EX-PRISONER'S HOMECOMING:

S. Philly War Prisoner's Return Evokes Tears

By RUTH ROLEN

PHILADELPHIA

Already held high, the head of Cpl. Wilbert M. Warring went higher as applause and cheers greeted him. The 23-year-old repatriated South Philadelphian limped down the deplaning steps as agilely as crutches would permit. (Other POW's offered on page 9).

The gleam in his eyes was directed at only two of the 200 at International Airport on last Thursday afternoon. It was his mother, into whose arms he fell; wedged in was his father.

Mrs. Warring's tears turned to sobs as she caressed the corporal.

The excitement of all brought beads of perspiration to Corporal Warring's brow. Using the handkerchief which had absorbed her tears, his mother tenderly wiped his face.

(Mrs. Warring was honored as the mother of the hero on last Tuesday. Officiating at the City Hall ceremony was Deputy Mayor Michael Brynes.)

Minutes later, a slip of a girl was in Corporal Warring's arms. Only 17, Jean Bush, a Bok Vocational pupil, was shy as she and the former prisoner of war cheeked to cheeked.

All other passengers and even members of the crew had quit the TWA airliner before Corporal Warring. Crew members stood among the cheering crowd, augmented by press, radio, newsreel and TV reporters.

Greetings From Mayor

Representing Mayor Joseph S. Clark, Harry Ferleger, deputy city representative, greeted Corporal Warring. He presented the city seal to the youth. Representatives of veterans' and other organization also welcomed and congratulated him.

Flanked by his mother, Etta, and father, Wilbert E., the returnee went by limousine to a press conference, held in a building at the airport.

The corporal volunteered no information. However, he readily, intelligently and politely answered all questions fired at him.

One question punctuated the other. It was, "How do you feel?" As many times as he was asked, he answered, "great," "fine."

His Story

Through the series of questions and answers, Corporal Warring told the following story:

Wounded by mortar shell fire on Oct. 6, 1952, he woke up five days later to find himself a prisoner in a cave. He had been hit on the left side in the leg, thigh, arm and face.

As nearly as he can determine, he suffered in the cave for two or three weeks. He was then removed to a Chinese hospital at Cherwan.

Two Operations

The most brutal treatment he received was when he cried out in pain. Warned to keep quiet, he was struck by gun butts and other weapons, he said.

He underwent two operations and had his wounds dressed every three days. Medical treatment and care by male Chinese nurses, he termed, "pretty fair." He was also a patient in a second hospital which he could not identify.

Americans, as well as troops of other nationalities, were treated the same in the hospitals, he said. When the wounded were moved from one place to another, it was always by night.

Although he heard that some of the prisoners had died, he never saw any of the dead. When a soldier appeared to be critically ill, he was quickly removed from the presence of the others.

When given stationery on which to write censored letters, subtle hints were dropped. Gist of these was that "I am doing fine and everything is all right."

Four Letters Lost

During his imprisonment, he wrote six letters. His mother received only two, one directly from him and the second from a family in Michigan.

Informed of his liberation on April 20 came a few days before, he recalled. An official in charge of the prison compound strode into the hospital yard; called attention and read the order. His name was among the first.

Given Farewell Party

The Chinese doctors and nurses gave about 200 prisoners a party just before their departure. There were fruits and foreign cigarettes. There were Chinese wine and a Korean string band, which was termed "lousy."

There was only one American song in the band's repertoire. That was "Danny Boy" and a Korean girl attempted to sing it.

Two of the Chinese doctors had been educated in San Francisco. They declined, however, to discuss America.

During his internment, he saw only about 10 other American prisoners. The only local lad he could remember was a South Philadelphian nicknamed "Skippy."

On a diet of rice and what appeared to be seaweed, the corporal lost 15 pounds. His normal weight is 161. Beans were a rare treat.

Military Flavor Remains

At the close of the press conference, Corporal Warring was approached by a lieutenant from the veterans hospital here. Despite the fact that he is a hero, he was asked to show his orders. He was then reminded to report to the hospital 30 days hence.

Minced Meal

Corporal Warring couldn't eat much of the long-awaited meal when he was returned home. The TWA stewardesses said during his flight he had stated that he was going to eat until he could eat no more, but his appetite seemed to have deserted him.

The corporal did little more than mince his mother's fried chicken, string beans, white potatoes, stewed tomatoes, bread butter and tea. He hardly did justice to the one helping.

Dinner over, neighbors crowded into the five-room dwelling which houses the large family. There are 10 children. The other sons are Harry V., 20, a sergeant at Camp Stewart, Ga.; Richard, 22, and Tyrone, 6. Daughters are Gwendolyn, 16; Elsie, 14; Colista, 11; Barbara, 10; Finesse, 7, and Latasha, 4.

Sergeant Warring was also wounded in Korea.

Four Medals

Corporal Warring's Eisenhower jacket was decorated with the Purple Heart, Korean Service Medal, Medal of Human Action, and Good Conduct medal. He wore an overseas cap.

Also at the airport to greet him were his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Clemens, 135 S. 58th st.; two aunts, Miss Thelma Warring, 2836 W. Diamond st., and Mrs. Hazel Redmond, 715 N. Preston st.; and a cousin, Miss Catherine Boyd, also of the Diamond st. address.

Corporal Warring hesitated when he said he had not been warned about what to discuss upon his liberation. However, there was no hesitancy in his voice when he stated that he had not fallen for the Communist way of life.

The Corporal was among the first group of repatriated American prisoners of the Korean conflict. They left Haneda Airport, Tokyo, Tuesday. They arrived at Travis Air Force Base, 50 miles northwest of San Francisco, Wednesday.

The corporal telephoned his parents from California just before boarding the airliner. Just one stop—Chicago—and he was home.

Son Of Pastor Jones Preaches 'Faith' Sermon

As in recent weeks, Pastor Jones did not preach the sermon at Jones Tabernacle, Sunday.

The 62-year-old minister, who an 18-year-old un-wed mother has charged with being the father of her baby, conducted church services until time for the sermon, however.

His son and assistant church pastor, the Rev. Arthur Jones Jr., preached the sermon based on the 8th Chapter, 23rd Verse of St. Mark. The subject of the sermon was "Jesus, Keep Me Near The Cross."

The accused minister, the Rev. Mr. Jones Sr., began church services with a responsive reading of the 23rd Psalm. After this members of the congregation sang "Come In My Room."

The singing of this hymn was interrupted by an oldster in the audience who leaped to his feet and gave a long, tearful, explanation of how Jesus helped him.

"All Things Possible"

When he finished, the Rev. Mr. Jones Jr., mounted the rostrum to begin his sermon. "All things are possible if you only believe," he said.

"With Faith as big as a mustard seed you can speak to the mountains and they shall be moved. There is no boundary line to Faith.

"I glory in tribulation," the young minister shouted.

He punctuated his sermon by jumping up and down on the rostrum, wildly waving his arms, pleading: "Have faith, have faith."

Gets Encouragement

As the bespectacled minister walked up the aisles, cries of "Yes, Son," came from members of the congregation.

When his sermon concluded the sermon, the Rev. Mr. Jones, face wreathed in a big grin, led the congregation in a chant of "Is The Morning."

Two new members were accepted at the church meeting. Miss Victoria Allen, described as a former member who strayed from the fold, and a young child, Silvia Hammond.

Miss Susie Jones, young mother who accused the Rev. Mr. Jones, was not present at the church services.

On Monday, May 11, the church pastor will take a blood test ordered by the State's Attorney's office.

Kenya Police Murder 450

LONDON (ANP)—Kenya police and troops last week shot down 430 persons and 6,000 were being held for trial in the campaign to halt Mau Mau terrorism.

Colonial Secretary Oliver Lyttleton said the Mau Mau has murdered 270 persons in British East African colony, including 12 Europeans.

Speaking to the House of Commons, he defended the policy of imposing emergency regulations to deal with the situation when Laborites objected to such infringement of natives' legal rights.

Found not guilty were Sinclair Lockhart, a and his 26-year-old son, Norman, both of the 500 block Seagull ave. in Cherry Hill.

The two had been accused of having relations with an 11-year-od welfare child, Glory Bell Pritchett, during the year she lived in the Lockhart home.

The welfare department, however, was not informed of the affair until Feb. 20 when they were notified by Mrs. Kilester Jenkins, 3000 block, Seagull ave.

Pain Between Legs

Mrs. Jenkins testified that the child, while visiting her, complained of a pain between her legs. When asked, Glory Bell related the details of her alleged past relations with Sinclair and Norman Lockhart.

Mrs. Jenkins immediately took her to the doctor and informed the welfare department.
