SHERIFF BROWN HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Constable Dunn, of Church Hill, Saves Life of Kent's Popular Sheriff.

William Dunn, a constable of Church Hill, Queen Annes county, on Monday saved the life of Sheriff William E. Brown, of Kent county, by shooting James Raisin, colored, just as Raisin was about to kill the sheriff. Raisin is in Baltimore hospital and will likely die.

The shooting occurred at McGinnis Corner, Queen Annes county, Monday afternoon. Last Saturday night Raisin came to Chestertown and caused a disturbance. He is reported to have insulted two ladies on the street here and when their gentleman escort remonstrated with him Raisin knocked him down. Sheriff Brown went to McGinnis Corner to arrest Raisin, and Constable Dunn went with him to assist in the arrest. Raisin showed fight. He grabbed the sheriff and was about to fire at his head when the constable sent three bullets in rapid succession into the negro. One bullet took effect in Raisin's ear, the second entered the negro's mouth and the third went into his chest.

Dr. H. F. McPherson, who was called to dress the negro's wounds, said there is little hope of the man's recovery. Any one of the wounds, he says, is likely to prove fatal.

Raisin is a Delaware negro of powerful build. He recently completed a ten-year term for manslaughter. Catherine Mills, colored, who handed a pistol to Raisin during the struggle, was arrested and is now in jail.
