ADORNDED BENCH FOR THIRTY YEARS.

Judge Joseph A. Wickes Dead at Chestertown.

Maryland Jurist of the Old School Who Abandoned the Pursuit of Medicine for the Profession of Law—Served in Legislature and in the Constitutional Convention—Retired in 1897.

Former Judge Joseph A. Wickes died at his home on High street Tuesday afternoon of the infirmities of age.

Judge Wickes was born in Chestertown, September 27, 1826, and was the son of Colonel Joseph and Elizabeth Chambers Wickes. He received his preparatory education in Washington College, Chestertown, and afterward entered Princeton, from which he was graduated in 1845, taking one of the honors in a class of more than 80 members. He then studied medicine in the University of Maryland, from which he graduated in the spring of 1848. Under the direction of his father, he later studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1852.

In 1848, he married Anna Maria, daughter of William C. Tilghman, and granddaughter of Richard Cooke Tilghman, of the hermitage, Queen Annes county. She died April 2, 1864, leaving five children, of whom three by the first marriage are living (Anna Tilghman Houston, of Wilmington, Del.; Hester Van Bibber, wife of Thomas L. Hines, of Baltimore, and Caroline Barney). By his second marriage, to Mrs. Benjamin Chambers Wickes, he leaves one child (Josephine Wilkins, wife of Dr. Thomas Henry Wilkins, of Portsmouth, Va.) By his third wife, he leaves two children (Gladys Wickes, and Joseph A. Wickes, Jr., of Princeton University.)

The public life of Judge Wickes began very soon after his admission to the bar. In the summer of 1852, he was nominated by the Democratic party of Maryland as one of the electors of the president and vice-president of the United States. Associated with him on the electoral ticket were Robert McLean, Judge Alvey, Carroll Spencer and Charles M. Gwinn, with whom he canvassed the State. The Democrats were successful, and the electoral vote of Maryland was cast for the candidates of that party.

Desiring a wider field for the practice of his profession, in January, 1854, he removed to Cumberland, where although an entire stranger, he was kindly received by the people, and met with gratifying success.

In the summer of 1855, during his absence from the county, and without his knowledge, the Democrats nominated him as a candidate for the House of Delegates. It was supposed at that time that the American, or Know-Nothing party, had enough members enrolled and sworn in its secret lodges to carry the State. An active canvass was made by the Democrats, and the result was that its candidates were elected. The Legislature assembled in Annapolis in January, 1856, and Mr. Wickes took his seat as a member of the House, of which William D. Merrick, Benj. G. Harris and Judge Stone, also Democrats, were members. He participated in the debates, and was a member of the judiciary committee.

After the legislature adjourned, he returned to Cumberland and resumed the practice of his profession. Owing to the dampness of the climate and confinement to his office, his health declined and became so much impaired that in the spring of 1856, he was compelled to relinquish a lucrative practice, and abandoned his profession.

He returned to Chestertown and passed the remainder of the year in recreation and open air exercise, hoping thereby to regain his bealth. This hope was realized, and in 1859, he opened an office in Chestertown, where he resumed the practice of his profession.

Judge Wickes was a brother of Pere L. Wickes, of Baltimore. He also was a member of the Contitutional Convention in 1867. He was elected, in 1868, judge of the Second Judicial Circuit, on the Eastern Shore, and was re-elected at the end of his term. He served 30 years on the bench, and retired in 1897. He was president of the Board of Visitors and Governors of Washington College until about ten years ago, when he resigned on account of failing health.

Judge Wickes leaves a large estate, estimated at about $200,000.

Funeral services were held at his late home on High street on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Dr. H. B. Martin, rector of Emmanuel P. E. Church. Interment was made in the family lot in Chester cemetery. Undertaker Chas. L. Dodd had charge of the funeral arrangements. The pallbearers were: Deputy Clerk of the Talbot Court Henry Hollyday, J. D. Bacchus, H. Clay Lusby, James W. Crouch, Lewin W. Wickes and Thomas Hines. Members of the local bar attended in a body, as did the Bench of this circuit as well as former Judge James A. Pearce, the court officials, representatives of Washington College faculty, Hon. J. Frank Turner, of Easton, former Clerk of the Court of Appeals, Stenographer John J. Hartnett and Col. Edward Hartcastle of Easton. The floral tributes were exquisite.

Grange Notes.

Fairlee Grange held a very interesting meeting Wednesday afternoon and evening, it being the last special meeting of the season. Several visitors were present, who entertained us by some interesting talks. Miss Pritchard gave us a delightful half hour on home economics. Miss Anna Smyth, of Chestertown, treated us to a solo. The Grange Garner, read by a mere man, Dr. F. W. Smith, was greatly enjoyed, being very spicy. Mrs. Walker, of Church Hill Grange, told us how she raises her incubator chicks and with proper attention how healthy they are. Miss Ida Crew gave one of her choice selec ions, "A Perfect Day." This was followed by a talk from Mr. Walker, of Church Hill Grange, telling how invaluable the demonstrator is to Queen Annes county. The Festal season is now closed, but we look forward to our special meetings to continue with our good work.
