DON'T BE TOO CONFIDENT.

The Sun on Monday editorially says: "While there is nothing in the politica situation to create any alarm, it is important that neither Democratic apathy nor overconfidence should allow the Republicans to make such inroads upon the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives as will produce a wrong impression as to public sentiment. The general result will be interpreted as an indorsement or a criticism of the policies of the Administration, rather than of individual Congressmen, and a sweeping reduction of the Democratic majority might have far-reaching effects not simply on the party but on the future of the country.

"For this reason it is of the highest public consequence that the Democratic party in each State should be on its mettle and should exert itself to the uttermost to equal the record it made in the Presidential campaign. In Maryland the Democratic boom made a clean-sweep two years ago, and we ought, and can, make another this year, if Democrats will realize the importance of this election to the party and the nation, and will show the interest and activity that they should manifest. We ought to have six Democratic Representatives from Maryland in the next House, as we have in the present, and we will have them, if the Democrats of the State are true to Democratic principles and appreciate the necessity of taking no step backward toward political darkness and feudalism."

The same editorial speaks very complimentary of Senator Jesse D. Price, the Democratic candidate for Congress n the First District, as follows: "Mr. Price, who was nominated in the First District to succeed Mr. Covington, has displayed such ability and efficiency in State affairs that it is safe to predict that he will make one of our most valuable Representatives at Washington, and that the Eastern Shore will contribute in him another star member of our Congressional team. No local differences or dissenions should be suffered at such a time as this to interfere with the plain duty of the party in the First District, and we hope every Democrat in the Eastern Shore counties will work earnestly for the election of the candidate on whom Mr. Covington's mantle has fallen."

MARBURY FOR SMITH.

Hon. William L. Marbury, a former candidate for United States Senator against Senator John Walter Smith in a clear-cut and excellent statement, published in the Sun on Tuesday strongly indorses Senator Smith for re-election. In part Mr. Marbury says:

"I have been requested by General Vandiver to speak in behalf of the election of the Democratic candidate for the United States Senator and the Democratic candidates for Representative in Congress, and, of course, I shall take pleasure in doing so.

"I only regret that my professional engagements are such as to make it impossible for me to devote much time to political debate at this season.

"No man who secures a nomination at the hands of the Democrats of this State in a fair primary election held under a law which secures to every Democratic voter a full opportunity to vote and have his vote counted, as the present law does, need ever have any doubt of receiving my support at the general election.

AS TO THE CANDIDATES.

"All the Democratic candidates who are now on the ticket, including my late opponent for the nomination for the United States Senate, the Hon. John Walter Smith, were nominated under this law by the Democrats of the State and of the various Congressional districts, and these gentlemen are undoubtedly the choice of the majority of the Democratic party for these nominations. The fact that a great many Democrats did not vote at the primaries does not affect the matter in the slightest degree.

"Those who did not take the trouble to go to the primaries to vote must be assumed to have been willing to leave the choice of the candidate to those who did go, and there is no reason in my mind why I, or any other Democrat, should have the slightest hestitation in supporting these candidates."

Mild Winter Says Prophet.

The coming winter will be one of the mildest on reccord, according to Jack Roberts, veteran weather prophet of Darby. Roberts says that there will be only one or two cold snaps and the overcoats will be little needed.

Roberts has been making weather predictions for forty-two years, and he has hit it right so many times, that Darby folks begin to take notice when he begins to deal in weather futures.

Three months in advance, Roberts predicted the Christmas blizzard of five years ago. Persons living in all parts of the county who had cut out his prediction for reference wrote letters of congratulation.

Roberts' method for "doping" the weather is very simple, so he says. The direction of the wind on September 1, he asserts, gives him the weather scheduled for the first month of winter; the direction of the wind, September 21, tells him what the weather will be in January and the direction of the wind on September 22, gives the weather for February.

If the wind is from the south it means warm weather; from the east, rain and snow; from the north, cold weather; from the west, clear weather.

If the wind shifts from the south in the morning to east in the afternoon, Roberts says the fore part of the month will be warm, shifting to rainy in the last half. The wind on these three dates mentioned was principally from the south, with variations to the east and west.

This according to the Darby prophet means an open winter, with plenty of mild weather.

A Good Hay Crop is a Money Getter

Can Be Insured By Up-To-Date Methods Of Soil Preparation and Seeding.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ.
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Compared with wheat, the value per acre of the hay crop in this State is higher and practically equal to that of corn, yet the methods commonly employed in producing the crop are no different now from what they were 50 years ago.

As a result the yield of the hay during this time has remained practically the same while the quality if anything has deteriorated.

The remedy for this condition is simple. It is to be found in a change of cultural methods. Instead of seeding timothy in the fall with wheat, and adding clover in the early spring, the wheat should be seeded without the grass, and after harvest, the stubbles should be plowed down and timothy and clover seeded without a nurse crop. There is no better time for doing this than the latter part of July or early August in the mountain sections to early September in the southern and eastern counties of the State. If the seeding cannot be done during or before early September, then the clover should be left out as it is very apt to winter kill if seeded later.

To be successful the land should be plowed as early as possible, and worked into a fine, firm seed bed. When seeded under such conditions full crops of first class hay free from weeds may be expected the following season. The yield will be enough higher over seeding the old way, to pay for the extra labor in preparing the land. What is more, the second season the crop will be much better than if it had been seeded in wheat.

A good rate of seeding is timothy, 8 to 12 pounds; red clover, 6 to 8 pounds, and red top, 2 to 3 pounds.

If red clover is not doing well on the farm then 4 to 6 pounds of alsike clover should be substituted for the red clover.

The seed may be mixed together and sown through the grass seeding attachment of the wheat drill, or other devices for seeding grass, but the stand of clover will be a little more uniform if it is sown separate. The seed should always be covered lightly with a spike tooth harrow, weeder or brush drag.

FIGHTING MITES.

ROY H. WAITE.
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The warm weather of the summer months is particularly favorable to the growth of insect pests of poultry and especially to the red mite which annoys the birds while on the roosts. This creature not only irritates the birds by marching around on their bodies, but he bites a hole in the skin and sucks the blood. This is why he is red in the morning after his night's feed, and is why he is given the name "red mite."

It is no great trouble to subdue these pests if one keeps after them. As they stay in the house during the day hiding under the roosts and in the cracks we find it a simple matter to keep them in check and to destroy them if the treatment is kept up regularly. Painting the roosts and nests with kerosene oil once a week while the house is infested and once a month thereafter will keep a flock free from their ravages.

Several proprietory products for killing mites are on the market and these are usually effective if directions are followed.

If for any reason we do not get to make an application of lime for corn we should not hesitate to use it in the fall when preparing the land for wheat.

Crimson clover, frequently called German clover, scarlet clover, and incarnato clover, is outside of cowpeas, the most valuable soil improvement crop to have.

Ordinarily it is neither advisable or necessary to fertilize crimson clover, but when seeded on very poor land an application at the time of seeding of about 250 pounds per acre of acid rock and 35 or 40 pounds of muriate of pot ash gives profitable returns.

It requires practically twice as much ground lime, stone or oyster shells and one and one-fourth times as much hydrated lime as burned lime to do the same amount of good.
