Promises of Reform Are not Enough.

There has been no time in the last twenty years that the dominant faction in the Democratic party could not have set to work, if it had the will, to eliminate useless State offices, inaugurate a businesslike system of handling the State's money, practice economy and show efficiency in State administration. No veil has obscured need of reform. Places where the pruning knife was called for have stared it in the face.

For this reason we cannot but view with skepticism the Democratic organization's present attempt to clean the slate and to settle old scores by appointing a commission to see what ought to be done. It looks too much like the game of dragging a herring across the trail.

There has never been a campaign in the city or state in which the organization, when pushed, did not declare for reform. And on this occasion, when extravagance has been amply demonstrated, when inefficiency has been plainly shown, what could the organization do but confess and promise to mend its ways? Certainly no candidate for office could defend the organization's sins of omission and commission with any hope of success. The exposures that have been made and the state of the public temper have put the organizatian in a position from which escape was difficult. The candidacy of Senator Lee, who has almost invariably been opposed to the party managers, offered the voters of the party a choice that promises to put the cleaning-up process in new hands. There was but one thing to do, and the organization is doing it—namely, promising as much reform and in as loud a voice as anybody else.

But the question Democratic voters must decide in whether they want to intrust the work of reform to the very organization that has stood idly by for so long while enjoying the fruits of the waste and laxity at Annapolis, or try a new deal; whether they wished to go before the voters of the State on a platform of specious promises to investigate the wastefulness, but with the same men in control of the party machinery who have managed affairs for all these years; or shows evidence of honest intention to give the State better government by putting in charge of the work men who have not been identified with the machine.

Granted the need of a commission to suggest perfectly obvious methods of reform, what assurance is there that its recommendations will be carried out unless new men with different ideals control the Legislature and the machinery?—Baltimore City News.

Auto Injures Team.

Somewhere near the early hours of morning Sunday, a New Jersey automobile crashed into a team driven by a colored man, employed by Mr. Elwood Morris, almost completely demolishing the team, cutting an artery in the horse and throwing the female occupant of the carrage on her head on the state road, between Washington College and the old Hopwell School House.

The automobile was damaged to the extent that it had to be "towed" Sunday morning to Mr. J. H. Sides' garage for repairs, while Dr. Jarman was called from his bed to sew up the wounded horse.

The negro says the auto struck him "head on" and that the machine had only one dim light.

The Chautauqua Entertainers

The second day's program of Chautauqua will be one of unusual variety, as Springer, the magician, and the Chautauqua Entertainers appear both afternoon and evening. The Chautauqua Entertainers are a company of four, giving a program of music and mirth.

Miss Elsie Mae Gordon (1) is a reader capable of giving an entire evening's program alone were it necessary. She is gifted to an unusual degree. Miss Judith Hampton Lyndon (2) is unique in her work, giving quaint southern stories and songs, accompanying herself with a banjo. Waino Kauppi (3), the boy cornetist, is a Finn and has played many important engagements, both in this country and Europe. His playing would excite enthusiasm even were his age not considered. The pianist and accompanist is Charles Clark Fuller (4).
