EASED HIS CONSCIENCE.

An Incident Showing a Queer Phase of Russian Character.

"The Russian character has in it something very beautiful—something childlike," wrote the Princess Troubetskoi (Amelie Rives) from Petrograd to a Richmond friend.

"A happening in Petrograd brings out the Russian character well.

"A young nobleman, rather flushed and incoherent with champagne, drove up to the opera, and, as he descended, a wretched beggar whined out the usual petition for alms.

"The nobleman looked at the ragged and filthy beggar; then he laughed foolishly, dropped a silver ruble in the gutter and said:

"'There. Pick that out with your teeth and you can have it.'

"The beggar gave the nobleman a strange look, a strange, reproachful look which did not lack a certain dignity. Then, without a word, he went down on all fours and drew the coin from the foul water and mire with his teeth.

"The young nobleman took out a fifty ruble note.

"'Now strike me in the face,' he said. 'Strike me, and I'll give you this.'

"The beggar struck him a good, vigorous blow.

"Then the young nobleman, his conscience satisfied, laughed, gave the beggar the promised reward and hurried into the opera, patting his hurt cheek tenderly with his handkerchief."—Buffalo Express.

SIKH SOLDIERS.

Some of Them Are Trained to War Almost From Babyhood.

One may often see in the English illustrated periodicals photographs of tiny soldiers about seven or eight years old gravely saluting elderly officers. These diminutive warriors are boy recruits holding regular and dignified places in the Indian army. Each Sikh regiment is allowed twelve of these little chaps, who are trained almost from babyhood. They are each paid 3 rupees and 8 annas a month and at the age of sixteen enter the regular army.

The Sikh soldiers are a most interesting and remarkable part of the British army in India. Their conduct in frontier engagements has distinguished them as brave, steady and devoted to their English officers. Yet about fifty years ago these well ordered soldiers were fanatical savages, who in their mad uprisings shook the power of Great Britain. Once conquered they accepted British rule and were trained and disciplined into a well equipped army of 30,000 soldiers. They formed part of the force that subdued the mutiny. The Hodson's horse troops, which helped capture Delhi, were composed of Sikhs whose devoted service to their leader made them famous.

Their scarlet sashes and turbans gained them the name of "Flamingos." Their descendants are no less determined fighters and stanch soldiers.—Chicago Herald.

Easy Getting Back.

A man named Blue was talking to his friend Brown one night, when the latter casually mentioned Black, a mutual acquaintance.

"Makes me think of an experience Black had a few weeks ago," laughed Jones. "He dreamed that he was an Indian and, getting out of bed, he wrapped a banket around himself and started to walk through the woods. Woke up about three hours later and found himself ten miles from home and no carfare in sight."

"You don't mean it?" was the amazed rejoinder of Brown. "How in the world did he get back?"

"That was easy," was the cheerful reply of Jones. "He lay down under a tree, dreamed that he was an Indian again and walked back."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Rheumatism In One Reel.

An old darky appeared in the doctor's office one morning, plainly very low in his mind.

The doctor, recognizing his old patient, greeted him in his most inspiriting manner.

"Well, Elijah, how is the rheumatism these days?"

"Porely, porely, sah!" replied Elijah dejectedly. "Believe me, Marse Doctor, I'se jest a movin' picture ob pain!"—Woman's Home Companion.

Cut by Friends.

Fuddy—Did you hear of the terrible accident that happened to Danby? His injuries were so serious that his most intimate friends were unable to recognize him. Duddy—Terrible accident? Railway collision? Motor smash? Fuddy—Worse. He has lost all his money.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Real Gratitude.

First Little Lamb—How grateful we should be for the wool which covers us. Second Little Lamb—I return thanks every day for mine. Without our wool how could those affectionate human beings who eat us keep warm?—Wisconsin State Journal.

Table Manners.

Some folks don't believe flints were once used as table knives because they can't see how the stone age man ever got one of them in his mouth.—Washington Post.

Naturally.

"The critics say this prima donna has a voice of velvet."

"Yes; that's where her pile comes from."—Baltimore American.

Helping the Blind.

The Sunday Sun contained a very interesting article with illustrations of the great work which is being done on the Eastern Shore for the Blind. The Sun says in part:

You know, of course, all about the splendid work that is done for the blind children of Maryland through its school; you know something of the work that is done for adult blind persons in the Maryland Workshop for the Blind.

But have you heard how the adult blind who may be reached in their own fare in this State of ours? Did you know that week after week in Baltimore and the surrounding counties blind persons who have been useless driftwood in the course of the workaday world are being sought out and taught to take their places in the onward march of industry? And that even at this moment a survey is carried on through the Eastern Shore to discover the adult blind who hitherto, in that part of the State, have been left to stumble along as best they might in useless dependence?

A bit of coarse ruled paper fluttered to the floor as Miss Virginia Kelley—otherwise known as Teacher in Charge of Home Instruction of the Adult Blind in Maryland—fumbled about in the depths of her handbag.

"Read it while I find my breath after the fire of questions," she laughed as the paper was recovered. "It was written to me by her grandchild for an old blind woman of 78 years whom I chanced across in Chestertown. All that I did for her was to teach her to use a package of self-threading needles, but then she had been sitting utterly idle in the darkness for six long years, since her sight had vanished."

The letter was headed Chestertown, and was as follows:

dear Miss Kelley i received your letter and needels and was very proud of them please excuse me for being so long in writing but i was expecting something els when the lady came I am offul sorry that you didn't find me six years ago for i could have nickels in my pocket where i aint got a penny i have almost sew myself crazy i was up sewing with my needles before day i am still looking for my nitting i have been just as busy as a bee you must Come a round to see me a gain i will close hoping to hear from you soon i still remain yours truly

This person has been earning a modest living since she has been shown "how" and there are a number of interesting cases like this, which attest the great blessing such charitable institutions are to those who sit in darkness.

Tuesday was Ground Hog Day, and there is no probability that he saw his shadow in the United States. The weather of the past week has been no fulifilment of the prophecy that if he failed to see his shadow, winter would be at an end.

BOYS' PIG CLUBS SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED.

They Interest the Boy In Farm Life and Develop a Liking For Its Activities.

R. S. ALLEN,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Maryland has a Boys' Corn Growin Club well established and it is now a recognized feature of agricultural interest to our country boys. Through the influence of these clubs a marked difference is apparent in the production of corn it being superior, both as to quantity and quality.

ONE BOY'S PRIDE.

Now, having in view the further development of the swine industry of the State, it has been thought a good plan to follow the example of one of our sister Southern States by the organization of Boys' Pig Clubs.

The object of such a Club would be:

1. To stimulate an interest in swine production and to teach the boys how to raise better and cheaper hogs by the use of improved blood and the growing of forage crops.
2. To increase the number of hogs raised on the farm in order that the meat for the home and that required to feed the extra farm labor may be provided instead of being bought.
3. To complement the work of the Boys' Corn Club by showing the boys how they can profitably sell their corn through hogs.
4. To encourage the home curing of meats on the farm.
5. To teach the boys how to judge hogs and to select them for breeding or market purposes.
6. To encourage the growing of forage crops and discourage the use of high-priced feeds.
7. To instruct the boy in a practical way in the management of feeding, sanitation, and prevention of diseases of swine, all of which information proves valuable with respect to other forms of live stock work.
8. To give the boys a means of earning some money for themselves while at home.
9. To instill in the boys while young, a love of animals which will result in their taking more interest in farm life, and to furnish them at the same time, work which will, in a practical way, give an insight into the business side of farm life and incite in them a desire to struggle for and attain success. Is not such an effort worth while?

CUT THIS OUT AND TACK IN YOUR EGG ROOM.

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

There are certain precautions that should be observed when saving eggs for hatching. Cut out the following and tack up in your egg room:

1. Keep nests clean and provide plenty of them.
2. Gather eggs at least twice daily.
3. If you must hatch dirty eggs, clean them, but do not wash them if it can be helped.
4. Handle as little as possible.
5. Save only well shaped. Ill shaped ones rarely hatch.
6. Store in a clean, not too dry, room.
7. Keep room temperature between 40 degrees and 55 degrees.
8. Do not save longer than necessary.
9. Turn eggs daily if saved longer than a few days.

SOME COMMON SENSE ADVICE ON THE MARKETING QUESTION.

L. B. FLOHR,
U. S. Office of Markets, in an address to the Maryland State Grange, Dec. 16, 1914.

Parcel-post marketing above all other methods necessitates a good product, because there is no intermediary through whom the identity of the producer is lost and poor goods will reflect directly on the producer. In fact, I know it would well repay any community to have community spirit enough to build up a reputation for high-grade produce, just as the dairymen have in many communities with one or another of dairy breeds of cattle. This will go a long way toward removing the suspicion that may exist in the minds of the city housewives that farmers are always endeavoring to hoodwink them in some way or another. New York butter dealers send their representatives through the dairy districts in the West to bid for the output of creameries known to produce butter of a high grade, and a reputation for superior product is well worthy the ambition of any individual or community, community preferably, because it lifts every individual and proves an attraction for buyers that one isolated individual never could prove.

As I have observed, there is great loss in marketing perishable products. The more directly you can market your products the more you can reduce this loss and the better returns you can enjoy. We often hear the question, "Does farming pay?" As long as we leave our marketing to other people we will have to take the prices they offer. We must not sit down, and wait for something to turn up; we must get busy and turn something up for ourselves. Then and only then, will we come into our rights.
