It's wonderful the way Chewing-Gum Laxative acts chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

★ Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different: Unlike most other laxatives, FEEN-A-MINT's shaking action too soon—right in the stomach where food is being digested. But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your peppy, energetic self again! Get FEEN-A-MINT today at drugstores in price—still 25c, 50c or only 75c.

Washingtonians Ready For Democracy—Post

'Chip Out Of Segregation,' Says N.Y. Herald-Tribune

BALTIMORE

The Supreme Court's decision ending restaurant discrimination in Washington was hailed editorially by most daily newspapers.

In contrast, a mixed reaction greeted the court's order for reargument of the five school segregation cases.

The most enthusiastic reception of the cafe ruling came from the influential Washington Post.

Under the title, "Community Pattern," the Post said:

"The way in which Washington has adjusted to the Supreme Court decision in the Thompson restaurant case affords another clear indication that this community is a great deal more civilized than some of its decisions give it credit for being.

No Disorder or Friction

"There were calamity howlers who predicted riots if colored persons should be admitted to legitimate theatres in the Capital: first the Gayety (known today as the Schubert), then the Arena, and at last the National have been operating without racial discrimination—and without the slightest trouble, disorder or friction.

"Similar forebodings were expressed when certain playgrounds were opened on an interracial basis; but with the exception of a couple of isolated and special situations, the changeover was accomplished without serious difficulty.

"Those who shook their heads over equality in public eating places can now see the same result there; not a single untoward incident has been reported since the Supreme Court decree went into effect on Wednesday.

Lesson In Experience

"There is a lesson in this experience for those who now voice forebodings about a nonsegregated public school system. The lesson is that Washingtonians of both races adapt themselves naturally to democratic practices, that they accept Americanism as a matter of course, and that they can be counted on, generally speaking, to behave with grace and generosity.

"This is an assumption that can guide those who will be responsible for planning school integration in the event that the Supreme Court should require such a change next year. It is high time for the planning to be perfected and for the public to be given a look at the projected arrangements.

"Resistance to equality of treatment for the white and colored races in Washington has commonly been based on the contention that equality ran counter to a settled community pattern of racial relations.

"If that argument ever had any validity, it has none now. The pattern of race relations in Washington is becoming a decent and democratic one."

Cautioned To Relax

It took the Scripps-Howard tabloid, The Washington News only three paragraphs to express its approval of the court's decision. Under the heading, "Relax," it said:

"The Supreme Court ruled restaurants are required to serve all decently well-behaved persons, regardless of race.

"The sociological roof won't fall, as anyone knows who has traveled in South America, or in the Caribbean area, or nearby cities in the north, or in western Europe, where racial non-discrimination is the rule.

"Non - discrimination among diners can be as gourmanded and unexciting as non - discrimination in the jobs of cooking for diners and waiting on diners, all of which we already have."

Cites Ike's Promise

Recalling that President Eisenhower had pledged to eliminate segregation in the nation's capital, the N.Y. Herald Tribune, termed the court's action, a "Chip Out of Segregation."

Said the Tribune:

"To the layman it may appear that the Supreme Court traveled an extraordinary long and indirect course in emerging with decision that restaurants in the District of Columbia must hereafter serve colored persons.

"But the question before the Court was fight and legalistic. The justices had to decide whether an anti - discrimination law passed by the local assembly eighty years ago, back in the days when the people of Washington enjoyed a measure of self-government, ever had any validity.

"And even if Congress properly delegated such legislative authority, had not the law expired by repeal or dissue?

Douglas Gives Answer

"Justice Douglas, speaking for an undivided court, gave the forthright answer that was demanded. He found that the law was proper at the time it place, was never repealed, and carries as much force in 1953 as on the day of enactment.

"All this is rather a roundabout means toward a definite end. At the court was doubtless conscious. What happened was that one conspicuous aspect of racial discrimination in the national capital has been stricken down. The principle of home rule won an important victory.

"One cannot help thinking back to last year's presidential campaign, when the Republican nominee promised: 'We shall eliminate every vestige of segregation in the District of Columbia.'

"While the Supreme Court is hardly concerned with President Eisenhower's pledges, it is surely realistic enough to see that the present decision takes a big chip out of segregation.

Questions Posed

"Whether this indicates anything as to the court's attitude on the all-important cases of school segregation, which have been set for reargument in the fall, remains to be seen.

"But the Supreme Court has posed some extremely specific questions which seems to indicate a disposition to come to close and practical grips. By praising the Supreme Court for "narrowing the area of racial segregation," the Philadelphia Bulletin confesses puzzlement over the need for reargument of the school cases.

Says the Bulletin:

"The U.S. Supreme Court has settled, without dissent, an issue of racial segregation, ruling that restaurants in the District of Columbia cannot legally refuse to serve Negroes. This is one more step narrowing the area of discrimination in the U.S.

Scope Expanded

"In the most outstanding segregation case before it, however, that concerning the right of public school facilities for white and Negro Children, the high court has seen fit not only to postpone consideration until next fall but to expand the scope of the whole argument.

"The charge that Kansas, Delaware, Virginia, South Carolina and the District of Columbia are violating the 14th Amendment to the Constitution by compelling colored children to attend schools separate from whites has confronted the Supreme Court with necessity to make a crucial decision.

"Should it reaffirm its historic separate and equal doctrine, or should it rule that segregation itself constitutes inequality?

"The perplexed and divided justices have decided to take refuge in a new explanation of the intent and purpose of the 14th Amendment and to ask all interested parties to join in the search by adding questions thereto to a number of questions.

Evidence Sought

"These are designed to determine if there is any evidence that Congress and the state legislatures intended, in adopting the amendment, that it would abolish segregation in the public schools; whether if it was so understood, a later congress or the Supreme Court could construe the amendment as outlawing segregation; whether, if it is decided that the amendment makes segregation illegal, the court is compelled to end it at once or may permit a gradual adjustment, and how violations of an anti-segregation decree could be handled.

"To a lay observer these questions might seem to call for retroactive mind reading of an impossible sort, but the court is to indicate the complexity of the legal issues involved.

"Yet the 14th Amendment is clear enough. It states that all persons born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and that no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States.

No Room For JC

"Where is there room or sanction in these phrases for segregation because of race or color?

"An even older document, the Declaration of Independence, asserts that "All men are created equal." All men, not just white men. The legalistic hairsplitters ought to read that declaration again."

'No More Death'—Prophet Jones Says

WASHINGTON

Prophet Jones, who received wide publicity recently because of the "mink coat" he reportedly received from two of his followers, told an AFRO reporter Wednesday that people would live indefinitely within the next 47 years.

The prophesy was made at the Pentagon in the offices of James E. Evans, civilian assistant to the Secretary of Defense. The "Prophet" had been invited as the special guest of Mrs. Edna Dabney, Washington Budget Analyst for the Department of Defense.

"Within 47 years, according to the Bible, death will be abolished, and people will live on indefinitely," he declared.

Gold Topped Cane

Dressed immaculately in a plaid lightweight summer suit, fab-collared shirt, and sporting a gold-topped cane, the "Prophet," who accurately predicted the outcome of the Presidential election, asserted:

"I preach obedience to God, a clean life, abstinence from all nicotines and alcohol.

"I teach my parishioners and followers to marry when they see fit, but they must live clean lives. (Prophet Jones is unmarried) They must abstain from all card games and social dances," he said.

Three Rings

Flourishing his left hand, on which he wore three rings, and prominently displaying two bracelets on his wrist, Prophet Jones disclosed that he had brought his modiste, Mrs. Rebecca Goodwing, along.

"She makes all the fabulous gowns I wear," he said.

Prophet Jones has parishes in 36 states, the West Indies, Jamaica, India and Africa, he said. His followers celebrate his birthday in much-the same manner as Christmas is celebrated.

The birthday celebration will be held in Detroit and will continue for eight days, the "Prophet" revealed, beginning November 24, when he will be 48 years old.

The first seven days of the "fabulous" birthday celebration are called the "Philanthym," which is equivalent to the Jewish "Roshashanah," and the Gentile Christmas.

The last, or eighth day is called the "Hushhoomelanna," which is the same as the Jewish "Yom Kippur" and the Gentile "New Year." (Prophet Jones laughingly called on his secretary to spell these words to the befuddled reporter.)

While here, Prophet Jones (James F. Jones) and his party lived in a four-room suite at the Statler Hotel, and traveled in a beige limousine.

Greek Newspaperman Puzzled By Racial Discrimination Here

NEW YORK — Reporting on his observations of race relations in this country, Christon Oeconomon, Greek newspaperman, has written a series of articles on various phases of the problem for the Athens Embros, a leading publication of that ancient city.

After recounting an interview here with Walter White, executive NAACP secretary, Mr. Oeconomon concludes that "it is a puzzling fact that in a country of real democracy, like our great ally, the United States, where the worker, farmer, scientist and honest citizen enjoys freedom and conveniences, there are colored people who, despite equal obligations, have not the right to live like real free American citizens."

TURPIN AWAITS YOUNG - OLSON WINNER

From A To Z with Sam Lacy

Briton Gains Title Shot In Victory Over Humez

LONDON — Having soundly thrashed Charles Humez, of France, in the European version of the world middleweight title picture, Randy Turpin, of Leamington Spa, this week was awaiting the outcome of Friday night's fight between Paddy Young and Carl (Bobo) Olson at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Reason for the Briton's interest in the Friday scuffle is that he is slated to oppose the victor in a world championship bout come fall.

Unless something unforeseen happens, Turpin and the Garden winner will tangle in a long-awaited dispute to determine the successor to retired champion Sugar Ray Robinson.

Beat Sugar Ray

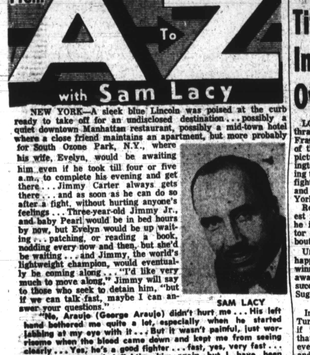
In any case, it is likely that Turpin will rule heavy favorite, if for no other reason than that he is the only middleweight ever to lick the classy Robinson, and he did it when the Harlem Dandy's crown was on the line.

Sugar Ray retained his crown in Madison Square Garden on July 10, 1951, in London, but lost it on a 10-round knockout two months later in Yankee Stadium, New York.

Even Fight

Young, 5 feet, 8 inches of solid power and stamina, is a rugged fighter. He has been hampered by involuntary inactivity but has come back in tremendous shape and has been training for this fight as he never conditioned before in his career. When in top condition, Young is tough to beat. He has had only one bad fight in his entire career and that was when he went in against Gene Hairston just before entering the Army and the fight was stopped in the second round.

Olson, slope - shouldered and older than he looks because of a prematurely - balding head, walked into this fight with a winning streak of nine straight fights. The Honolulu - born son of a Swedish - American Father and Portuguese - Hawaiian mother, has been a consistently good fighter. He has power and boxes well in deceptive weave. His fights well either at long range or in close and takes a good wallop.



SAM LACY

But it wasn't painful, just worrisome when the blood came down and kept me from seeing . . . Yes, he's a good fighter . . . fast, yes, very fast . . . plenty . . . I wouldn't mind fighting him again, but I have been thinking about other things lately . . . things I'd like to do if I get over this one . . . Sure, I'd love to fight Carmen Basilio (Gavilan, welterweight champion) . . .
