GOING BACK TO PEACHES.

Delaware Farmers Learn How To Control Tree Pests And Diseases.

Delaware is rapidly regaining its lost fame as a peachgrowing State and at the end of the present fruit year it is expected to equal its former record and peachgrowing will once more become one of the chief industries of the State.

Prof. Wesley Webb, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, in commenting upon the culture of peaches in Delaware in recent years, pointed out that a few years ago the Dr. Marvin farm, near Dover, was sold for about $7,000 and at that time contained 100 acres. In the last week 63 acres of it sold for $14,000, but the 63 acres included one of the best peach orchards in the State. This sale is regarded as a substantial proof that Delaware peach orchards are no longer a drug on the markst, as they admittedly were at one time.

It has taken the farmers a long time to discover that by spraying and careful cultivation they can conquer the diseases that affect peach trees, and they are setting out new orchards all over the State. Today Kent and Sussex counties are dotted with young peach orchards, and the fruit that is being produced is equal to any ever grown either in this or any other State in the Union. Sprays are used freely, with the result that the trees today are in better condition than for a number of years and there is every indication of a full crop.

Not only in Delaware but all over this section of the peninsula the weather conditions seem to have been just right for the fruit. State Senator Orlando Harrison, who is interested in large nurseries in Berlin and a number of large fruit farms in this section, in speaking of the outlook said: "From our 100 acres of peachorchards we have good prospects of harvesting 70 cars of fruit. Last year the yield comprised 41 cars; in 1913, which was a better year, the total number was 71 cares, so it is apparent that the year of 1915 will be a record breaker. The varieties are as follows: Carman, Champion, Belle of Georgia, Ray, Elberta and Crawford Late, ranging from five to nine years old."

BLIGHT OF APPLE AND PEAR.

Blight is now prevalent on apple and pear trees in nearly all parts of Maryland. On some apple trees practically all the fruit has been destroyed. The loss in many orchards in the state is very serious.

This disease has been present to some extent ever since fruit was first grown in this country, but some years becomes worse than usual. It is also found on wild hawtorn, crab-apple, service berry, and on many similar cultivated shrubs. It is very injurious to quinces.

The blight first appears in the blossoms, where the bacteria which cause it are carried by bees, or sometimes other insects. The germs multiply in the nectar of the flowers, and from a single such flower, bees may infect the whole orchard.

The disease spreads downward from the flowers between the wood and bark, killing two to ten inches of the twig a day, but later it progresses more slowly, and in apple usually dies out on the young twigs; but sometime, and usually in pear, it keeps extending, killing large branches, or the whole tree, or forming cankers in the bark in which the bacteriabegin to multiply in the exuding sap around the cankers, or sometimes in late infected twigs. This is the source of infection in the spring.

The blight often goes through short spurs, or sprouts, or wounds of any kind, into the body of the tree, even near or below the ground. Many trees or large branches are girdled and die in this way every year.

CONTROL.

The most effective treatment consists in cutting out the diseased parts. In young orchards and in nurseries where there is naturally but little blight, and in old orchards in seasons when blight is not serious, by cutting out every blighted twig and canker as soon as possible, giving special attention to the body and base of the tree, a bad outbreak may be prevented in following years. It is also necessary to destroy all blight in the neighborhood on wild or cultivated trees as the bees may carry it long distances. Bees are, however, necessary to pollenate the flowers.

When old bearing trees are badly infected, winter is the best time to cut out the blight. The cuts on large branches or in the trunk should be brushed with a disinfectant and when dry protected by painting white lead in linseed oil. In cutting blight in the growing season, it is important to wipe the pruning instrument after each cut on a cloth or sponge wet with either carbolic acid, concentracted lime-sulfur, 5% formalin, or other disinfectant to prevent reinfection of the next cut. Cut twigs several inches below where the blight shows, as in spring the germs extend much farther in than they show on the outside.

Keep water sprouts and all spurs off the trunk and main limbs of pear and susceptible apple varieties so that one useless blighted spur or sprout may not girdle and destroy a whole branch of tree.

Some varieties, such as Yellow Transparent, Wealthy, York Imperial and Fall Pippin apple and Bartlett pear are very susceptible, others like Keiffer and Winesap are less injured.

It will be seen from the above that little can be done now in badly affected orchards to prevent further injury this season, but the community should organize to prevent the spread of this serious disease another year.

Baltimore's Best Store Gets The New Styles First

When you come to Baltimore to shop—as you probably do at intervals during the year—you will naturally feel safest in the store whose stocks are always fresh.

It is a matter of pride with us—and a matter of principle as well—not to allow old-style or shop-worn merchandise to accumulate. Periodically, we hold special sales in which this merchandise is disposed of at ridiculously low figures. We would rather give it away than permit it to remain in stock.

As a result, whatever is shown to you as new at Hochschild, Kohn & Co's. is new. The woman who does not keep in close touch with the styles can buy here with perfect safety—and our people will be glad to give helpful advice and assistance to anyone who is in doubt as to what to choose.
