hand and was holding them in front of her, but from the back there wasn't a stitch visible, not a bra, shoes or anything!"

In Hot Pursuit

Mrs. Williams added that the woman didn't wait for her to open the door. . . Mrs. Studivent was right behind her.

Mrs. Mary E. Wise, 1510 N. Pulaski st., also testified for Mrs. Studivent. She said she was washing the tires of her car opposite the latters' home when the wife returned from the chase.

Mrs. Studivent added that in addition to being untrue to her, her husband had begun fighting her two months after their marriage on May 18, 1947. Her maiden name, Gaskins, was restored.

Mrs. Kelly Freed

A divorce went to Mrs. Catherine Kelly from Albert G. Kelly of 634 W. Lafayette ave., on grounds of desertion.

Mrs. Kelly, who lives at 309 Bradford st., Orange, N.J., said that he came home under influence of liquor, threw her clothes out of the apartment and ordered her out.

Testimony in the same vein won a divorce for Arthur Cantrell of 711 W. Lombard st. from Mrs. Nora Cantrell of Louisa, Ky.

He said that she packed up his belongings and put him out in 1949. They were married in 1911.

'3-D Personalities'

William Miser of the 300 block E. Lanvale. He took the car to Morgan Saturday afternoon to have the carburetor adjusted. When Mr. Miser checked for it later, it was gone.

Officers Robert E. Brathuhn and Samuel Gray arrested the six at Monroe and Pratt sts. after they ran through the red light Monday.

'Didn't Look Like Women'

"I couldn't get any sense out of them. They didn't look like women to me," Officer Brathuhn told Magistrate Ensor, explaining why he brought the other five in.

"Did you question these — I hardly know what to call them, young men or young women — as to the ownership of the car?" the magistrate asked.

The officers said that all but Morgan denied knowing anything about it.

Morgan's own explanation as to how it started was:

"I started to drinking and I started to driving the car around."

He said he picked up the five early Monday morning.

Magistrate Ensor took a look at Conway, who wore an annexed pony tail, lipstick, mascara, long red nails and a pink woman's coat.

"Did you think Harold was a boy or a girl?" he asked.

"I don't know," Morgan replied.

"I can't blame you for that," the magistrate said.

Insist They Are Girls

"They insist they are girls," one of the officers said, motioning toward the trio in women's clothes.

Tina, hair in curls and a blue, turtle - neck sweater showing round, soft curves above a black skirt, explained the queer situation.

Speaking in a deep alto voice, reminiscent of Christine Jorgensen, he told the magistrate:

"George wanted us to go meet a friend of hers at Jessups Cut."

"Let's hear that again," the magistrate asked.

"George wanted us to go meet a friend of hers at Jessups Cut."

"Is George a woman?" Magistrate Ensor asked.

"I'm sure she's a member of the third sex," Tina explained.

"You are undoubtedly a member of the third sex too?" said the Magistrate.

"Yes sir," Tina replied.

"Now we've gone into the third dimension," the magistrate commented.

During the traffic court hearing, Gray, who earlier described himself as the "mother" of the brood, pretended both sleep and fatigue.

Wearing a gray coat and skirt, red blouse, black tam, stockings and black, high-heel shoes, Gray rested his head on the brass rail before the magistrate.

So did Braxton, who was more conservatively dressed in a checked jacket and shirt and blue trousers and shoes. He said he thought he was going to suffocate during the hearing.

Declaring that he could not find evidence beyond "a reasonable shadow of a doubt" that the others knew the car did not belong to Morgan, Magistrate Ensor said:

"I can't find evidence to convict this strange array of persons." Then he paused and added:

"The charge of belonging to the third dimension is not before me."

The magistrate then sentenced Morgan to a total of 90 days in jail and fines totaling $10 and costs on the four charges against him.

The other five were dismissed, and left the station house amid a chorus of whistles and cat calls from policemen — with whom some of the group "flirted" when first brought in.

GOOD SERVICE depends on adequate rates-

For many years people in the Baltimore area have enjoyed gas and electric service of the highest quality . . . service that is recognized throughout the country as second to none.

- The price paid for gas service in the average home is only slightly higher than ten years ago.
- The price paid for electric service is actually LOWER.

During this same period the price of almost everything else has gone up—up—UP! And like the cost of running your home or your business, our costs have gone up too.

There have been large increases in taxes . . . in wages of our employees . . . in material costs, in fuel and in other operating expenses . . . in the cost of building new plant to take care of your ever increasing demands for more gas and more electricity.

We have done and are doing everything feasible to meet these greatly increased costs.

Now we have reached the point where some relief is necessary if we are to continue to supply the QUALITY OF SERVICE to which you are accustomed, expand our facilities to meet the increasing needs of our customers, and at the same time maintain a SOUND FINANCIAL POSITION.

Good service—the kind you want and expect—depends on adequate rates

Economy Drive Hits Major Housing Projects

Race Relations Service Faces Cut

Reduced Budget Forces Unit To Drop Employees

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—The economy drive of the Eisenhower Administration not only hit hard the major housing activities of the federal government but also caught in its wake the racial relations work of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

The House Appropriations Committee, in lopping off $1,962,900 from a request for $2,587,100 for salaries and expenses of the office of the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, cut $17,450 from the recommendation for the racial relations service, headed by Frank S. Horne.

The budget estimate recommended the sum of $46,925 for annual salaries of six employees in the racial relations service—four professional and two clerical. The cut represents a 26 per cent reduction.

Will Drop Two

Unless the House or Senate restores the cut, racial relations service will have to drop two employees, one professional and one clerical.

The slash in Federal housing activities was disclosed in the Appropriations Committee report on the appropriation bill for the Executive office and independent offices, made to the House last Friday.

The cut in the racial relations service was a part of a reduction of $237,000 in the Budget estimate of $900,000 for agency-wide program coordination and supervision.

Unauthorized Activity

Hearings on the independent offices appropriation bill, also made public last Friday, show that Albert M. Cole, the new Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, listed the racial relations service as an activity not authorized by law but indicated that it contributed to solutions of minority group problems.

The appropriations Committee recommended a provision in the Independent Offices appropriation bill reducing the amount available for loans to educational institutions in the fiscal year 1954 to $21,000,000.

Set Up After War

This program was set up after World War II when servicemen wanted to go back to school and the colleges did not have any place to house them.

Among the colleges which have applied for loans or which have received them are the following:

Tuskegee Institute, application withdrawn, deferred, or rescinded, $125,000; Alabama State Teachers college, preliminary approval with reservation of funds, $200,000; Arkansas State college, approved $381,000; Fla. A. and M. College, approved, $900,000.

List Other Schools

Wilberforce, application withdrawn, deferred or rescinded, $50,000; South Carolina State college, application under review, $984,400; Benedict college, preliminary approval with reservation of funds, $230,000; Texas Southern university, application under review, $1,150,000; Hampton Institute, approved, $775,000.

One of the housing programs not aimed was slum clearance and urban redevelopment. The bill reported by the committee carries $20,000,000 for this program, which is the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau and $12,500,000 more than the appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Original Budget estimates called for 75,000 dwelling units to be started in the fiscal year 1954 under the public housing program. The White House later reduced this number $35,000.

Tobias Opens, White Closes NAACP Confab

NEW YORK — Dr. Channing H. Tobias, chairman of the NAACP board of directors, will deliver the keynote address at the 44th Annual NAACP Convention, scheduled for St. Louis, June 23-28; and Walter White, executive secretary, will address the closing mass meeting, it has been announced.

NAACP Hits Bricker, ABA Amendments

NEW YORK — NAACP branches throughout the country have been urged to work for the defeat of proposals to change the present procedures in the ratification of treaties.

Two such proposals are before the Senate—one introduced by Sen. John W. Bricker of Ohio and cosponsored by 63 other senators, and the other by the American Bar association.

The Bricker amendment would require implementing legislation by Congress before provisions of any treaty or agreement with a foreign power could be applied within the United States. The Bar Association proposal would require ratification of all treaties and international agreements by the legislatures of the 48 states.

A resolution passed by the NAACP board of directors at its monthly meeting here April 13 asserted that the adoption of either of these amendments would "gravely restrict president in treatymaking power and seriously impair the flexibility of our foreign relations."

It's wonderful the way Chewing-Gum Laxative acts chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

Here's the relief millions of folks have discovered about rear-a-stary, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why rear-a-stary's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . right in the stomach where food is undigested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. But not rear-a-stary.

This gentle vegetable laxative, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes already-digested good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling that comes sooner and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get rear-a-stary Laxative Gum in price—still 25c, 50c or only 10c.

H.U. Dean Raps J.C. Education

CHICAGO (ANP) — Separate education is expensive and time-consuming, George M. Johnson, dean of Howard law school, told members of the Cook county bar association at the South Parkway YMCA last week.

The Howard dean, citing recent cases of racial segregation in public-supported institutions said:

"The problem is finance and the time has come when we, as colored lawyers, should join with others who feel as we do and develop a scholarship for lawyers who have the will to go where we have not."

Sitting at the speakers table were:

Supreme Court To Rule On Restrictive Covenants

WASHINGTON

What may well be the final phase of the long fight against race restrictive covenants swill open in the U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday, April 28, when that Court hears arguments on the question of whether or not damages can be assessed against the signer of such an agreement for sale of her property to a colored person.

Loren Miller, Los Angeles attorney, who will appear on behalf of the NAACP, will try to convince the Supreme Court that a California decision denying the right to damages in such a situation is correct.

Mrs. Leola Jackson, a white Los Angeles home owner, sold her property to a colored family in 1950 and after they had moved in she was sued by Mrs. Olive Barrows and other property owners who had signed a race restrictive agreement with her in 1944.

The agreement provided that only persons "wholly of the white or Caucasian blood" could occupy the property.

A Los Angeles judge threw the suit out of court in 1951 on the ground that the famed race restriction cases of 1948 were controlling and that he was without power to award damages.

The California District Court of Appeals agreed in a decision filed last August. When the California Supreme Court added its agreement to that of the other courts, Mrs. Barrows and her attorneys asked for, and got, a review in the nation's highest tribunal.

Meanwhile three other state supreme courts, and the federal court in the District of Columbia, have had the damage question before them.

Two of the states — Missouri and Oklahoma—held that damage actions are permissible while Michigan and the District of Columbia courts held to the contrary.

Chief contention of the white property owners is that in the 1948 cases the Supreme Court held only that colored persons could not be ousted from homes they had bought. That decision, they say, does not hold that one property owner cannot hold his co-signers for damages.

In a brief filed through Miller, Thurgood Marshall, NAACP Special Counsel, and Franmer Williams, West Coast Regional Director, Mrs. Jackson argues vigorously that the effect of an award of damages is to order enforcement.

Liberal Senators Make Odd Use Of Filibuster

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — An old adage says politics makes strange bedfellows. That is very apparent in the debate on the so-called Holland bill, which would give all of the deposits of oil and gas in the submerged lands of the marginal sea to three states—California, Louisiana, and Texas—at the expense of the other 45 states.

Senators like Spessard L. Holland of Florida, Allen J. Ellender and Russell B. Long of Louisiana, and Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, who have participated in filibusters against civil rights legislation, are getting a dose of their own medicine.

They would like nothing better than to bring to a vote the bill which would give to the coastal states development rights to oil found within their so-called historic boundaries, which means from three to 10½ miles at sea.

Senators Stall Vote

But another group of Senators, equally as inconspicuous as the supporters of the Holland bill, is stalling the vote.

This group includes Senator Paul Douglas (Dem., Ill.) who took more than nine hours to read a 32-page speech against the bill, and Senator Lister Hill (Dem., Ala.) who took two days to get through 14 pages of a 72-page speech, along with Senators Herbert Lehman of New York, Hubert B. Humphrey of Minnesota, Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico, J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, Democrats, and Wayne Morse, Independent, of Oregon.

The filibustering technique these Senators have engaged in to prolong the debate is to ask a lot of questions of the Senator speaking in opposition to the bill.

Senators Lehman, Humphrey, Anderson and Morse are opponents of the filibuster and would change the Senate's existing cloture rule to make it easier to limit debate.

But along with other opponents of the Holland bill they are prolonging debate, as Senator Lehman put it, "to educate the American people," and, as Senator Morse put it, to make out a "legislative history" for the courts where the issue is bound to wind up.

Rep. Powell Blasts Sen. Joe McCarthy

BURLINGTON, VT.—Rep. A. Clayton Powell Jr., speaking Friday at the annual Vermont conference of the University of Vermont, declared:

"There is no difference between the crimes that sent Frank Costello to prison and the crimes of Senator McCarthy as indicated by the U.S. Senate subcommittee report on Senator McCarthy from the subcommittee on privileged and elections of the Senate Rules Committee with reference to Senate Resolution 187."

Mr. Powell, along with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Col. Ben Limb of Korea, Owen Brewster and President Shuster of Hunter college, spoke at the annual conference on the subject, "The Security—A National and International Problem."

Assigned the national problem, Mr. Powell said: "President Eisenhower will be a great president or a bad one depending on his action and attitude towards Senator McCarthy. As long as he continues to coddle McCarthy, he brands himself as a mediocre and weak president."
