THERE is no politics in Kent these days. People are thinking too much about Christmas.

DO YOUR Christmas shopping at home, and send your Christmas packages through the mails early.

STATE Chairman Murray Vandiver has rendered his statement of receipts and disbursements in the last general election. The amount apportioned to Kent was $400.

QUEEN Annes county has been placed under quarantine, and shipment of cattle and poultry are prohibited unless a certificate is issued by an accredited veterinarian. The people of Kent should exercise every precaution to prevent Kent county being quarantined.

IT is to be hoped that the merchants of the town will have their "Old Kris" treat as they did last year, and that we may again have the Community Christmas Tree in the square. These observances were greatly appreciated last year, and there is no valid reason why we should not have them again this year.

WE TAKE ISSUE with the Kent News as to the value of the Employers' Liability Act. It is the first paper in the State of Maryland to declare the law to be a good one. The framing of the law as passed by the last Legislature is in the interest of neither the employer nor the employee. It is a politicians' law pure and simple, passed for the purpose of creating high salaried offices and absolutely in the interest of the insurance companies and trust companies. If there is any more "extra hazardous" employment than that of our oystermen, we should like to know what it is, and in the liberal interpretation of the law, the waterman is just as liable as the factory owner. If the Tolchester Company and the Md., Del. & Va. Co. are compelled to pay large sums for the protection of their employees against accident, why are not the owners of sailing vessels and oyster boats liable also?

THE LESSON OF MARYLAND WEEK.

The Baltimore Sun in commenting editorially upon the influence of "Maryland Week" says:

"The Maryland Week exhibition which closed Saturday night was the most interesting and successful which has yet been held because it came nearer to living up to its name and to the thought behind the name than any of its predecessors. The people of the city and the people of the counties are beginning to realize its possibilities as a common point of union and as an instrumentality for co-operative effort. The greatest work which it can perform is to make the State one in constructive spirit and purpose, and the indications are that it is producing the sympathetic and practical understanding essential to such a result. We have no hesitation in saying that the feature above all others which impressed both country and city visitors most strongly, and which put them in closer touch than any other, was the Parcel Post Booth contributed by Postmaster Swann. It furnished the text for several of the addresses delivered during the week, and was almost constantly the centre of throngs interested in the explanations given by those in charge. The parcel post service offers a connecting link between city and country of the most important kind, and an exhibit such as that at the Fifth Regiment Armory, which demonstrates its capacity for promoting the welfare of both alike, aids materially in the design of creating a general mutuality of interest and a system of general co-operation. The parcel post service is still far from complete, far from doing what it might do for Maryland farmers and Baltimore consumers; but we believe that a great deal was accomplished last week by Postmaster Swann's exhibit toward smoothing out the difficulties that have stood in the way of its general utilization, and in strengthening the desire to take advantage of it. It should hold an even more prominent place in the exhibit next year, by which time Postmaster Swann may be able to report extraordinary progress, to show that it has established many direct lines of contact between Baltimore and the counties.

"The success of this parcel post demonstration enforces the practicability of the broader service which Maryland Week may be made to render to the State. And we renew the suggestion, which the Sun has made several times before, that a State-wide organization should be formed for the study of our opportunities and for the co-operative development of our material resources, the work to culminate and to be illustrated every fall during Maryland Week by an exposition which will represent every interest, every industry and every section in our territory."

County Board Not Liable.

A test case, relative to the expenditure of public funds on the repair of the public highways upon the result of which much importance is attached, came up Monday before the Circuit Court for Harford county.

When the present Board of County Commissioners entered upon its duties in December, 1913, and found that the public road fund in many districts had been exhausted, an order was issued directing that no further money should be spent on the roads without the knowledge and consent of the board. Several months later snow blocked the roads in the vicinity of Pylesville and the general road superintendent, Samuel Wilson, Sr., not being able to obtain the consent of the local County Commissioner, ordered money should be expended in clearing the snow from the highway.

When the bill was presented and its payment declined by the county board, suit was brought before justice T. J. Brookes, who gave a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. The county appealed and on this appeal the case was heard. After the complainant had presented his evidence, the case was taken from the jury on the ground that Mr. Wilson had failed to make out a case on which he could recover.
