—Took Money

clothes on and let's go downtown."

She invited him into the kitchen (on the first floor next to her bedroom) to find out what he meant by that, Mrs. Doggett said, and he asked her "By the way, how much money have you got?"

When she refused to give him money, he twisted her arm behind her back and hurt her so much that she finally went into the bedroom and got $13 out of a bureau drawer. This, he took, she said after turning down about $1.20 she had in small change.

When he brought up the subject of taking her downtown again, she went to the telephone to call her lawyer. The officer took the phone away from her, and purported to make a call to the station house, asking her "What do you want to ride in, the patrol or wagon?"

Attack Described

Hanging up the phone when she still insisted that she didn't understand what he meant, the officer threw her down on the bed, she said, and attacked her.

She was too afraid to call for help, Mrs. Doggett said, although there were two tenants on the third floor of the house.

After the attack, the officer fell asleep, Mrs. Dogget said, and she had difficulty awakening him.

Shoultz had been to her house on two occasions previously, Mrs. Doggett said.

On one of these occasions, April 17 at about 4 a.m., he came there with his girlfriend, Miss Peggy Gwynn with whom he spent the night, Mrs. Doggett said.

At that time, he gave her $3 for some sewing she had done for Miss Gwynn.

Works As Dressmaker

Denying that she operated a disorderly house, Mrs. Doggett said that she rents furnished rooms to regular tenants and earns money also as a dressmaker.

Mrs. Doggett said that after she reported the attack and loss of her money to Cullen Lee, a friend of hers who rooms in the household of Miss Gwynn in the 600 block N. Fremont ave., Officer Shoultz came back to her house at 8 p.m. that Saturday and asked her "If it would be alright if he paid me back the money."

Mother Pays Debt

The following Tuesday, Shoultz's mother, Mrs. Annie Shoultz paid back the $13 and still later, his father, William Shoultz got a receipt for the money from Mrs. Doggett.

On Wednesday, in company with her attorney, Mrs. Doggett reported the incident to Captain Millard Horton at Northwestern police station.

Later, Captain Horton took a statement from Officer Shoultz regarding the complaint.

In this statement, the officer failed to mention any loan, "because they didn't ask me." He admitted accepting $8 from Mrs. Doggett, but said she gave it to him voluntarily "With the thought that I could protect her, I guess."

'Suspicious' About House

He denied that he asked her for payment to avoid being arrested, but admitted that he "had suspicions" that she operated a disorderly house.

Also in this statement, he denied the attack, but said he might have put his hand on her arm "when I was playing with her." He could not recall whether he laid down on the bed "because I had a few drinks."

However, on the witness stand, Monday, the officer was more explicit about the situation.

He said that he stopped by Mrs. Doggett's house because he saw a light there as he was a homeward bound after leaving a party.

Had Some Drinks

She invited him inside without question, he said, and together they sat in the kitchen "talking and laughing" and having a few drinks.

Since she had loaned money to his girl friend, he thought she might extend him the same courtesy, Shoultz testified, so he asked her if she had any money she could spare because he was broke.

After she gave him the $8, "she asked me why I was being so anti-social" and I told her "You don't think I would get friendly with a woman of your age, do you?" Shoultz testified.

"Then she hit me up against my neck, so I grabbed her arm and shoved her away."

Stayed With Brother

With this development, Shoultz said, he asked Mrs Doggett if she wanted to take her money back and when she said no, he left and spent the balance of the night at the home of his brother across the street.

Shoultz said that he had promised to repay the loan on the following Friday.

On cross examination, James Price, the assistant state's attorney asked Shoultz "Do you want us to believe that all this commotion involving Miss Gwyan, Cullen Lee, your mother and your father developed simply about a $8 loan?"

Shoultz replied "Yes, simply because she acted nasty about it."

Both he and Miss Gwynn denied that they had spent the night together in Mrs. Doggett's house. Miss Gwynn said they only made a short social visit with Mrs. Doggett when Shoultz repaid her $3 which Miss Gwynn had borrowed.

Shoultz's parents said that their understanding about the money the officer took from Mrs. Doggett was that it was a loan.

His mother repaid the money, she explained, because Mrs. Doggett said she needed it before the promised date of return to pay some bills.

Argument Of Lawyer

In asking for a directed verdict of dismissal, Shoultz's attorney, Alan Murrell, said that the state had failed to prove either that Mrs. Doggett operated a disorderly house, or that, knowing this, Shoultz accepted a bribe not to arrest her on this charge.

He said that the testimony showed misconduct in office, if anything.

Having been appointed to the police force on Jan. 17, 1952 and assigned to the Northwestern district in March, Shoultz was suspended from duty because of this case.

While this case, was pending he was arrested again following a family disturbance at his home when four officers were required to subdue him.

In this case, in which Shoultz also suffered injuries, he is accused of having struck Officers Raymond Mulligan and Fred Johnson.

seeing the door of the domestic's quarters open.

Blood smears were on the small picket fence adjoining a nearby alley and also on the lower part of the door to the room.

Inside the room, there was blood on the floor on both sides of the bed, a pint bottle about one-fourth full of gin.

The discoverer of the body told her brother-in-law who was among the first to arrive at the scene, that the woman was found dressed as though she was preparing to come to work.

The dead woman was clad in a blood-streaked apron over a dress which was said to have been worn the previous day at work.

The employees said the woman went out practically every night and told them that she had quite a few friends in Richmond, and they noticed that she went out practically every night.

The previous night, they said an attendant at the service station in front of the bus stop, noticed her boarding the bus.

Because of her quiet nature, the Cobbs said they were able to learn just a little about her life.

The dead woman was supposedly married to and separated from a man now living in Richmond.

Her mother and her ten-year-old daughter who visited Mrs. Spencer during the Christmas holiday are reported to living in Baltimore, police said.

Residents in the unit block of W. Marshall st. say they cannot recall seeing Mrs. Spencer who reported to the local state employment office that she lived there.

The Carter Brothers Funeral Home has the body.

Detectives reported that Mrs. Spencer came to the city from Baltimore late in November.

Her mother, Mrs. Sarah Spencer, address unknown in Baltimore, journeyed to Richmond Wednesday to claim the body.

and the court of 1857 became the most maligned in history.

The present Supreme Court has acted magnificently. It has moved boldly to widen educational opportunities. It smashed the pernicious idea of restrictive covenants. It has lowered barriers to equal franchise and badly crippled the humiliating tradition of jim-crow travel.

Before it now is the opportunity to write a blazing chapter in the slow, but unrelenting struggle to make democracy real to all Americans. It can go down in history as the court which wiped the evil of segregation from the face of America.

Our prayers will most certainly help the nine justices avail themselves of that opportunity. Let's pray and pray fervently on Sunday, February 8.

can Methodists from Massachusetts to Delaware are behind you."

Numerous other ministers, ministerial conferences and church organizations through the country are highly in favor of the Day of Prayer and have indicated they will take official action in that direction at coming meetings.

Among them is the Rev. Spottswood Williams, pastor of the Bible Way Church in Washington, who, with his wife, recently returned from a visit to the Holy Land.

The Rev. Mr. Williams informed the AFRO that he is arranging to hold a mass meeting which will attract at least 1,000 persons on the steps of the Supreme Court building on the designated day of prayer.

body yell that the house was on fire. Just about that time, I saw smoke coming up through the floor.

"I grabbed up Barbara and tried to get out the front door. When I opened the door, though, a lot of smoke came in.

"I ran to the back window and tried to get out. We had a refrigerator in front of the window so I put Barbara down to move it.

"Barbara started crying when I put her down.

"I couldn't move the refrigerator so I picked Barbara back up and ran to the front window.

Heard Mother Screaming

"I tried to call for help, but nobody heard me. I could hear Mama outside calling us.

"While we waited for somebody to come and get us, Barbara and I sat down on the bed. She was still crying so I held her in my arms and tried to sing to her.

"But the smoke started getting real thick and I started coughing.

"After a while Barbara stopped crying.

"That's all I remember. When I woke up I was in the hospital," the bandaged little girl concluded.

Firemen who rescued the children reported that Dorothy was sprawled across the bed with the little baby still in her arms.

While firemen were fighting the blaze, Mrs. Peoples had to be restrained by firemen from entering the house.

Started On First Floor

The fire started in the first floor apartment of Mrs. Rosette Parham. Her nephew, Joseph Randolph, 19, was pouring oil in a portable kerosene stove, when the stove exploded.

At first the youth tried to beat out the flames with his coat. When this failed, he called for help.

When Mr. and Mrs. Parham ran into the bedroom and saw the flames, they tried to douse the fire with water. This only served to spread the flames.

The first floor tenants escaped the fire by leaping from a rear window to safety.

Funeral services for the infant victim will be held at 3 p.m., Wednesday, from the Katie Williams Funeral Home. The Rev. Theodore Jackson will officiate, with burial in the Mt. Auburn cemetery.

All Belongings Destroyed

All clothing and furniture belonging to Mrs. Peoples' family were destroyed in the fire. The distressed woman is separated from her husband.

The Rev. Mr. Jackson, pastor of Gillis Memorial Church, with the aid of Missionary Emma Matthews, a church member, is soliciting help for the needy family.

Contributions of food, clothing, furniture, and money may be made by calling the minister at the church—Gilmor 9057, or Gilmor 1660.

ed throughout that the race issue does not figure in their objection to the transfer, but that children on the alleged long waiting list should have preference.

They have also contended, contrary to official statements, that Roosevelt is overcrowded and short of personnel.

An observer at a recent meeting noted, however, that a lengthy discussion of Maryland segregation practices was injected.

The Rosewood parents' group was told at the time that telegrams and protests to the Governor would be unavailing because the transfer was going to be made just the same.

Call On Governor

Late in the week, however, a delegation of white parents and legislators called on the Governor asking him to hold up the transfers until additional space and attendants could be provided.

Governor McKeldin expressed complete faith in the decision made by Dr. Perkins and his "most excellent staff," refused to intervene, and urged the legislators to "ask Dr. Perkins to come down and talk to them" about the matter.

The suggestion that Dr. Perkins talk to the legislators was made by the Governor in answer to an assertion by Senator Louis N. Phillips (Dem.-Anne Arundel) that he might introduce a resolution asking authorities to improve conditions at Crownsville and keep the 280 children there.

Only 'Common Sense

"We have wonderful facilities at Rosewood," Gov. McKeldin said. "It's only common sense that we would want to move the mentally retarded patients out of Crownsville, away from those that are criminally insane."

Legislators in the delegation calling on the Governor included Senators Anders Lofstrand (Rep.-Montgomery), John G. Turnbull (Dem.-Balto. Co.), John R. Fletcher (Rep.-Prince Georges), Stanford Hoff (Rep.-Carroll), Paul J. Bailey (Rep.-St. Marys) and Delegates John McNulty (Dem.-A. A.) and Perry Wilkinson (Dem.-Prince Georges).

Mrs. Ruppert L. Dunn of Takoma Park, president; Mrs. Mary D. Smelser, Baltimore, vice president; Arthur D. Herren, Oxon Hill, treasurer, H. H. Zell and Louise M. Woodfield of Annapolis, represented the Rosewood Parents' Association.

Recently Organized

The Association, according to reliable sources, was organized last October soon after plans for improvements in the state mental hygiene program became known. It is reported to have about 130 members.

Despite the steadfast position of mental hygiene authorities and the refusal of the Governor to intervene, Ernest C. Trimble, attorney for the parents' group, filed a formal bill of complaint in Circuit Court of Baltimore County on Monday.

Judge John B. Gontrum of the Circuit Court bench then signed a show-cause order directing Dr. Perkins to come into court to answer the complaint.

The transfer of the patients was thus postponed to await the outcome of the court action.
