mon's Temple of Truth, 14th and T sts., nw., and the church has about 135 members.

He stated further that he knew Miss Harrington, that he helped her get her department store job, and that while she is not a member of his church, she had been "selling chances" to help raise funds for the summer camp.

The radio minister also admitted that he saw the young woman in his office on the date of the alleged offense, but stated emphatically he did not prescribe any medicine for her or perform an illegal operation.

"I have built up too much of a reputation to become involved in something like that," he said.

Asked To See Him

The minister said he was buying gloves in the 20th st. department store where Miss Harrington works when she said to him, "I want to see you."

He stated that on the day of the alleged operation he had appointments with five persons who signed their names in his appointment book.

Elder Mayfield recalled that Miss Harrington was not among those registering. In his office, he said, she appeared nervous and was coughing. He offered her some of his cough medicine, which she refused, he added.

The minister said he suggested she go home and rest. He further recalled that Miss Harrington mentioned the name of a patent medicine for delayed menses and he told her he had seen it used.

Visited By Police

Miss Harrington left, he said, and he did not think anything else about the incident until 1:30 p.m., Wednesday, when Officer Winemiller came to his office.

He showed the police officer his appointment book, he said, and was asked by Officer Winemiller to come down Thursday and identify the young woman.

Elder Mayfield said that he was asked to return to the District Attorney's office on Friday when he was charged on both counts by Wilbur Sewell, assistant district attorney.

Her Statement

Miss Harrington confirmed for the AFRO the statement she reportedly gave police. She added that she had been to see Elder Mayfield for advice on other occasions.

Her statement to police follows:

"She had gone to the office of a man named Mayfield on the first floor of a local hotel and he had performed an illegal operation on her.

"She said that he inserted a tube into her body and placed red and white medicine in the tube. Then he told her to get some Humphrey's No. 11 pills and take them.

"She said that she paid him $3 for the operation and later bought the pills at a drugstore at 18th and U sts., nw.

"After taking the pills, she rode around with her friend, Warren Richards of the 200 block 17th st., nw.

"She said that she began to have pains about 3 o'clock on the morning of June 20 and was removed from her home to Garfield hospital in a private car by her father, Alonzo Harrington.

"She was examined and treated by a physician of the staff and was admitted in a fair condition. She was discharged on June 22 after being treated for vaginal bleeding."

Miss Harrington told the AFRO that she attended Dunbar high school. She said that while she sold tickets to help support the minister's summer camp, she was not a member of his congregation.

Lives In Baltimore

Elder Mayfield, who makes his home in Baltimore in the 1100 block Longwood st., with his school teacher wife and their four sons, is well known in the Monumental City, having served as pastor of the junior section of Metropolitan Methodist church from 1943-44.

While still a youngster, he attended the Metropolitan church Sunday school.

A native of Boydton, Va., where he is establishing his summer camp, he told the AFRO he was educated in Boydtown and at one time pursued a commercial course at Baltimore's Douglass high.

He said he served four years in the Navy aboard the Aircraft Carrier Saratoga, receiving an honorable discharge in 1939.

The affable minister added that he was first ordained in the AME church in Portland, Ore., in 1939, later affiliated with the Methodist church during the Washington Annual Conference meeting in Pittsburgh in 1944.

Still later, he said, he affiliated with Baptist churches and in 1947 set up the Rehoboth Christian church in Baltimore.

This he abandoned when he established his present church, King Solomon's Temple, in Washington. It was incorporated this year.

Police Court Records

Police court records in Baltimore show that in October, 1944, a James W. W. Mayfield was fined $150 in Criminal Court for practicing medicine without a license. This person was known as "Dr." Mayfield.

In pleading guilty at that time, the accused man said he had paid an association $10 for a naturopathic examiner's license which permitted him to practice for a year, and that he had trained for the profession at a Philadelphia school.

In May, 1945, this Dr. Mayfield was convicted of illegal fortune telling and fined $250 in Northwestern police station, Baltimore.

Arrest in this case followed a raid on an office he maintained in the 1300 block Madison ave., and came after Policewoman Violet Hill Whyte investigated a circular which described him as a "psychic counselor — see me today and be lucky tomorrow."

was established the very first day when Thurgood Marshall announced that these cases would not only be re-argued but startled the delegates and the entire nation with the announcement that the NAACP has already drawn up plans to take legal steps to end discrimination in transportation, public housing, waiting rooms and professional and graduate schools.

"We're going to see to it," Mr. Marshall said defiantly, "that all the states join the union."

Hardly had Mr. Marshall announced this new legal program when Dr. Channing H. Tobias presented the convention with a new fund raising program aimed at raising 10 million dollars in a 10-year period for use in fighting "until the last vestige of Jim crow is wiped out."

Dr. Tobias's plan was labeled a "Fighting Fund For Freedom" and the delegates cheeringly and confidently endorsed it despite the fact that it calls for a million-dollar-a-year budget when the organization has been carrying-on on a $365,000 a year budget.

Says Ike To Keep Pledge

The air of militance and confidence continued to build up in the various workshops staged at the convention on the second day and on Wednesday night City Councilman Archibald Carey of Chicago added fuel to the fire by expressing confidence that President Eisenhower would keep his pledge to eliminate second-class citizenship.

By Thursday the delegates and NAACP officials were practicing what they were preaching and this was never more evident than when the 22-man national board arose from its dining tables at the YMCA and stalked out in a body immediately upon learning that the YM had discriminated against colored delegates to the convention.

The board members paid for their uneaten dinners and walked out with never a backward look.

Marshall Hits Alarmists

Thursday night, with Kelly Alexander of Charlotte, N.C., presiding, Thurgood Marshall again took the podium in Keil auditorium. This time his words were deliberate and weighted, but this only served to emphasize the defiance and the confidence with which he spoke.

"Some will tell you that if they integrate the schools there will be bloodshed and riots," he said this will not happen. But if it does we will not be the first people to fight for what belongs to us," he declared.

Meanwhile, as the convention continued to progress, the delegations were hearing nationally known authorities attack various facets of segregation and were preparing programs and resolutions in opposition to jim-crow living.

The resolutions and their expressed opposition ranged from attacking discrimination in the Missouri State Legislature to jim crow in major league baseball.

Nothing Mamby-Pamby

There was nothing mamby-pamby about the way the delegates stated their opposition to such things. They simply pointed to a discrimination and said "we don't like this and we want it stopped."

The adopted resolutions included, among others, a sound thumping to Senator McCarthy and his book-burning program, a slap at communism, an attack on the method in which the loyalty program is being handled.

They also called for continuation of the race relations program in housing, called on President Eisenhower to implement his civil rights program, scored attacks on academic freedom and rapped the designation of colored people in a newspaper crime stories.

White Tribed, Wires Dulles

Midway the convention Mr. White became provoked at being hounded by reporters for comment on the banning of his book, "Rising Wind," from government libraries and wired Secretary of State J. Foster Dulles, Mr. Dulles answered, denying the report was true virtually apologizing to Mr. White.

Late in the convention, while the busy delegates were going even deeper and more fully into attacking jim crow, a delegation representing the powerful AME church appeared at the convention.

The group was apparently intent on having the convention censure Mr. White for making an address at Central State college in Wilberforce, Ohio, on grounds that his presence there was endorsing Ohio's soil.

Convention Backs White

Once again the delegates showed that they were not in a trifling mood. They listened patiently to the complaints of the AME church delegation and then informed them in no uncertain terms that they did not find anything wrong with Mr. White's appearance at the school.

The militant youth delegation to the convention flexed its muscles on Friday and became involved with experienced chairman Robert C. Weaver on a minor parliamentary issue.

Mr. Weaver attempted to spank the youth delegates and set them down, but they were not to be dismissed lightly and—in one of the second liveliest fights on the conventionfloor—the youngsters soundly thrashed the chairman before the whole convention, appealing his ruling from the chair and beating him out on the appeal.

Dallas Next Meeting Place

The internal harmony and the external militancy of the convention was even more clearly shown on Saturday when the delegates met to select the site of the next convention.

A pitched battle along strict North-South lines saw the convention finally awarded to Dallas, Texas over New York City by the margin of only five votes.

After the bitter battle, the most fiery of the whole convention, the convention immediately closed ranks again. Chairman Theodore Berry of Cincy, Ohio, also received a reversal in this session.

Spingarn Medal To Williams

Friday night brought the highlighting award of the spingarn medal to architect Paul Williams of California and an address by Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri.

Senator Symington, who revealed that his mother was one of the founders of the NAACP, was high in his praise of the work of the organization.

HOSTESS—Baltimore members of the National Association of Ministers' Wives, who will be hostesses to the annual convention, beginning Tuesday, will include, left to right: Mesdames S. G. Dobson, Daisy King, Bessie Barrow, R. Brooks, Clara Banks, and Viola Jackson.

ry, Edna O. Gray of Baltimore, and Cora Jordan of Los Angles.

Refresher Courses

Business sessions will begin on July 1 at Bethel AME church with morning refresher courses as the main features. These courses, designed to help the ministers' wives with their church and community work, will be headed by Dr. Mary O. Ross of Chicago and Dr. Alboulu.

Other highlights of the first day's session will include a sight-seeing trip, a reception by the Civic League Board with Mrs. Douglass Sheppard as hostess, and a Founders Day pageant.

Fellowship Reception

On Thursday afternoon a symposium will be held with "Ministers Wives United For Peace" as the subject. Mrs. Harrison Bryant will be moderator. Discussion leaders will be Mesdames Bruce McDonald, John Tilley, Mildred Atkinson of the council of churches, and Roy Lofton.

Climax of the meeting will be a fellowship reception to be held at Union Baptist church on Thursday evening when gold pins and certificates will be awarded.

—Storm

Monday, city crewmen still had not removed the debris from that section.

One tree in the 1700 block of Ashland st. had to be blocked off to traffic where a tree fell across the street.

Gutters throughout areas in the path of the storm were filled with trash washed up during the storm.

Many Cars Hit

Cars with their roofs smashed in from falling trees were seen in several cases throughout the city. Monday afternoon one was still in the 1500 block of Eden st.

At Arlington ave. and Mulberry st., a tree was blown down damaging two cars owned respectively by Arthur Williams, 1943 W. Mulberry st., and Moses Arthur, 1101 W. Mulberry st.

Lightning struck the rear of the St. Paul's Methodist Church, at 901 W. Saratoga st. A small fire was started but firemen confined the blaze to the area around a fuse box. Police placed iron standards around the church to guard passers - by from possible falling debris.

At the height of the storm there was a fire in the 2200 block Penrose ave., in a house occupied by Paul Roberson. Firemen soon extenguished the blaze which did slight damage to the kitchen.

The storm brought brief relief from the heat, Sunday night, but Monday the temperature was back in the 90's and Baltimoreans were again sweltering in the humidity.

—'Mr. Fats'

E. Wyche, alias "Mr. Fats," who lived at 1412 W. Franklin st.

For Crowner's murder, police are hunting Lewis "R. Smallwood, 39, who lived with Miss Bowles at 204 N. Schroeder st.

Authorities believe Smallwood has been captured in Mount Holly, N.J., as the result of a 13-state teletype alarm sent out for his arrest soon after Crowner's death. A man giving Smallwood's name was arrested in New Jersey on Sunday for violating traffic regulations.

When the man couldn't pay the $115 assessed in fines, he was jailed. A routine check disclosed Baltimore police had dispatched the alarm for a man answering the prisoner's name and description.

Local authorities were notified and late Monday night a detective detail was dispatched to New Jersey to determine whether the prisoner detained there was the murder suspect.

Gillian Shot In Chest

Gillian was shot in a second floor apartment at 8 N. Stricker st., which he had shared with Gladys ennis until a few days ago.

According to Miss Dennis, the man returned, Saturday afternoon, while she was out, and broke the front door down to gain entrance. When she returned, Miss Dennis said, Gillian was out but soon came back.

While she was upbraiding the man for breaking the door down, reports Miss Dennis, her step-father, Claude Wyche, came into the apartment.

Miss Dennis, who like others in the neighborhood refers to Wyche as "Mr. Fats," said: "When Mr. Fats came in the room, he spoke to me and Woody and then sat down on the bed.

"A few minutes later I went into the kitchen to fix something to eat. They were talking all right and I had no idea anything bad was going to happen.

Hears Victim Sleep

"In about five minutes I heard Woody shout: 'Don't shoot me, Mr. Fats.'

"Almost as soon as Woody said that there was a gunshot. I ran to the bedroom and just before I got there Mr. Fats rushed out and ran downstairs.

"Woody was lying on the floor, bleeding from his chest. I lifted him up and tried to get him downstairs to the street.

"He got half-way down when he fell down and didn't get up anymore."

Gillian's body will be dispatched to his home in Newport News, Va., for burial.

Crowner Stabbed In Chest

Crowner was stabbed to death in a second floor apartment at 204 N. Schroeder st. According to tenants on the first floor the man had recently been visiting the apartment occupied by Miss Bowles and Smallwood.

When Crowner made his fatal prediction concerning Miss Bowles, Smallwood was busy in an adjoining room.

After the suspect allegedly stabbed Crowner, according to Miss Bowles, he ran out of the house.

She started screaming and aroused Ellsworth Thompson, 42, who occupies an apartment on the first floor.

When Thompson rushed to the second floor, Crowner had staggered to the hallway. "I rushed to him and said: 'Al, what's wrong?'

"He brushed my hand aside worth, I'm allright.'

"A Lot Of Blood"

"Then he sat down on a stool in the bathroom, and laid back with his eyes half closed. A lot of blood was coming from his chest and Miss Bowles went up to him and put her arms around him.

"Another tenant who lived on the first floor, Mrs. Elizabeth Sneed, had called police and an ambulance. When they came I got into the ambulance with Al.

"At Franklin Squkre Hospital they laid him on a table and I asked the doctor would Al pull through. The doc looked at him, felt his pulse and said: 'This man is already dead.'

"It's a shame it had to happen like this for I've known Al Crowner almost all my life. He was a nice guy and worked hard every day," lamented Thompson.

At press time funeral arrangements had not been completed for Crowner who worked at the Glenn L. Martin co.

Lawyer Asks Probe Of Boy's Assault

Ober Asked To Investigate Teen-Ager's Beating

The lawyer for a 16-year-old youth who was brutally beaten while attending a wrestling match at the Coliseum, last Tuesday, has requested Police Commissioner Ober to conduct an official investigation of the case.

Attorney Milton Rothstein, in a letter to Ober, asked the probe on behalf of Raymond Johnson, 1637 N. Smallwood st.

The teen-ager was beaten by a man described as a "ring official," after a white woman threw a chair at a wrestler.

Four wrestlers, Chuck Morgan, Jack Dillon, Joe Tangaro, and Guy Brunetti, were in the ring, participating in a team match, when the chair was thrown.

Menaces Spectators

After the chair was hurled, one of the wrestlers advanced toward spectators in the area from which the chair came, in a threatening manner.

According to Mr. Rothstein, the following events transpired:

"Some persons in that group became alarmed and began to run, this youner boy being among that group. He was thereupon seized by a man believed to be a ring-official and forced into a dressing room. There he was beaten, cursed, and threatned by his unknown indidual.

"The beating was interrupted by the arrival of another man (believed to be a doctor at ringside) who entered the dressing room. The boy was then released and came out of the room accompanied by this second person.

Large Crowd Gathers

"In the meantime, a large crowd had gathered outside of this dressing room. They voiubly protested to the police in the Coliseum, the rough treatment given this boy. However, the police dispersed the crowd and took no action in the matter.

"On the outside, the crowd again gathered in angry protest, and the police on the outside dispersed them. No effort, apparently, was made by either the police inside the Coliseum (whom I understand were private police) or the police stationed on the outside, to investigate the matter or make an arrest in connection with the alleged imprisonment and brutal assault on this boy.

"After the boy was released, he was so dazed and terrified that two women and a man, noting his bewildered condition, ascertained the boy's address and took him home, arriving there about midnight. Later, the boy's sister, Miss Goldie Johnson what had happened.

Asks Investigation

"In view of the fact that it appears, from what I have learned to date, that an unprovoked, brutal assault and imprisonment was perpetrated on a young boy who was a spectator in a large public place, it would seem proper that I request you make an investigation of this matter.

"To apprehend the person responsible for this alleged crime, particularly in view of the fact that the nature of this offense was such as to incite the crowd nearly to riot.

"I have the names and addresses of neumerous witnesses to the incidents related here and I shall be pleased to make them available to you at your request."

The youth lives with his sister Miss Goldie Johnson, at the Smallwood st. address. According to Miss Johnson, her brother sustained injuries about the head and face and is still under a physician's care.
