Income tax story of Joe Ray told

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (N N P A) — Let's bring into the Capital Spotlight this week Joseph R. Ray of Louisville (Kentucky), race relations adviser to Albert M. Cole, administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Announcing Ray's appointment to succeed Frank Horne, who was made assistant to the administrator to make special studies and develop new approaches to the housing problems of minorities, HHFA said Ray resigned the presidency of the First Standard Bank of Louisville in 1930 to go into real estate and general insurance work.

HHFA described Ray as "the owner and developer of a 100 unit housing project, a sub-division in Louisville," and said he has been "buyer and appraiser for the Louisville Housing Authority and the Louisville Board of Education, and is now official appraiser for an insurance company."

Different Story Told

Records of the Internal Revenue Bureau tell a different story. Shortly before his appointment in the HHFA, Ray and his mate, Mrs. Ella M. Ray settled for $4,220 a Federal income tax liability of $7,809, including penalties and interest.

Acceptance of the compromise offer, made by Ray, was recommended because it appeared to be the "maximum amount" that could be collected from their present assets. The recommendation gave "adequate consideration" to their earning power.

The tax liabilities, including penalties and interest, were $1,277 for 1944, $740 for 1945, $1,618 for 1946, $1,793 for 1947, $1,371 for 1948, and $1,057 for 1949.

Ray filed separate returns for the years 1944 to 1947, inclusive, and joint returns with his wife for 1948 and 1949.

Failed To Keep Records

The deputy internal revenue collector, who examined the returns, found that Ray failed to keep complete and detailed records of his business, and an effort was made to determine the income from an analysis of Mr. and Mrs. Ray's individual bank accounts.

Mrs. Ray had no separate income and apparently took no part in his business operations.

The deputy collect reported that Ray was engaged as a real estate agent, receiving commissions on sales, in a partnership known as Ray and Henderson Agency, which was a rental and insurance collection agency, and was president of a corporation he organized, J. Renels Improvement Company, owned by his family.

The corporation was to develop and build homes for colored people in the western end of Louisville. The report of the deputy collector says the venture was a complete financial failure for Ray.

It quoted him as saying he never received any salary or dividend from the corporation. It says the corporation has no assets and has been inactive for seveyal years but has not been dissolved.

The deputy's report showed for 1944 a deficiency of $1,789, penalty of $894, and interest of $583, a total of $3,267 assessed and later reduced to a balance of $1,067 by payment of $2,200 on November 13, 1950.

Wife An Invalid

Ray was described in the report as one of the leading colored citizens of Louisville. He is 65 years old and his wife 61. She has been more or less an invalid for the past 12 years or more.

A statement of his assets and liabilities as of last February 5, according to the report, showed total assets of $15,725 and liabilities of $11,242.

Ray's assets included cash, $235; residence, $8,000; Government bonds, $500; partnership interest, $750; 1947 Buick, $500; cash value of life insurance, $1,120; household furniture, $400, and deposit on offer of compromise, $4,220.

His liabilities included mortgage on residence, $4,950; loans, totaling $6,067 (John Hughes, $3,500; Louisville Trust Company, $750; Lincoln Bank and Trust Company, $700; Domestic Life Insurance Company, $1,117), and accounts payable, $225.

Built For $6,000

Ray's home at 3340 Grand ave., Louisville, was described as a three bedroom stucco house, built in 1926 at a cost of $6,000. The deputy collect said the forced sale value was not believed to be in excess of $8,000.

Liens filed by the collector October 20, 1950, totaling $8,900, were released the next month to enable Mr. and Mrs. Ray to increase the existing mortage on the home from about $2,200 to $5,800. The proceeds obtained were paid to the collector and applied to the individual assessment of $3,267 against Ray for 1944.

Ray's income as shown by returns filed totaled $5,796 in 1950, $4,463 in 1951, and $6,136 in 1952. Taxable income was $3,958 for 1950, $3,011 for 1951, and $4,705 for 1952.

Ray's base salary as race relations adviser in HHFA is $10,000 a year.

Racial policy lauded by commerce aide

E. F. MORROW

The policies of the Eisenhower administration on matters affecting minority groups received a torrent of praise on Tuesday as E. Frederic Morrow, consultant with the National Production Authority, of the Commerce Department addressed a luncheon of the Frontiers club.

In the first few minutes of his speech Mr. Morrow paid tribute to the business policies of the present administration and then shifted to a spirited defense of its racial policies.

No President has ever used his office to greater advantage to advance the cause of racial justice than Mr. Eisenhower, Mr. Morrow said.

Claims High Posts

During the time that the Republicans have been in office more colored persons have been appointed to high positions in government than ever before, he asserted.

This was done in spite of the fact that Mr. Eisenhower "owed the so-called colored vote very little" since the bulk of colored voters supported the Democratic presidential ticket in the last election, he added.

Mr. Morrow who served with Eisenhower during the campaign said that through his personal observations he was convinced that the President is a man of "rugged honesty determined to serve all the people of the United States."

Referring to the Department of Commerce Mr. Morrow said that a new philosophy has been adopted in regard to the colored businessman.

"He has the same stature of importance in our view as any other businessman. We do not make him an oddity in American business and we do not believe that he needs a separate set of rules to play the game," he said.

NOW 'BEING DONE GRADUALLY':

Kansas says it wants to desegregate own schools

WASHINGTON (NNPA)— The State of Kansas offers no argument against the outlawing of racial segregation in its public schools, but contends that the matter can best be handled on the local level.

In its brief filed in the Supreme Court Monday in the case involving segregation in the first six grades of Topeka's public schools, the State of Kansas says the reversal of the judgment of the District Court would require no change in policy, although it would necessarily affect other communities in the state.

A three-judge Federal District in Kansas found that segregation has a harmful psychological effect on segregated children but upheld the Kansas statute which permits first-class cities to maintain segregated elementary schools.

Defends 'Gradual' Process

The reversal of that judgment, the Kansas attorney general declares in the brief, would not necessarily require the admission of colored children to the schools of their choice.

On the contrary, he states, "we believe that the court in the exercise of its equity powers may permit an effective gradual adjustment. "We think the necessity of safeguarding the integrity of the school system at large must be reconciled with the necessity of effecting constitutional guaranties."

Answering the questions the court asked lawyers to discuss in their briefs and on oral argument, the Kansas brief states that the court should not undertake to issue a detailed decree in the Kansas case.

The judgment of the district court should simply be reversed and the case sent back to that court with directions to draft an appropriate decree, the brief states.

In the preparation of such a decree, the brief suggests, the district court might properly conduct such investigations and hearings as are necessary to inform itself of the various interests to be reconciled.

Problem for Communities

That, however, is a problem that should be determined on the local level, the brief asserts, adding:

"We can assure this court that the State of Kansas and its local boards of education will act in complete good faith to comply with the letter and spirit of any decree that may be entered."

Answering the questions of the court, the Kansas brief states, in summary, that:

1. The majority of the members of the Congress which proposed the 14th Amendment did not intend or believe that it would abolish segregation in the public school, nor did the majority of the states that ratified it hold such views.

'No Mixed Schools Intended'

2. Neither Congress nor the states understood that the amendment would empower Congress or the courts, in the light of future conditions, to abolish segregation in the public schools.

3. The judiciary (courts) lack power to abolish segregation in the public schools of the various states.

4. Kansas communities, through normal processes of local government, are "effectively accomplishing desegregation." Segregation in Kansas school is permissive, not compulsory.

Smith, Mims win bouts

Crowd boos Smith tko

Gene Smith, a featherweight fighter, who was once the darling of local ring fans, scored an unpopular six-round technical knockout over Merrill Olmstead Tuesday night.

Olmstead was brought in as a last-minute substitute for Artie Mullins of New York, who withdrew from the bout because of death in his family.

The 128-pounder gave Smith a terrific battle during the early rounds, but Smith's superior punching power slowed Olmstead down as the fight wore on.

Decision Booed

The decision of Marty Gallagher, the referee, to stop the bout was met with Bronx cheers from the 938 fans, who felt that Olmstead could have gone on and copped a decision.

In the other big bout, Holly Mims, the much feared middleweight, unleashed a devastating body attack to whip Sammy Walker, 159, of Springfield, Mass.

The bout saw Walker clutch and hold on to stay the limit. Mims got in his best punches in the fourth and 10th rounds.

The preliminaries saw:

Tommy Thompson, 170, Quantico, receive a tko over Chuck Taylor, 165 in the third round.

Big Dynamite Williams, 151, Washington, stop Billy Hickerson, 147, Washington, after 2:34 of second round.

Globetrotters win; Haynes fails to play

By LUIX VIRGIL ORVERBEA

CHICAGO (ANP) — A crowd of 17,630 fans jammed Chicago Stadium Friday night to see the fabulous Harlem Globetrotters beat out over a nondescript team of Washington Generals.

In the second game, played for the benefit of Provident Hospital here and other good civic groups, Abe Saperstein's National Basketball association team, the Philadelphia Warriors, lost 55-51 to the Milwaukee Hawks.

Neither the Trotters nor the Warriors featured the controversial dribbling star, Marques Haynes, for several years, captain of the Trotters and recently ordered to play with the Warriors by Saperstein.

Hillard Stays

Replacing Haynes for the Trotters was a new Chicago dribbling marvel, Leon Hillard, only a couple of years out of the local McKinley high. Although he has not attained the professional finesse of Haynes, Hillard was quite a sensation to fans.

The game was not trouble to the Trotters although they were somewhat off in shooting. Chief purpose of the Generals seemed to be as foils for the zany antics of the fabulous Reece (Goose) Tatum who at one stage grabbed the glasses of a spectator and put them on the referee when he made a distasteful call.

Basketball - wise, the great Walter Dukes, still not fully recovered from a leg injury, made his second appearance in more than a month. He played a short while in the third period. Bill Garrett, former Indiana U star, is still out of the lineup. He has not played a game this season.

In the NBA tilt, it was apparent that the Warriors could use an aggressive guard and set shot artist such as Haynes to help their cause. Philly fans are clamoring for a colored player for the team. Milwaukee does not have a colored player this season although it has featured them in the past two seasons.

Hampton and orchestra well-received in Europe

Monde, Brussels, Belgium, Thursday, Sept. 24, 1953. Translated from French by Dr. Frederick H. Dedmond, Morgan State college.)

BRUSSELS, Belgium — At present the extraordinary musician, Lionel Hampton, and his famous orchestra are traveling in Europe. His musical group consists of twenty soloists, all of the colored race.

The dynamic vibraphonist has not only won the admiration of the amateur "jazz musicians" of Europe, but he has also overwhelmed the youth of this great continent with his popular tunes, such as "Hey-ba-de-re-bop," and many other fascinating numbers.

As has been true in the past, "Hamp" still is a fine musician was and always will be a musical genius.

Unable To Pay

He was not able to pay for his music for the vibraphone until he was almost a grown man, but once his training was begun, his skill as a fine musician was assured in a short time.

After having spent four years in the Army of Benny Goodman, Lionel established his own orchestra of 1940, and in three years it had become the most popular musical aggregation in the United States.

Since his rise to stardom, Lionel's popularity has never diminished, which is rare for a jazz band leader.

Monsieur Hampton is not only one of the greatest and most brilliant vibraphonists of today, but he is also a fine composer of music for the drum and the piano.

Hot Club Sponsor

Under the auspices of the Hot Club of Belgium, Lionel Hampton and his band rendered a program in the "Grande Salle du Palais des Beaux-Arts," in Brussels, Belgium.

From the first note sounded by the talented musicians the spectators were completely overcome by the powerful rhythm. One by one the members of the band put aside their musical instruments and began first to clap their hands, and then, they began dancing.

In a few minutes only the drums, the bass violin, and the the latter rendering a solo. At first the spectators joined in the rhythm with the clapping of the hands, and in a few minutes every one in the club was dancing.

"That was the first time I have seen an orchestra communicate such enthusiasm to a Belgian audience, and I hope to see you again, Monsieur Hampton." J. D.
