Entered in the Postoffice at Baltimore, Md., as Second-Class Matter, under Act of March 3, 1879.

IT LASTED JUST SEVEN WEEKS—This marriage performed by Bishop Edgar Love of the Methodist church in his Morgan Park home joined John A. Patton, retired Indianapolis funeral director, and the former Mrs. Rachel E. Hatcher of Baltimore on April 2. This week, Mr. Patton asked the court for an order restraining his wife from remaining in or coming to his home. He said they separated on May 9. Also in the photo are, at left, Bishop Love, Major Ezekiel C. Smith of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Patton and Mrs. Howard Brandt of Norfolk, Va. Major Smith and Mrs. Brandt, a sister, were wedding attendants.

gave him a sentence and some advice) to get out of the numbers business) which I thought would be helpful to him.

"He appealed that sentence to a higher court, which he had a perfect right to do. But before that appeal could be acted upon, he was involved again in this second case.

"It is difficult to understand how to handle a man like this who repeats the offense and is so defiant of the law in the repeating. He just went right on doing the same thing.

"I am not offering him any advice this time. But if he or his agents come before me in any similar case again, undoubtedly there will be still another sentence imposed."

Under Domination

In sentencing Mrs. Scarlett, Judge Mason said:

"I am taking into consideration the fact that she was under the domination of her husband; and also that she was pushed or pulled in front of him at the time of the shooting involved in this case.

"Nevertheless, I find that she actively engaged in the business almost daily. It was not a small operation, but a substantial operation; probably one of the largest in the city.

"I hope that hereafter, she will forego any inclination to get back into the numbers business, either on her own account or in an attempt to carry on whatever is left of his business."

Must Avoid Lottery

Addressing similar remarks to Miss Wilkes, the judge advised her: "If it's possible, stay out of the lottery business or anything connected with gambling."

Making a plea for leniency for Mr. Scarlett, his attorney, R. Palmer Ingram told the judge:

"The numbers business has been a failure for him from every standpoint. He is now penniless. He has lost everything. The government got most of his property, about $60,000 or $70,000 worth.

Has Learned Lesson

"When he went back into the operation after the first case, it was merely a question of eking out a livelihood. But he has learned his lesson. With the seven-year term he is now serving, he will have plenty of time to regret his actions and think about the seriousness of the situation."

Mrs. Scarlett and Miss Wilkes were represented by Ellis Levin.

He pointed out that Mrs. Scarlett is in poor health, that she is concerned about the welfare of their two children, and that away from Mr. Scarlett's influence "there is no danger of her re-engaging in the numbers business" because she is prepared to support herself as a teacher of music.

Children Sickly

He read a letter from Dr. James Pair which described the poor health of Mrs. Scarlett who still carries a bullet in her side; and the sickly condition of the two children, an adopted daughter, Mabel, 11; and Austin Jr., 5, whose mother is Miss Wilkes. The physician's letter said that Mrs. Scarlett was under continuous emotional stress and that care of the children, together with worry over the family plight was taxing her nervous resources "to the utmost degree."

A letter from Father A. J. Hogan of St. Pius Catholic Church made an appeal for Mrs. Scarlett, primarily because of her children who attend St. Pius School.

Children May Suffer

He that Mrs. Scarlett "wants the children to have every opportunity for a religious education" and that he feared that the children would suffer if she were sent away.

The Scarletts and Miss Wilkes (now Mrs. Stanley Jasmin) were convicted in December 1952, following a three day jury trial.

Principal witnesses against them were Mrs. Lillie Williams of the 600 Blk. W. Lanvale st., who said she wrote numbers for Mr. Scarlett; and Samuel J. Todd, 42, of the 500 block McMechen st., who fired the shot at Mr. Scarlett which struck his wife during a numbers payoff dispute.

Shooting Case Pending

Because of their testimony against the Scarletts, Mrs. Williams was released from her jail term and Mr. Todd will be prosecuted on a less serious charge in the shooting case.

Originally charged with intent to murder Mr. Scarlett, Mr. Todd pleaded guilty to common assault on both Mr. Scarlett and his wife.

Because Judge Mason was not prepared to pronounce sentence on Mr. Todd on Monday, his case was postponed to a later date.

Arson Charge Dropped

The Scarletts and Miss Wilkes were also charged with obstructing justice for failure to cooperate with police investigating how Mrs. Scarlett got shot.

But after their sentence in the numbers case, the state dropped the other charges. State prosecutors were J. Harold Grady and Theodore C. Waters.

Women Dressed Smartly

Mrs. Scarlett and Miss Wilkes entered the courtroom together 9:45 a.m., Monday. Mrs. Scarlett wore a smartly tailored black suit and a light straw hat. Miss Wilkes, bareheaded, wore an orchid summer suit.

Under police guard, Mr. Scarlett entered the courtroom at 10:05 a.m. He wore a light tan summer suit, a straw hat of the same shade, a gayly colored tie and brown shoes.

None of them said anthing when sentence was pronounced.

Earnest Conversation

After the sentencing, they sat together until Mrs. Scarlett and Miss Wilkes left the court at 10:40 a.m.

Then afterwards, Mr. Scarlett, sitting alone, was joined by another woman with whom he talked earnestly while other court cases were being heard. He seemed to be giving her instructions because she took notes as they talked.

At 11:45 Mr. Scarlett, accompanied by one police guard, was driven back to the penitentiary where he began his seven-year term last Wednesday after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review his case.

pletely the mental examination."

The President spoke at the tenth anniversary luncheon of the College Fund at the National Press Club. The luncheon was given to honor the General Education Board, established in 1902 by John D. Rockefeller to promote education within the United States without distinction of race, sex, or creed.

The General Education Board has contributed not only to the individual colleges, which are members of the UNCF, but it has responded generously to the joint program of financing colored private colleges in the South.

Cited For Support

The Board was cited at the luncheon for its contribution to education in the United States and for its support of higher education for colored people.

John D. Rockefeller Jr., chairman of the Board, was unable to come to Washington for the luncheon, and his son, John D. Rockefeller 3d, received the citation as President Eisenhower looked on.

The citation was presented by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute and of the College Fund.

Edward A. Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly presided at the luncheon.

Dr. Patterson took 10 minutes before the arrival of President Eisenhower. Mr. Weeks told the luncheon guests that the development of the colored colleges was "One of the finest examples of team play the country has ever seen."

Before Mr. Eisenhower spoke, the Hampton Institute Choir, under the direction of Henry N. Switten, sang a spiritual and a folksong.

Dr. Patterson, who had about 1,500 word prepared statement to make in presenting the citation of the General Education Board to Mr. Rockefeller, cut out everything except the first paragraph, two sentences saying he was presenting the citation "with joy and humility," and the citation itself, which he read.

Mrs. Sampson Speaks

Others on the program, whom Mr. Eisenhower did not hear included Mrs. Edith S. Sampson, of Chicago, formerly an alternate delegate to the United Nations General Assembly, and Dorothy Maynor, the concert soprano.

After Dr. Patterson presented the citation to Mr. Rockefeller, President Eisenhower posed for photographers with Dr. Patterson and Mr. Rockefeller.

The President also said, in part:

"As I see it, you people today who are supporting the College Fund, are not only supporting the idea that men are equal, but you are making it unnecessary for a man to appear in a competitive place in our country, and have less opportunity than his brothers have for the mental training that would have given him exactly the same opportunities as that company as any other.

Praise For Rockefellers

"I applaud the work you are doing, and delight particularly to join with you in bringing my own very deep sense of obligation to the Rockefeller family—a family that has this type of need, and has done something within the terms of private enterprise, private initiative, and co-operative, spontaneous co-operation, and did not wait on some kind of law to get a thing done that they saw needed to be done."

Mr. Eisenhower left immediately after he had spoken.

The luncheon also marked the beginning of the public phase of a national 5-year program to raise $25,000,000 in capital funds for the United Negro Colleges.

Mr. Rockefeller initiated the capital funds program with a gift of $5,000,000. The seven-member board directing the National Mobilization of Resources for the United Colleges announced other gifts which brought total commitments to $12,000,000.

Seated at the speakers table at the luncheon were James P. P. Brawley, president, Clark College, Atlanta; Lindsley F. Kimball, New York City; Mrs. Chauncey L. Waddell, Washington; P. B. Young Sr., publisher; Samuel D. Leidesdorf, Raymond C. Firestone, Akron, Ohio; Mrs. Edith S. Sampson, Chicago; Richard K. Mellon, Pittsburgh; Robert W. Woodruff, Atlanta; Frederick D. Patterson, Tuskegee; Edward A. Weeks Jr., John D. Rockefeller 3d; Alfred P. Sloan Jr., New York City; Devereaux C. Josephs, New York City; Benjamin E. Mays, president, Morehouse College;

C. D. Jackson, special assistant to President Eisenhower; Miss Dorothy Maynor, Thomas A. Morgan, chairman of the UNCF; William J. Trent Jr., the Fund's executive director; George H. Burchum, treasurer, and Arthur B. Brenner.

Other luncheon guests included members of the Cabinet and of the Senate and House of Representatives, bankers, industrialists, and educators.

ored persons have served in these capacities.

The jury's citation also refers to the "notable accomplishments" of the Governor's Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations, which was instrumental in the elimination of racial segregation at Ford's Theatre in 1952 and, according to its recent report to the Governor, has also been concerned with the problem of discrimination against colored persons in Baltimore retail establishments.

The jury also noted the Governor's support in repealing the State Jim Crow Law and in admitting colored pupils to the "A" Course at Baltimore Polytechnic Institute and to the graduate schools of the University of Maryland.

Broadcasts Set

The entire presentation will be broadcast by transcription on Station WITH at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, May 31, and excerpts will be carried on "This Week in Baltimore" by WFBR at 6:30 of that day.

It is also planned to have parts of the ceremony appear on the regular news broadcasts of WMAR-TV at 7 p.m. and at the close of programming on the day of the presentation.

$250 Cash Award

Each year a recipient of the award, which includes a citation of merit and a check for $250, is selected by a jury on behalf of the Foundation.

Purpose is to call attention to each year's developments in the field of race relations as they affect colored Marylanders. The jury receive suggestions from various community leaders and are asked to designate "an outstanding achievement—not necessarily "the" outstanding one of the previous calendar year.

They are also requested by the Foundation to give primary recognition to activities which reduce racial discrimination rather than "activities of a welfare nature, necessary and desirable as these may be."

Previous recipients of the award have been:

The Sunpapers of Baltimore, for its integration of colored on news coverage and for editorial support of justice for colored persons;

The Baltimore City Department of Education, for its intercultural program;

The Baltimore City Medical Society, for its admission of colored persons to membership;

Loyola College at Evergreen, for its integration of colored persons students;

Robert Freedman, president of the Yellow Cab Company, for affording equal employment opportunities to colored drivers.

EVICTED—Mr. and Mrs. Mike Decatur and their daughter who were evicted from their Parkchester Apartments in the Bronx Wednesday by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

respondent told the vice president that he felt it was to the advantage of the company that reporters stay, for with no other witness the women could charge that the company officials had done all kinds of things to them. The officials agreed to let the press stay.

Soon the police and other press representatives were downstairs on the street demanding entrance. Mrs. Decatur said officials told police there were no women in the building.

At 11:30, however, the officials decided to admit the press who came in and photographed the women and asked what they would do about toilet facilities.

After the press left, the women continued to sit. They sat until 7:30 a.m., when they gave up because it was "physically impossible to stay longer." They were deeply concerned over the pregnant mother.

Next day when police arrived for eviction, Mrs. Decatur was inside with about 60 supporters. Police battered down the door. Mrs. Decatur insisted on being the last to leave the apartment.

It was a Jewish holiday in the Bronx and the kids were out of school. As the family was evicted children stood around the police and jeered, "Do you call this a brotherhood?"

Still without a home, the Decaturs are living at present with a friend in the Bronx. They have two children, Michael, 13 months and Michele, a girl, five.

Meanwhile, Metropolitan gave no indication of renting to colored families in Parkchester. A Bronx observer commented: "It was just like Mississippi."

And it was.

Bishop Love Moves 10 And 20-Year Ministers

New Pastors At Catonsville, Orchard Street

'Secret' Marriage, Robbery Keep Session Lively

RICHMOND — A robbery, a "secret" marriage and the moving of several 10 to 20-year pastors provided the small talk and the controversy during the 90th annual meeting of Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist church.

An audience of 5,000 was on hand to listen to the appointments made by Bishop Edgar A. Love of Baltimore, the presiding prelate. One of the highlights of this part of the session was that the Rev. J. J. Barnes, pastor of Orchard St. church, Baltimore, had a petition from 800 of his members begging the Bishop to return him.

Retired Just The Same

Despite this, he was among the clerics retired because of age and the Rev. D. M. Pleasants sent there. He had served hard st. for 27 years.

The robbery took place in the Richmond YMCA. The Rev. Oliver Franklin, a chaplain at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, returned from a soul-satisfying meeting to find several of his own soles—attached to two pair of shoes—missing along with his bag, three suits and eight shirts.

Police have yet to catch the robber who got into the chaplain's room by boring a hole through the flimsy beaverboard wall. However, they did locate his shoes—in a local pawnshop.

License Uncovered

The wedding was uncovered when the AFRO reporter made his weekly check of the marriage licenses issued at City Hall.

Among the 50 or more licenses listed was one issued to "Rev. Leander A. Dyson, pastor of Metropolitan church, Pomonkey, Md. The Rev. D. M. Pleasants, former Washington district superintendent, officiated.

The other 10-year pastors who were moved to other churches were:

The Revs. N. B. Carrington, 22 years at Catonsville, Md., moved to Union Memorial in Baltimore, formerly Whatcoat at Madison and North aves.; E. E. Williams, 20 years at Frederick, Md., made superintendent of the North Baltimore District succeeding Fairfax King;

12 Years At Boyd

The Revs. C. E. Smallwood, 12 years at Boyd, Md., moved to Linden church, Washington, D.C., and R. Harry V. Hayes at Jones Memorial in Washington, sent to Alexandria, Va.

Clerics who were retired and for whom a special candlelight service was held were the Rev. Ely Lofton, formerly West Baltimore District superintendent; C. E. Queen, Pittsburgh; J. D. Brown, Vienna; Fairfax King, North Baltimore District superintendent; J. J. Barnes and S. W. Fields, Baltimore.

Resolutions Passed

On the final day the conference passed a resolution urging the organization to make "effective movements of passive resistance against all forms of discrimination based on color."

The resolution grew out of a stirring description of a Richmond bus incident by the Rev. C. C. Weber, president, Virginia CIO council.

The incident, which occurred last week, resulted in the arrest of five local high school pupils following the refusal of one to move to the rear of the bus.

"Peaceable Means"

The resolution urged "our churches to organize and make articulate social action committees to assist in the fight for full citizenship on the local level, employing the peaceable means used by our Lord."

The Rev. Joshua O. Williams, pastor, Sharp St. church, Baltimore, read the resolution. It was prepared by him and the Revs. H. A. Parker and B. P. Jordan, Rahmond.

The conference also adopted a resolution urged by W. Lester Banks, executive secretary, Virginia NAACP, opening the doors of churches to all regardless of race.

Small Church Resolution

Passed a "swallow the small church" resolution requiring each district superintendent to study the churches in his district with the view toward creating larger parishes that can pay their pastors $2,200 a year or more.

The resolution also directed that each superintendent appoint a committee to aid him in this study.

Defeated, a motion to change the district from six to five. The motion was presented by the Rev. J. D. Foy, pastor, Mt. Zion in D.C. It was seconded by the Rev. J. F. Monroe, Arlington church, Arlington, Va.

Approved a budget of $850,000. The Rev. Joshua O. Williams, said the budget was aimed chiefly at "strengthening support to church-related colleges and at strengthening youth work in the conference.

Special Appointments

Special appointments were made as follows:

W. T. Key, conference secretary of evangelism; G. W. Williams, chaplain, U. S. Army; H. D. Asbury, professor at Huston-Tillotson College; Levi B. Miller Jr., executive secretary of Christian education; I. A. Moye, conference secretary of missions; H. L. Cornish, director, Morgan Christian center;

Pratt Library Given 12 Masonic Shrubs

Twelve shrubs designed to beautify the entrance to the Pennsylvania ave. branch, have been donated by the King David Masonic Lodge, Prince Hall affiliation. According to Miss Jane Stevens, branch librarian.

The shrubs, evergreen japonicas, are to be planted in large window boxes adjacent to the front door.

Brief presentation exercises will be held in the branch Friday at 11 a.m., when Miss Amy Winslow, Pratt director, will formally receive the gift from Donald D. Scott, the lodge's worshipful master, and Robert B. Croxton, grand master of the first Masonic district.
