Western Movie Proves Costly For Two Men

The action in a western movie currently showing at an avenue movie house, was more than an ex-serviceman and his pal could stand according to the testimony of two men in Northwestern District court Monday.

Arrested in the New Albert Theatre on charges of disorderly conduct, Raymond Curry, 22, and Isaac Stevenson, 21, told Magistrate E. Everett Lane that they were so overjoyed with what was taking place on the screen, that they forgot where they were.

According to theatre Manager Leon Ellison, the two men "were overjoyed" to the extent that they cursed all the ushers when they were asked to keep quiet.

Curry, who was discharged from the Army less than three days ago; declared that he was sorry but that he was only enjoying himself.

As far as cursing the ushers were concerned, neither man or they claimed, knew anything about that. Both were fined $1 and cost.

Dollars And Dixiecrats

Per capita income has doubled in the past 20 years, according to the U.S. Department of Commerce in its monthly survey of current business.

Washington, D.C., with its large number of federal workers, leads all the states and territories in per capita income. It has an annual average of $2,065 for each person.

Little Delaware, seat of the Du Pont dynasty, is second with $2,076.

Nevada is third with $2,065; Connecticut is fourth with $1,899; New York is fifth with $1,896, and California is sixth with $1,833.

Per capita income from other Eastern states is as follows:

New Jersey, $1,885; Pennsylvania, $1,663; Maryland, $1,714; Virginia, $1,295; North Carolina, $1,052; and South Carolina, $1,003.

Surprising is the fact that North Carolina, despite its richness in tobacco, has a per capita income of only $1,052.

Oklahoma, despite all of its wealth in oil has a per capita income of only $1,182.

And Texas, where supposedly there are more millionaires than any place in the United States, has a per capita income of only $1,411.

What is not surprising is that the Dixiecrat areas have the lowest all-over per capita income.

Mississippi, $771; Arkansas, $926; Alabama, $850; Georgia, $1,103; and Louisiana $1,135.

These figures highlight a statement made during the campaign by Hubert Humphrey, Democratic vice presidential candidate.

Addressing colored Democratic leaders from 15 states, he said that "we are not going to give any of the problems between the races unless we give constant attention to the economics involved.

"If we improve economic conditions, we release to a great extent those tensions created when any two people live side by side."

Governor Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic presidential candidate, said the same thing when speaking at New Orleans.

He pointed out that the South and the farm problem were neglected areas under Republican administrations.

In that area, he said, colored and white farmers were fighting over the bones that had been thrown to them and were pretty well picked by an industrial North.

The Department of Commerce report bears witness to the truth of both of these statements.

Not Too Important

Burke's Peerage accepted the Blue Book of Queen Elizabeth's ancestry back to the Ninth Century's German tribal King of Wodes.

Heretofore the queen had been able to trace her family tree back to the Ninth Century's Saxon King Egbert, first monarch of England.

L. G. Pine, editor of the British Blue Book, announced that there are only 12 families in England whose ancestry goes back to the Doomesday Book compiled by William the Conqueror in the period, 1028-1087.

It is difficult to understand why the English bluebloods or anyone else should place so much emphasis on family trees.

Each of us has two parents, four grandparents, eight great grandparents, etc. some of us may have quite a list of these ancestors they can identify and others may have no list at all.

But failure to list a family tree doesn't seem important to us in these days. Every mother's son of us undoubtedly has as many ancestors as anyone else.

Wouldn't Need FEPC

The policy of the Radio Corporation of America is that there shall be no discrimination in its employment practices based on race, color, creed or national origin.

Those were the words of RCA President Frank M. Folsom, when he recently testified before the Senate subcommittee on labor and public welfare.

"This fundamental attitude, he said, "applies to all of the corporation's activities in governmental and military, as well as civilian, fields."

RCA is not by itself. The huge International Harvester Co., the Pitney-Bowes Co., the Sperry Gyroscope Co., and many others have found it sound business practice to select employees solely on the basis of what they can do.

If other corporations, big and little, would follow this lead, there would be no need for a federal Fair Employment Act with enforcement powers.

Hats Off Department

We doff our hats to the dean of the theological seminary, six faculty members and the university chaplain who last week resigned from the University of the South at Swanee, Tennessee.

The resignations were in protest over failure of the university trustees to reverse their decision and admit colored students.

When they leave in June, 1953, there will remain only one seminary faculty member.

We have been in the habit of saying that young white people are way ahead of their elders in their desire to bring about political, economic and social equality for all citizens.

This desire is not restricted to young people as this incident shows.

It is prevalent too among thoughtful white people of the older generation.

And here is evidence of it in a Christian theological seminary of which our nation can be proud.

Silence Over Miami

It's strangely silent around Miami these days. A federal grand jury has been hearing some 30 witnesses and sitting evidence in the reign of bomb terror that gripped that section of Florida a year ago.

The bomb terrorists killed Harry Moore, the NAACP state secretary, and his wife. In addition they dynamited a housing project two times and spread acts of terror among Jewish synagogues and even a Catholic school.

The FBI has been "gathering" evidence now for some eleven months. Surely during all of that time the world's No. 1 criminal investigating agency must be fingers on such crude performers as throwers of home-made bombs.

Indictment, prosecution and conviction are long overdue.

Bad News For Lawyers

Catholic lawyers in Providence, Rhode Island have been directed to get out of the divorce practice.

The church edict, approved by the diocese, prohibits Catholic lawyers from any take part only in divorce proceedings previously sanctioned by the church.

The lawyers were told that the church will consider granting this permission only in the most serious violations of the marriage covenant, such as infidelity.

Since the most common ground for divorce in Rhode Island is failure of the husband to support the wife and no question of infidelity arises under such cases, Catholic attorneys at law are going to be out of a very lucrative practice.

The edict means that a Catholic lawyer may not act in divorce proceedings involving Catholics in any way. In addition, may not handle divorce cases for non-Catholics.

The Catholic church frowns on divorces for its communicants. What it now seems to be trying is to taking the profit out of divorce cases for Catholic lawyers.

The next question is whether the Rhode Island edict will be adopted by the Catholic diocese in the other 47 states and the District of Columbia.

Head Bloody, But Still Unbowed

I WAS WRONG — very, very wrong. I offer no excuses. I have no alibis. I stand with my head bloody, but unbowed while the brickbats of ridicule and scorn rain down. I sincerely believed that Adlai Stevenson (in my book the better man) would become the 34th President of the United States and said so in this space last week.

The overwhelming majority of the people called me a liar. It was principally the women who did it. They were disturbed about Korea, Communism and cost-of-living. In the South, it was the Republican Party's right issues, which won him support. The Catholics were disturbed about having a divorced man for President as well as Communism. The group felt for his emotional crusade. They rejected Stevenson's appeal to reason. Only the colored voters and labor stood firm.

I cite for the benefit of those who would profit while the going is good, the warning that my batting average still remains .500 — not bad my leftie friends — not bad at all. It was Harry Truman and was right. That prediction cannot not a ripple. In 1952 my prediction was Stevenson. I'm right again today I'm a fool. Now that this matter of eating crow is settled, let's get on with the business of trying to see what kind of administration the Republicans have in store for the next four years.

Mr. Mackay

What We Can Expect From GOP

The most disastrous effect of the election, so far as we are concerned will come in the field of civil rights. The coalition of Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans, who have blocked these measures in the past, has been strengthened. Further, no longer will there be a courageous little man sitting in the White House. The climate of desire for action in this field will no longer be created by the President.

President-elect Eisenhower has made only four specific pledges on minority problems. He has promised (1) to end segregation and discrimination in Washington; (2) to use his influence with the governors of the 48 states in getting FEPC legislation on the local level; (3) to complete the job of integration of the armed services; and (4) to appoint a colored member of his cabinet, if any qualified person can be found. The General has spoken in general terms on the question.

He said on one occasion, "I pledge, if elected, the President of the United States will serve all the people, irrespective of their race, their creed, their national origin and irrespective of how they voted." On another, he said, "I pledge to devote myself forward making equality of opportunity a living reality for every American. There is no room left in America for second-class citizenship for anybody".

The question is how much of this will President-elect Eisenhower be able to do. In the matter of Washington, it is Congress not the President who has the National Capital. Congress, not the President must take the initial steps to fulfill the non-segregation promise.

Eisenhower might be able to persuade states like Pennsylvania, Illinois, Iowa, California and Nebraska to enact FEPC legislation. Even here he'll meet the bitter opposition of the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce. Surely, he has no hopes of getting legislative action in such states as Virginia, Maryland, Texas, Florida, and Tennessee, all of which helped elect him.

National Sales Tax Certain

On the economic field, the prospect doesn't look too bright. Rent and price controls are doomed. The one now in control tried to do this in the 82nd Congress. The excess profits tax will be allowed to die and corporate taxes will be lowered. Income taxes will be cut with the larger taxpayers getting the best break. A national sales tax (really a poor man's levy), is almost certain to be passed.

Contrary to what many people believe, there will be no turning back of the clock on social legislation. On the other hand, no new laws in this field are likely to have a chance. The conservatives in power will try to chip away at the solid foundations of old age pensions, unemployment insurance, school lunches and other such legislation. Passage of a federal aid to education law has been dealt a setback.

There are some happier aspects of the Eisenhower victory. Sen. Richard Russell of Ga. loses his chairmanship of the powerful armed services committee. Lawyer Saltonstall of Mass. takes his place. Walter George of Ga., steps down as finance committee chairman, replaced by Georgia Millikin of Colo. Dixiecrat Allen Ellender of La. is set as chairman of the agricultural committee. Taking his place will be George Aiken of Vt. A thorough-going reactionary, Pat McCarran of Nevada, loses out as chairman of the important judiciary committee. Liberal William Langer of N.D. is in line for his place.

I sincerely believed that Adlai Stevenson (in my book the better man) would become the 34th President of the United States and said so in this space last week.

The overwhelming majority of the people called me a liar. It was principally the women who did it. They were disturbed about Korea, Communism and cost-of-living. In the South, it was the Republican Party's right issues, which won him support. The Catholics were disturbed about having a divorced man for President as well as Communism. The group felt for his emotional crusade. They rejected Stevenson's appeal to reason. Only the colored voters and labor stood firm.

I cite for the benefit of those who would profit while the going is good, the warning that my batting average still remains .500 — not bad my leftie friends — not bad at all. It was Harry Truman and was right. That prediction cannot not a ripple. In 1952 my prediction was Stevenson. I'm right again today I'm a fool. Now that this matter of eating crow is settled, let's get on with the business of trying to see what kind of administration the Republicans have in store for the next four years.

Mr. Mackay

What We Can Expect From GOP

The most disastrous effect of the election, so far as we are concerned will come in the field of civil rights. The coalition of Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans, who have blocked these measures in the past, has been strengthened. Further, no longer will there be a courageous little man sitting in the White House. The climate of desire for action in this field will no longer be created by the President.

President-elect Eisenhower has made only four specific pledges on minority problems. He has promised (1) to end segregation and discrimination in Washington; (2) to use his influence with the governors of the 48 states in getting FEPC legislation on the local level; (3) to complete the job of integration of the armed services; and (4) to appoint a colored member of his cabinet, if any qualified person can be found. The General has spoken in general terms on the question.

He said on one occasion, "I pledge, if elected, the President of the United States will serve all the people, irrespective of their race, their creed, their national origin and irrespective of how they voted." On another, he said, "I pledge to devote myself forward making equality of opportunity a living reality for every American. There is no room left in America for second-class citizenship for anybody".

The question is how much of this will President-elect Eisenhower be able to do. In the matter of Washington, it is Congress not the President who has the National Capital. Congress, not the President must take the initial steps to fulfill the non-segregation promise.

Eisenhower might be able to persuade states like Pennsylvania, Illinois, Iowa, California and Nebraska to enact FEPC legislation. Even here he'll meet the bitter opposition of the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce. Surely, he has no hopes of getting legislative action in such states as Virginia, Maryland, Texas, Florida, and Tennessee, all of which helped elect him.

National Sales Tax Certain

On the economic field, the prospect doesn't look too bright. Rent and price controls are doomed. The one now in control tried to do this in the 82nd Congress. The excess profits tax will be allowed to die and corporate taxes will be lowered. Income taxes will be cut with the larger taxpayers getting the best break. A national sales tax (really a poor man's levy), is almost certain to be passed.

Contrary to what many people believe, there will be no turning back of the clock on social legislation. On the other hand, no new laws in this field are likely to have a chance. The conservatives in power will try to chip away at the solid foundations of old age pensions, unemployment insurance, school lunches and other such legislation. Passage of a federal aid to education law has been dealt a setback.

There are some happier aspects of the Eisenhower victory. Sen. Richard Russell of Ga. loses his chairmanship of the powerful armed services committee. Lawyer Saltonstall of Mass. takes his place. Walter George of Ga., steps down as finance committee chairman, replaced by Georgia Millikin of Colo. Dixiecrat Allen Ellender of La. is set as chairman of the agricultural committee. Taking his place will be George Aiken of Vt. A thorough-going reactionary, Pat McCarran of Nevada, loses out as chairman of the important judiciary committee. Liberal William Langer of N.D. is in line for his place.

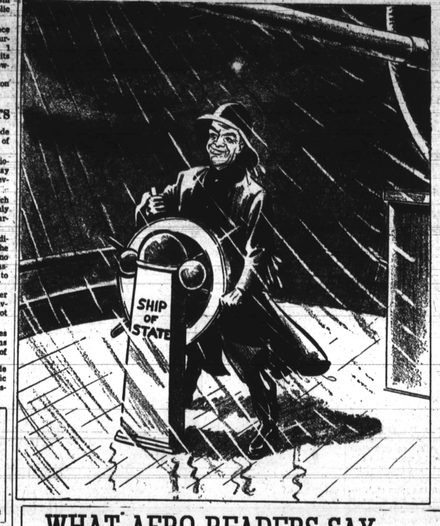
Steady As She Goes



WHAT AFRO READERS SAY . . .

BRICKBATS FOR MACKAY

Philadelphia—"Hail to the New Chief" writes Cliff Mackay and then proceeds to congratulate Adlai Stevenson. How wrong can a newspaperman be?

LEON SNEAD

Richmond, Va.—Place the name of Cliff Mackay and Jimmy Hicks along with Gallup, Crosley, the Literary Digest and other pollsters, who predict without consulting the people.

JOHN SMATHERS

New York—Mackay should smash his crystal ball. It certainly left him out on the limb on his Stevenson prediction. It serves him right for boosting the Democrats so high.

LUCILE JOHNSON

Charlotte, N.C.—I think Mackay was right. It was the people who were wrong. I still believe Adlai Stevenson was the better man.

ROBERT HARRIS

Trenton, N.J. — I know Cliff Mackay's face is red. It is isn't, it should be. The very idea picking Stevenson when all the time the people wanted Eisenhower.

RUDOLPH GRANT

Buffalo, N.Y. — Mackay should get out of the predicting business and get a mop. As a prognosticator, he makes a lovely janitor.

SARAH RAINES

Raleigh, N.C. — Hooray! Fair Dealers like Mackay and Harry Truman will have to take a back seat for the next four years. And am I glad. It's time to let some real Americans run the country.

HENRY M. LEE

Chicago — The Literary Digest went out of business for calling the wrong shots. Gallup had to go in a hole in 1948. When is Mackay going to turn in his resignation as editor of the AFRO?
