Players Serve As Attendants

NEW YORK CITY — When Madame Alyce Fraser, first to give a recital at the Town Hall back in the 1920's, was married at Union Congregational Church in Harlem, Sunday to William E. Eaton, Detroit realestate man, she was attended by nearly all of the cast who appeared in the morality play "Saraband For a Saint."

She was presented in the chancel of St. Martin's Episcopal Church, 230 Lenox avenue, last September.

Her retinue at the wedding was an interracial one.

Mrs. Andrews Attends

Matron-of-honor was Mrs. Hugh March Andrews (Kim Andrews), who directed the play. The ushers included Lloyd Grant and Wilfred Larry Wylie, who took the male leads, and Cyril Robinson who was stage manager.

Standing up for the bridegroom was Gordon Langley Hall, author of the play.

Madame Fraser now runs a successful music school in New York City.

She spent many years in Britian where she became well known on the concert platform having sung at London's Albert Hall and other large recital halls. She once sang in Westminster Abbey where Elizabeth II will be crowned next June.

Drew-Hodge Ceremony Held

NEW YORK CITY—Miss Cecelia B. Hodges, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hodges of NYC, and Henry N. Drewry, son of the late Leonard E. Drewry and Mrs. Bessie Drewry of Selma, Ga., were married in the Church of the Master, here, recently.

The Rev. James H. Robinson performed the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of ivory satin with an illusion neck-line bordered with seed pearl, and an appliqued lace bodice and peplum that extended into a back panel and spread fan-wise over her satin train. Her veil was tulle, mounted on a coronet headpiece decorated with pearls. She carried a spray of gladioli and orange blossoms.

Dr. White Attends

Dr. Charlotte A. White, the maid of honor, wore a peach colored, floor-length taffeta gown with a shirred neckline decorated with a single rhinestone pin. Her spray bouquet was of American Beauty roses.

The bridesmaids were Misses Bessie Drewry, sister of the bridegroom; Dorothy Hibbert, Margaret Gibbes, Elsie Shaw, Mrs. Jean Drewry Harris, also a sister of the bridegroom, and Dr. Mildred Phillips.

Their gowns were styled in the same manner as that of the maid of honor but were of three shades of blue. They carried old-fashioned nosegays of pink and red carnations.

The ushers included Edward Crider; Leonard Drewry, brother of the bridegroom; Irving Slade, Henry Smalls, Robert Weiss, and Dr. Lawrence Jordan. Harry Washington served as best man.

Mrs. Hodges wore a gown of pink lace over rose taffeta. Mrs. Drewry wore blue lace. Mrs. Sara Minter, of Baltimore, was soloist.

Reception Held

The reception following the ceremony was held at the Royal Manor Ball Room and attended by over 100 persons.

Mr. Drewry, a former instructor at A. and T. College in Greensboro, N.C., is employed by the Social Security Administration in Trenton, N.J. while working toward the Ph.D. degree in history at Teachers College, Columbia University. His bride, an English teacher in the New York City system, has just completed a year's residence work toward the Ph.D. in speech at Northwestern University. The Drewrys are at home at 18 West End avenue, in Trenton.

Scream And Keep On Screaming Policewoman Advises Women

NEW YORK CITY—The one thing an assailant really fears is a woman's mouth, so scream and keep on screaming if followed or attacked, is the advice of the police.

Women can help protect themselves in some measure against attacks by hoodlums, thieves, and degenerates if they remain alert, according to Theresa Scagnelli, director of the Women's Division of the New York City Police Department.

Miss Scagnelli, who heads a force of 214 policewomen, feels that the same advice effective in New York City is of value to women everywhere.

"The first mistake the average woman makes," says Miss Scagnelli in the February issue of the Journal of Living, magazine, "is to display fear if she believes she is being followed.

Call For Help

She glances around frightedly, or gives other signs clearly revealing that she is alone. This is just the information a thief or rapist is after. She should at all times try to create exactly the opposite impression by appearing calm and sure of herself."

Even if a woman only suspects she might be in trouble, she should enlist help immediately from a policeman. If one is not around, she should call on anyone nearby-a pedestrian, a bus driver, a passing automobile—or knock at the nearest door.

Most women are affraid to appear ridiculous by revealing their suspicions, and men who prey on women have come to count on this. Women must get over the feeling that they will look foolish in case of a false alarm. It is better to be wrong but safe.

Keep On Screaming

Some of the "don'ts" advised by Miss Scagnelli are: Don't display money in public. Don't encourage conversation with or accept transportation from strangers. Don't travel in lonely areas needlessly. Don't divulge your destination to strangers.

If a woman is attacked, adds the policewoman, she should defend herself with all the means at her command. Above all, she should scream and keep on screaming. That is the way to bring help-the one thing an assailant really fears.

Sheath Claws Is Advice Of Experts At Marriage Clinic

By EARL S. CLANTON 3RD

NASHVILLE — "If you must fight . . . fight fair," was the advice given to the 'gals' attending the seventh annual Tennessee State University sponsored Marriage and Courtship institute held last week.

The two - day Institute, designed to provide student and community with an opportunity to discuss problems growing out of marriage and courtship with experts, featured a career sociologist, and an adviser to the lovelorn columnist to speak on the subject.

Speak From Experience

The attendees had an opportunity to grill Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gentry, personable young University faculty members with two children, on every problem from planned parenthood to juggling the family income during an evening round-table panel on daily marriage problems.

Mrs. Lettie Galloway, career social worker and 18th avenue Community Center director, let the audience have it with both barrels as one of the Institute's principal speakers.

Leveling with the ladies, she told them that your most difficult fight was first. Before you fire your first gun, analyze the reason for the fight and seek the real cause. Determine whether or not your animosities stems from a personal shortcoming or defect."

The social worker outlined four reasons for marriage failures: money, sex-role position, in-laws, and outside interest. She indicated that one could better promote marriage by avoiding these four pitfalls and by trying to be a pal to one's mate.

Mrs. Ruth Campbell, columnist, who writes under the pen name, Jean Bruce, pointed out that she gives her honest opinion to all letters seeking help. Her message as the leading speaker emphasized the urgent need for grater understanding of individual personality among couples.

Money Matters Lead

The audience threw questions, in rapid-fire order, to the evening's round-table couple that opened the Gentry's homelife to public inspection. Money matters seemed to be the question most unsettled in the minds of the group.

The Gentrys concluded that a couple, in order to run a home smoothly, must trust each others judgment in money matters, especially when both members work and combine their income.

The foundation for future happiness in marriage lies in an honest and frank discussion of goals, desires, and values and agreeing upon them during courtship was a major contribution to the Institute by the couple.
