water supply. The discharges should never be thrown on the surface of the ground, for you will hardly be successful in killing all the typhoid bacilli, and you must not place them where those not killed by the acid may be blown about in the dust or carried away by flies to infect other people.

In spite of every precaution, those who wait on the sick person will get their hands infected, and it is, therefore, necessary to wash the hands every time one does any service about the patient's bed or body. Whoever waits on the patient must not prepare food or drink for other persons in the house, or if it is impossible to mind this rule one must most carefully and thoroughly cleanse the hands before performing any household duty outside the sick room. Good scrubbing with soap, water and a brush, and then rinsing well in fresh water will suffice for cleansing the hands.

If anyone else in the house falls sick within two weeks after the first patient, the probability is that the infection was lodged before the precautions were taken in regard to drinking water and the disposal of discharges. But if the second case occurs more than 20 days after the first case that will signify that we have made a mistake somewhere in our precautions.
