Bill Bailey Likes His Brother-In-Law

When Pearl Bailey married Louie Bellson, reams of publicity, including practically every picture magazine in the country, was given to the torrid singer's marriage.

But one central figure — once the most important member in the Bailey family — seems to have been overlooked. That's Pearl's brother, Bill Bailey — the tap dancer.

Long a famous stage figure, particularly when heralded as the successor to the late Bill "Bojangles" Robinson's dance kingdom, Bill Bailey has been thrust into almost complete obscurity by Pearl's sensational marriage.

No longer recognized for his own great talent, Bill is now referred to by the public, and listed on theatre show bills, as PEARL BAILEY'S BROTHER.

Bill Not Bitter

But the colorful tap dancer is not bitter about this sudden change of affairs. In fact, he probably gained by the marriage, because Pearl, now on a personal appearance tour with her hubby - drummer, has added Bill to the act at a salary estimated to be close to $1,000 a week.

This is probably the largest salary he's ever made. While always prominent in vaudeville, Bill a care - free spender, has never commanded a startling salary, nor saved any great sum.

At one time he took a short fling into the ministry. Even now during his stage routine, Bill Bailey will quote certain passages of scripture or shout "Amen!"

The Pearl Bailey, Louie Bellson, Bill Bailey triumvirate has been breaking attendance records all along the Eastern seaboard.

Praises Pearl's Marriage

In his dressing room at the Royal Theatre, in Baltimore, Bill Bailey, for the first time, talked for publication about his sister's marriage to a white musician.

"You know Pearl has been married more than once before and I believe she was extremely lucky in getting Louie as a husband. "He is the best brother - in - law I've ever had," declared Bill.

The tap-dancer and Lou Bellson get along famously. In fact, Bill calls Lou "Brother" both on and off the stage. "Why not, he's my brother and I'm proud of him," he explains.

Rolling up his sport - coat sleeve to display a swank, gold-filled wrist-watch, the tap dancer stated: "Brother gave me this watch."

"I was coming off the stage at the Apollo Theatre in New York, one night after doing my act and 'brother' was waiting in the wings.

"He had this little package in his hand and shoved it at me. When I looked puzzled, Brother said: 'Take it, you jerk, it's from Pearl!' and I — we both love you.

"I went back to my dressing room and bawled like a baby.

Pearl Won't Talk

Pearl Bailey occupied a dressing room adjoining Bill's at the Royal theatre. The, velvet-skin soloist refused to comment on her marriage, however.

"There's already been too said," she snapped. Pearl then referred to an uncomplimentary article about the couple which appeared in a national magazine.

Although the two appear to have two widely divergent personalities, Pearl and Bill are presently enjoying amicable relationship.

The expensive wrist watch she and her husband gave Bill is a Switzerland imporation appraised at nearly $1,000. Engraved under the wrist band is the inscription: "To Bill. From Pearl and Lou."

The watch is now an almost inseparable part of the tap dancer's stage equipment. While on stage Bill constantly brushes back his coat sleeve so the stage lights can dance off the glittering case.

Broadcasts His Affection

While on stage, Bill makes no secret of the honest affection he has for Lou.

On the present tour, Don Redman's orchestra is supplying the music. Bellson is on stage throughout the show as drummer with the orchestra.

Between numbers danced during his appearance on stage, Bill Bailey pauses for several minutes of jokes and other devilry.

He will often turn to Louie Bellson, seated at the drums and say: "How am I doing, Brother?"

When the audience starts to snicker, the dancer will snort: "That's alright, you can laugh but Brother and I have a lot in common."

Says Hair Is Similar

"Take our hair for instance. It may not be the [illegible] when I finish with it in the morning, you can [illegible] shine.

"It may be greasy, but it combs easy. It may be red, but the roots, ain't dead," the dancer cracked.

Turning to Lou, Bill then asks: "Ain't that right brother?"

Whenever he's referred to in this manner, Bellson, a young likeable chap, smiles self-consciously and nods his head in agreement. As he clatters offstage amid thunderous applause, Bill repeats—"That's the best brother - in - law I ever had." — BUDDY LONESOME

Exotic Dancer Turns Singer

DETROIT (A N P) The clever Loretta Moore, who made quite a name for herself in theatrical circles as an interpretive dancer is now proving her versatility as a singer with a terrific punch.

She has just completed an eastern tour with one of the top name attractions.

The singer has a very unusual "sexy" voice and is almost a carbon copy of Joyce Bryant in appearance. She sings torch, pops and rhythm and blues tunes.

PRIZE FIGHT — Lalo Rios pummels as Arogon in this scene from "The Ring" which starts Thursday at the Regent.

Regent Scores With 'The Ring'

The King Brothers new film, "The Ring," which will open Thursday at the Regent Theatre is a realistic story of the fight game. It pulls no punches in presenting the brutal facts rather than cinematic fancies. There is ample suspense, ample heroics in the film, but it all has an authentic tone.

Its prizefighter hero is no superman; indeed he loses more fights than he wins. The glamor of the fight game is present in the film, but also its seamy side, as it depicts the rise and thudding fall of a young fighter.

In the role of the bewildered and bedeviled fighter is young Lalo Rios, in his first starring role. Gerald Mohr, most recently seen in "Detective Story" and "The Sniper," is cast as the sympathetic fight manager in the United Artists release. And beautiful brunette Rita Moreno has the feminine lead. Art Aragon, noted lightweight, heads the impressive list of supporting players.

The presence of Art Aragon in the cast is indicative of the care taken by the producers of "The Ring" to assure a realistic flavor to the background. Aragon, not only appears in a spectacular ring battle opposite Lalo Rios, but also appears in key dramatic sequences in the film. A half dozen other leading figures in the boxing world also appear in such roles as referees, commission officials and judges.

'Tall Texan' At The New Albert

A powerful story of man's lust for gold is unfolded in "The Tall Texan," which starts Thursday at the New Albert Theatre, with leading roles enacted by Lloyd Bridges, Lee J. Cobb, Marie Windsor and Luther Adler.

Central figure is effectively portrayed by Bridges, as an escaped convict being returned to prison until the discovery of a rich lode diverts his custodian to join the gold rush. Cobb, always an interesting performer, offers one of his choicest character studies as a ship's captain who has been beached in disgrace.

Miss Windsor is both attractive and capable as a woman torn between greed and her love for the young convict, while Adler gives a fascinating performance as a trader who overcomes his cowardice to seek the precious dust in forbidden territory.

Other key roles are ably played by Sid Saylor, as the wagonmaster, Samuel Herrick, as the sheriff, George Steele, as a fugitive brave, and Dave Train, as an ill-fated traveler.

'Seminole' Due At The Harlem

The dramatic last days of Osceola, famed chief of the Seminole Indians, form a gripping action-packed basis for Universal - International's Technicolor "Seminole," which starts Wednesday at the Harlem Theatre with Rock Hudson, Barbara Hale, Anthony Quinn and Richard Carlson in the starring roles.

Osceola, last of the great American Indian leaders to be brought to the screen is portrayed by Anthony Quinn whose outstanding film roles during his movie career have been Red-skin characterizations. Quinn gives a telling performance as the storied chieftain.

Rock Hudson has the part of a young West Pointer assigned against his wishes to track down the determined Seminole leader with whom he spent his boyhood and gives one of the best performances of his career.

Barbara Hale is cast as a young Florida beauty torn between her love for Hudson and Quinn and has the best opportunity of her screen career to exhibit her undeniably potent appeal.

As the sadistic commander of Army forces assigned to round up the Seminoles, Richard Carlson does an outstanding job and carries off a lion's share of acting honors.

Robert Mitchum In Met Film

Laid on a western Indian reservation shortly after the Civil War, now playing at the Met, "Blood on the Moon" co-stars Robert Mitchum, Barbara Bel Geddes and Robert Preston in the action laden romantic drama.

Mitchum has the role of a wandering cow-puncher and Miss Bel Geddes that of a wealthy cattleman's daughter, with Preston as a ruthless adventurer who plots with a crooked Indian agent to get the cattleman's herds away from him.

The puncher hires out as a gunman on Preston's payroll, but the more he sees of his employer's methods the less he likes them, and he decides to quit his job and leave the country.

But Preston won't permit this, and after a bitter quarrel Mitchum joins forces with the cattleman and the cattleman's militant daughter. How he does it makes for the exciting climax of the offering, with Mitchum trapped with Miss Bel Geddes in a mountain cabin, engaging in a deadly duel with three of his enemies.

'Camino Real' Folds On B'way

NEW YORK (ANP)—The most discussed play of the season, "Camino Real" in which Frank Silvera had an important role, closed on Broadway after 60 performances.

Persons viewing the opus were equally divided. Some said it made them angry, others said it was too far ahead of the times. Few admitted they understood what playwright Tennessee Williams was trying to say.

A Story of the Old South... and Old Discovery

...And it came to pass that a gentleman from Maryland and a Colonel from Kentucky, both distillers and warm friends, fell out over the merits of their whiskies. Hot words followed and they agreed to settle their difference with duelling pistols.

It is said that the duel was averted at the last moment when a mutual friend appeared with a flask containing a blend of the whiskey produced by the gentleman from Maryland mixed with the best from the Kentucky Colonel's cellar, plus whiskey from the mutual friend's own Pennsylvania stock. Today, this blending of the finest whiskies from Kentucky, Maryland and Pennsylvania achieves a smoother, more delightful drink.
