—Atom Tests

ments have been made to have James L. Hicks, AFRO staff writer, cover the tests. The wide newspaper experiences of Mr. Hicks, a former army officer, qualify him as an observer of these tests.

He will be among a limited number of observers from state, territorial and major city civil defense organizations and from press, radio, television and newsreels who are being permitted to witness the atomic test.

Invited By AEC Head

For the Federal Civil Defense Administration the test will include determination of the effects of the detonation on two frame dwellings and several bomb shelters.

Governors of the states and territories and mayors and other civil defense officials have been invited to attend by the Federal Civil Defense Administration, which has issued quotas to its state directors to insure representation by key states and cities.

Mr. Hicks is being sent to represent AFRO newspapers through an invitation extended to Mr. Murphy by AEC Chairman Gordon Dean on behalf of FCDA and the Defense Department. The March 17 test will include troop participation.

Seeks 'Better Understanding'

In inviting Mr. Murphy to send an observer, Mr. Dean stated that the AEC had approved a request by FCDA for participation in the test program and "It is hoped that this opportunity to cover a test from within the site will assist the American public to fuller understanding of the national atomic energy program and its application to national defense."

FCDA informed the AEC that the test also would help stimulate the civil defense program and provide information on atomic weapons effects to the general public.

The major part of the FCDA effects test program will be held at a later date, but because of conditions related to the test will be classified and, therefore, cannot be observed.

Briefing Sessions Set

The admission of the observers to the Nevada Proving Grounds will be conducted under security and safety controls similar to those established at the test last April 22, which was witnessed by observers, including Mr. Hicks. Only unclassified information will be made available to uncleared visitors.

Briefing sessions with AEC, FCDA and Defense officials are being set up to provide unclassified information for correspondents. Mr. Hicks is due to arrive in Las Vegas not later than Saturday, March 14.

Smoke Victim At Avenue Fire

Thomas Hemmeter of the 1900 block Barnwood rd., a telephone company worker who bravely attempted to enter a flaming building to help occupants escape, is put into an ambulance after he was overcome by smoke. lins, whose colorful activities beginning with the roaring twenties established her as the power of lower Pennsylvania ave.

Woman Hurt

Mrs. Mildred Hunt, 26-year-old occupant of a third-floor apartment in the building, suffered burns and an injured hip in escaping from the fire.

Two telephone company workers, who saw smoke tumbling from the building and climbed their own ladders in an effort to help rescue occupants, were forced to retreat and later treated for smoke inhalation at University hospital. There were Thomas Hemmeter, 24, 1900 block Burnwood rd., and Joseph Krebs, 500 block Bloomingdale rd.

Both Mrs. Hunt and the telephone men were aided by Patrolman Alfred Porreca of the Northwestern district.

Arrested In Bar

Millings was arrested Friday afternoon in a bar in the 700 block of W. Saratoga st. by Officers John Boyle and Robert Johnson. The man made a statement to police and was given a preliminary hearing before Magistrate E. Everett Lane in Northwestern police court.

It was testified that Millings had lost $2 while playing cards with friends in a rear room on the first floor of the house. When refused a loan of an additional $2 by one of the gamblers, Millings turned the place into a furnace by going into another room and kicking over a large coal stove, according to testimony.

MRS. SELINA MORRIS

Millings became enraged at this point in the testimony, and, in the words of Magistrate Lane, became a "raving maniac." He had to be taken from the courtroom to a jail cell.

Nearby Shops Threatened

The blaze, which threatened several nearby shops and buildings on the avenue before it was brought under control, did damage estimated at $6,000 by an unofficial source. The Cordard Realty Estate company, which handles the property, belonging to Leroy Appelfeld, declined to give an official estimate Monday.

Occupants of the building were listed as Mrs. Mary Bradford, James Stewart, Ernest Walker and Mrs. Hunt. A beauty parlor on the first floor was operated by Mrs. Ethel Jackson, 1400 block Laurens st., who was not there at the time the fire started.

The structure, gutted from the cellar to the third floor by flames, has been closed.

Slaying Touched Off Probe

A shooting in an Oxford st. gambling house operated by Selina touched off a city gambling probe in 1950 when Policeman Jerome Glass shot and killed James Hargrove, but Selina emerged unscathed.

Shot on the Eastern Shore, Selina came to Baltimore as a child and in 1915 joined a group of girl singers to become known as "the toast of the street corner quartets." She boasted during the gambling investigation of 1950:

"I have nothing to be ashamed of. I have never had a police record."

had a gross income of $4,912.14."

After the undercover agent had completed his investigation, the case was referred to United States District Attorney for Maryland, Bernard Flynn, who in turn secured a bench warrant for Gatewood's arrest from Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

In the first such case of tax evasion unearthed by the newly-created racket squad, Albert J. Williams, 200 block Whittier ave., was sentenced to 6 months in jail and fined $5,000 for attempting to evade payment of $16,379 in taxes.

Williams, a 49-year-old confessed numbers backer, quit the rackets in November, 1951, after enactment of a Federal law requiring all gamblers to purchase a $50 gamblers stamp.

His conviction marked the first time a colored person had ever been convicted in Maryland on income tax evasion charges.

blow. The murder suspect was immediately subdued by nearby prison guards.

Garrett was serving a two-year term for burglary, with an additional 2-year-term imposed for an escape jry, when he was killed. Prison officials state the man had no home address when jailed.

Veil Suspect's Identity

Beyond this meagre information, prison and county authorities would not release further information about the incident, including the name of the man accused of killing Garrett.

Warden Steiner referred questioners to Anne Arundel County police who handled the official investigation of the murder. Police authorities, however, declared, any information would have to come from Osborne Duvall, State's Attorney for Anne Arundel County.

Mr. Duvall declared: "Until the proper time and the suspect is formally charged, we shouldn't reveal anything to the papers. We will probably be charged with murder, however."

The state's attorney would not reveal when formal charges will be filed.

man of 200 West 135 Street told the AFRO, Gilliam and a dozen or more patrons were in the bar drinking when three officers entered and began a check of the patrons.

Gilliam is said to have lined up with the other men being searched, while the women patrons were herded into the back of the bar. After searching the men, police sent them to the back of the bar, and called for the women to be searched.

Objects To Treatment

At that point Gilliam is said to have left the rear of the tavern and came back to the bar when challenged by police he is said to have told them "I came in here for a drink, you searched me, now let me go ahead and drink, if these women are guilty of anything go ahead and arrest them but please stop showing them around."

According to Gilliam, Patrolman Marcello then knocked him through the door of the bar causing him to have two stitches taken in his lip

Attorney Hilliman said after the officers arrested Gilliam, patrons of the bar called Gilliam's wife who in turn called him. He immediately went to the 7th police precinct to serve as Gilliam's lawyer. He said he arrived at the station house at three o'clock but that police would not let him see Gilliam until 6 a.m.

The lawyer charged that about five o'clock in the morning, the police captain on duty told him that Gilliam had sent word he did not want a lawyer. Attorney Hillman however, said he told the captain that he would not go home until he heard those words from Gilliam himself.

Denies Making Statement

He said that when police finally produced Gilliam the war veteran denied making such a statement.

Mr. Hillman demanded a citizens arrest of Patrolman Marcello, but in Felony court Magistrate Fagan lodged a charge of felonious assault against Gilliam and paroled him in the custody of Attorney Hillman until march 16.

The Magistrate explained that the police office was charging Gilliam with attacking him, and said after he has heard that charge he will permit Gilliam to enter a complaint against the policeman.

Gilliam is a veteran of the North African and Italian campaigns and a native of Baltimore. His mother, Mrs. Nannie Simpson lives in Baltimore at 1101 Aisquith street. He has been married for three years and lives in Brooklyn with his wife Lillian.

organizing European defenses.

24 GOP Votes

The governor said General Eisenhower answered the phone and he said, "General, you don't know me, but this is Governor Theodore McKeldin of Maryland, the state that will have 24 votes in the next Republican National convention. I am in Paris at the Orly airport and I have been stranded for a while."

General Eisenhower said "is that so. Well you stay where you are and I will be right down and get you."

In a little while General Eisenhower's automobile arrived, Governor McKeldin was taken to the General's headquarters where they became acquainted and then became friends.

Knew He Would Run

When he came back to the United States, Governor McKeldin said he told doubtful Republicans that there wasn't any doubt in his mind that General Eisenhower would run for the presidency.

His response to the announcement that Maryland had 24 votes proved that to him, the governor said.

Subsequently, during the campaign the two met. Eisenhower sent for Governor McKeldin and said to him, "I want you to nominate me for president at the Republican National convention.

Couldn't Deliver Speech

"He wrote my speech," the governor said," and some time before it was to be delivered I sent Stanley High down to see me with a copy of the speech he wanted me to deliver. I told him I read his speech and it was good but I could not deliver it. He asked me why and I told him I did not speak like that.

"He asked me then how I did speak and I got up and spoke him. I told him I quote scripture. I begin with a verse from the Bible and end with a verse from the Bible. I take my illustrations from the Bible."

"He said, 'I will take my speech back,' and that I could deliver mine. Don't write anything down,' he told me, 'Just get up and talk just as you have done before.

"So I made my speech at the Chicago National convention, and General Eisenhower was nominated and then later was elected.

Ike Used Passages

"He sent for me and said, 'Governor McKeldin, you know what, I am going to take my speech to my office and passage of scripture and you know what passage of scripture it is going to be, the passage of scripture with which you closed your nomination for me at the Republican National Convention.

"So you see, my friends, that if I had not been thrown off an airplane in Paris on my way to Palestine I never would have learned to know General Eisenhower so early. He would not have known me. He would not have asked me to nominate him for President and if I had not nominated him, he would not have been President."

Ambassador Makes Response

The response to the governor's address was made by Clarence L. Simpson, Liberian Ambassador to the United States, who with four members of his staff came to Baltimore from Washington for the occasion.

Staff members accompanying the ambassador included:

Kedrick Brown, financial attache; David Thomas, cultural attache; Jenkins Cooper and law under the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution.

Scarlett also contends that the Maryland Court of Appeals erred in upholding the sentence given him solely because it came within the maximum penalty for conspiracy, fixed by Maryland law, and in refusing to consider the real nature of the conspiracy to determine whether the sentence was an abuse of judicial discretion.

Details Of Complaint

The indictment, of which Scarlett complains, originally contained six counts, charging him, Harry Gross and Horace B. Cann of conspring together and with unknown persons to violate the Maryland lottery law.

Scarlett, Gross and Cann were tried jointly. Cann was acquitted. Gross and Scarlett were convicted but were later granted a new trial.

At the beginning of the second trial, a motion to dismiss the indictment was filed on behalf of Scarlett. It was overruled.

State's Case

The State dropped five of the six counts in the indictment and tried Scarlett and Gross on one count, which charged that from January 1, 1947, to August 20, 1951, they conspired to violate the Maryland lottery law.

The petition for review asserts that the prosecution offered no evidence to show that Scarlett was other than a small - time operator, or that he had ever been convicted of any violation of the Maryland lottery law.

Scarlett complains that Cann and Gross were acquitted while he was convicted. A motion for a new trial was denied.

Sentence To 7 Years

Scarlett was sentenced last May 28 to serve seven years in the Maryland Penitentiary and fined $2,000 and costs. The sentence was suspended pending appeal. The Maryland Court of Appeals last January 9, affirmed the conviction and sentence.

R. Palmer Ingram, a Baltimore attorney, is representing Scarlett. On the brief with him is Malcolm J. Coan, also a Baltimore attorney.

Behaviour Stories Conflict At Social Worker's Trial

Conflicting versions of the taxicab incident which caused the arrest of two social workers at the Pennsylvania Railroad station on Christmas Day, were given in Criminal Court on Monday.

This was during the trial of Miss Vriginia Jones, 39 of the 3000 block Bennett pl., a former Baltimore city welfare department social workers now employed in a similar position in Washington.

Arrested with her was Mrs. Ellen Williams, 34, of the 2700 block Baker st., an employee of the Veterans Administration in Washington where the two women share an apartment.

Verdict Withheld

At completion of the case against Mrs. Jones, Judge James K. Cullen withheld his verdict pending the hearing for Mrs. Williams who elected a jury trial to be held at a later date.

However, Mrs. Williams testified as a defense witness for Mrs. Jones.

As the outgrowth of the taxicab incident, both women are charged with disturbing the peace and assault on police officers. The complaining taxi writer, who admitted to an extensive record in assault cases, is Robert Wasserman of 3406 Royce ave. driver of a G1 cab.

Cabbie Explains Dispute

He said that when the two women boarded his cab, and asked to be taken to the 2700 block Baker st., he objected because he already had another passenger going in the opposite direction of Orleans and Wolfe sts.

They refused to get out, he said, so he took their bags and set them on the street. With use of violent profanity, he said, they continued to argue and stamped their feet, so much so that Miss Jones broke the heel off her shoe.

At that time he called the dispatcher who made an offer of getting them a Yellow cab, and this offer was accepted by the unidentified women who forced into the taxi. When the other two remained adamant in refusing to leave the cab, he called police.

Defendant's Story

Miss Jones and Mrs. Williams testified that no dispute arose over their destination, but Miss Jones placed their luggage in the front seat, the driver complained that "I told you with that bag, I don't have to take that stuff off you — so get out because I'm not going to take you anywhere."

Miss Jones is accused of assaulting Officer Frances Schnebelen, Officer Francis Crodwell and at the Pine st. station house, the police matron, Mrs. Alma Poole.

The officers testified that as they approached the taxicab after hearing the driver complain, a hatbox was hurled at them.

They had noticed a commotion of "the stamping of feet and hollering in the cab," they said.

Officer Schnebelen said that Miss Jones got out of the cab, cursed and struck at him when he told her "Lady, we're here to help you," and got back into the cab so that she had to be removed forcibly.

Officer Reports Bite

At the station house he said, she bit him on the finger when he tried to assist the police matron whom Miss Jones is reported to have struck twice on their way to the cell lockup.

This version was substantiated by Officer Francis Cordwell who said Mrs. Williams struck him while being placed under arrest and again outside of the toilet station.

The two women, however, maintained that when the officer came over to the taxi, Officer Cordwell opened the door and dragged Miss Jones out tearing her clothes as he thrust her into the patrol wagon.

When Mrs. Williams protested that he was hurting Miss Jones, he told her "You're going too."

Profanity Denied

Both women denied using any profanity. Miss Jones said that her only remark was "I don't understand why my brother is lying wounded in Korea if I can't even ride in a taxicab peacefully."

They waited for the police to arrive, they said, hoping and expecting the officers to help them by directing the cabbie to take them to their destination.

The officers, estified that at the station house, Miss Jones objected strenuously to being searched and to giving the information needed for the docket entries.

While being taken to the cell block, she struck Mrs. Poole on the face and left hand, the police matron said.

Denying this, Mrs. Jones said "I had no reason to strike Mrs. Poole and I had no quarrel because she was quite nice to me."

Former Law Student

A graduate of Morgan State college, Miss Jones took graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania, Catholic University and two years tudy in the law school at the University of Maryland.

Miss Jones said that she was so bruised by the mauldling of the arresting officers that her injuries required treatment by a Washington physician.

She said that she had no liquor to drink that day and that "I never curse."

In arguing for an acquittal, W. A.C. Hughes Jr., attorney, contended that the arrest was illegal because the officers failed to see or hear any criminal offense upon their arrival

He also maintained that the charge of disorderly conduct "upon a public highway" is in error because the incident occurred on private railroad property. He was assisted as defense attorney by Mrs. Juanita J. Mitchell.

Character Witnesses

Mr. Hughes argued that with her undisputed reputation as a respectable, law abiding citizen, Miss Jones would have been stepping way out of character to have behaved as violent and abusive as described by the prosecuting witnesses.

Prosecuting attorneys retorted that Mrs. Poole has the same reputation and that she no doubt have to be stepping out of character to give a false story in this particular case about the abuse she suffered from Miss Jones.

Character witnesses for Miss Jones included Thomas J. S. Waxter, director of the city welfare department; Miss Anna Nagle, district supervisor in that bureau and the Reverend J. Deaton, pastor of Madison ave Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Williams, represented by J. Leon Williams of Washington is expected to face trial in about two weeks.

Prosecuting the case were Edward A. Gehring and Theodore C. Waters, assistant state's attorneys.

Winter's Final Whitening Touch?

The AFRO camera recorded this scene in the 800 block Whitmore street early Sunday after Saturday night's snow storm which weather authorities say was the heaviest of the season. More snow is predicted before the first crocus of Spring pops up.

Young Herbert Williams bends his back to shovel away the last traces of Baltimore's heaviest fall of the winter on Sunday gered by Mrs. Wilkins' refusal to allow her home to be trespassed on and arrested her for her refusal to do as they requested," Mr. Brown wrote.

"Mrs. Wilkins was within her legal constitutional rights in her conduct and was a victim of police rashness and brutality. . . the true facts will show an illegal and unwarranted arrest and abusive treatment of Mrs. Wilkins by the officers involved," the lawyer said.

Mr. Templeton stated in his letter to Commissioner Ober, that Inspector Itzel's action "sorely disappointed those of us who applauded your (Col. Ober) order for an investigation covering the actions of Sgt. John Dunn and Officer Bernard Zilinski."

"Unjustified Whitewash"

"This action will be interpreted by many people as an unjustified whitewash by Inspector Itzel of inefficient policing unworthy of a sergeant."

He added, "It seems that the police force has more important functions to perform than to become involved in the proper right of a person to refuse use of his or her property."

Mr. Templeton's letter was his expression and not that of the Urban League, it was explained.

Bends Knee; Cops Plea; Unlucky He!

Despite a desperate plea on bended knee in a crowded courtroom, John Simmons of the 200 block Robert st. appealed for his wife and $35 cash Monday morning.

At least, Mrs. Martha Simmons said she was through, and the magistrate said $35 and costs fine for assaulting and striking Mrs. Simmons.

Simmons, a 6-foot 1-inch 228-pound Sparrows Point worker, admitted that he slapped his small wife so hard Friday that she bled from the mouth, but declared:

"I realize I was wrong and I'm sorry, your honor."

Never Again

Then, turning to his wife wife and dropping to one knee, he pleaded:

"I'm sorry, honey, I'll never touch you again."

But though Simmons said he loved his wife and could not live without her, Mrs. Simmons said he would have to. This wasn't the first time it had happened, she told Magistrate E. Everett Lane, and she wasn't taking any more chances.

Charge Niteclub Owners With Illegal Liquor Sale

Charges of selling whisky before the hours of 2 and 4 a.m. were filed Friday against the proprietors of a nightclub in the 2500 block of W. North ave.

Released in $500 bail pending action of the grand jury were Philip Harris, 39, white of the 2500 block Loyola Northway and his wife, Mrs. Mildred Harrison.

A state's witness, Gilmore Harrison, 32, 1900 block Wheeler ave., who bought the whisky, was released in $100 bail.

Versions Differ

Sgt. Harry Linton told Magistrate E. Everett Lane in Northwestern police court that he witnessed the sale of a fifth of whisky to Smith by Harris after 2 a. m. on March 1. However, both Harrison and Harris testified that the transaction took place about 1:50 a.m.

Their version of what occurred was backed up by Mrs. Ruth Cornell, cashier; Danny Haywood, a musician playing with a band at the club, and Miss Katherine Agustus, who was also in the place.

Sergeant Linton also said that he saw Harrison get out of a car and enter the club after 2 a.m., but Harrison, a part-time employee, claimed that he had been inside since before midnight.

Disagree On Payment

Both sides also disagreed as to whether, the whiskey had been paid for. According to Sergeant Linton, Harrison gave Harris cash for the purchase.

Harrison, Harris, and Leroy Smith, another part-time employee said the sale was put on a credit tab.

Dr. Allen To Be Cited At Dinner

Dr. Willard W. Allen, president of the Southern Life Insurance company, will be one of several individuals awarded special citations for contributions made toward the development of the Urban League movement and better race relations in their communities at a joint annual league dinner March 16.

Prof. Ira Dea Redi of Haverford college, Haverford, Pa., will deliver the keynote address at the dinner being held in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel by the National Urban League and the Urban League of Greater New York.

Lloyd K. Garrison, New York attorney and civic leader, will be honored for extraordinary leadership given to advance the cause of building better human relations.

Lester B. Granger, executive director of the National Urban League, recently returned from a three-month trip to India, will also speak at the dinner.

W. Emerson Brown Jr., NAACP attorney representing Mrs. Wilkins, immediately dispatched letters of protest to the commissioner.

Col. Ober told the AFRO late Monday that he had the inspector's report on his desk, but has been unable to review it due to a heavy work schedule. He expects to have a statement to make on Thursday, he said.

Itzel Silent Now

Inspector Itzel said Monday: "I have no further comment to make on the subject at all."

Capt. Milton Horton of Northwestern Police Station and Inspector Oscar Lusby helped prepare the report.

Mr. Templeton's letter to the commissioner urged that the probe be continued in the interest of police - community relations.

Mr. Brown represented Mrs. Wilkins, at a hearing before Magistrate Charlotte Main in Pine st. Women's Court, where the 22 year-old mother was dismissed on the charge of disorderly conduct in a public place."

Refused Repairman

Mrs. Wilkins was arrested last Tuesday by Sgt. Dunn and Officer Zilinski in the vestibule of her home in the 1600 block Edmondson ave. when she refused to permit the policemen to allow a workman to enter her home to repair a roof next door.

Clad in only a chemile robe and nightgown which were severely torn, Mrs. Wilkins was taken from her home where she left three small children ages five months-old to three years-old, and a lighted gas stove unattended. During the struggle she allegedly tore a button from Sgt. Dunn's uniform.

The young mother, who is just recovering from the birth of her third child, had been confined to her third floor apartment bedroom by a delicate female indisposition when the incident occurred.

"The police refused to allow her to return to her apartment to change her clothes and to turn off the stove.

A Story of the Old South . . . and Old Discovery
And it came to pass that two distillers, a Marylander and a Kentucky Colonel, fell out over the merits of their whiskies. A duel was averted only when a mutual friend from Pennsylvania appeared with a blend of the two whiskies, plus some from his own stock. Today, this blending of the finest whiskies from these 3 states achieves a smoother, more delightful drink. For the complete story of this interesting legend, read the back label on the bottle of Old Discovery.
