HAVE EYES ON MARYLAND

Washington Officials Deeply Interested in Primary Result.

Few purely local contests in recent years have aroused the lively interest in Washington that was manifested there in the primary held in Maryland last Tuesday. The proximity of the State to the District, the wide acquaintance there of Senators John Walter Smith and Blair Lee and the fact that thousands of Marylanders either live or work in Washington contributed to this interest.

The Administration itself followed closely every move made in the recent campaign and many high officials of the Government kept in touch with the returns in both the Democratic and Republican contests.

Neither of the Democratic factions sought or received aid or comfort from the Administration. Each of them recognized, of course, that in a purely party fight the President would be strictly neutral and each of them assumed that the President's cabinet members would keep hands off.

It is known, however, that the sympathy of high officials in Washington was very much divided in the contest. Senator Lee has his well-wishers among Administration forces and Mr. Harrington, because of Senator Smith, had his. Yet neither side was able to lay claim to the active support of official friends in the Capital.

Now that the primaries are over Administration leaders without regard to former preferences are anxious to see the party reunite for the election of the Democratic ticket of November. The members of the President's official household are no longer neutral. They are eager for the success of Harrington and will lend such assistance to that end as may be asked for by the State Central committee.

Democratic success in the general eletion is regarded as a matter of great importance to the party nationally. This election comes a few months ahead of the campaign for the Presidency and the friends of the President there would be deeply distressed to find an admittedly Democratic state "off the reservation" upon the eve of a national campaign.

Good Advice.

The following letter appeared in the Sun on Sunday:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: It is an axiomatic truth that when politicians fall out the people come into their own, and never better was the truth of this axiom exemplified than in the defeat of the Preston-Lee machine at the recent primary. That a cog in the machine slipped or that there was a Brutus in the royal family is not the whole cause; there were others, mainly dissatisfied tax-payers at the high-handed and autocratic manner in which the president of their corporation was conducting the stockholders' affairs. Moreover, there were mewed right under the dome of the City Hall numerous Bendict Arnolds—something, by the way, that seems to have escaped the notice of the usually alert, ubiquitous reporter of the Sun. Indeed, it must have been a very obtuse person who could not have seen how the Democratic weather vane was pointing just a few days before the primaries, and now, unless the Democratic Gubernatorial candidate comes out with a specific platform advocating reforms looking to the curtailment of useless offices and expenses, he will find this same political weather vane pointing to the strong hold of the Republican nominee for the Governorship; and it must be remembered that the great body of independent voters care more for a good Republican candidate than a bad Democrat, and vice versa. Why a Saturday Half-Holiday?

Rev. Richard W. Hogue, D. D., Rector of Ascension Protestant Episcopal Church, Baltimore, Md.

I. It is to the interest of the employer. On the well substantiated ground that a man will render better service each week and maintain his efficiency more steadily and more permanently, when Sunday is the only day for rest, religious duties, home life and recreation (particularly when this includes dissipation), many men will not be regular or efficient on the following Monday. Proof of this can be furnished by every competent manager in industrial life. It is to the interest of the employer on moral grounds. He will be a better man with all that this implies too, a man who values his own self-respect, to say nothing of the business asset that comes from appreciative and satisfied employees.

II. It is to the interest of employees. This needs no argument. It is well to recognize, however, that the welfare of employees is a matter of concren to progressive employers to a greater extent to-day than over before.

III. To those who profess to recognize God and to respect the home, a Saturday half-holiday is a moral and religious obligation. The Saturday half-holiday places physical recreation in the week, where it rightly belongs, and does not force it on the day that belongs primarily to God and to the home.

The Saturday half-holiday is, therefore, a business asset, an act of humanity, a matter of justice to God and fairness to religion without whose influence competition would be permitted to keep employer and employee at work the full seven days of the week.

Paint Better.

Better isn't enough; paint best.

A man bought "cheap" paint; saved 20c or 30 or 40 or 50c a gallon, didn't he?

Yes, and bought 40 or 50 or 60 or 80 per cent more gallons; how much did he make on his paint?

And he paid for painting those gallons—a fair day's work is a gallon—how much did he make on the labor part of his job?

He lost a quarter or third of his money.

How long will it last? not his money, the paint?

Perhaps half as long as Devoe. How long will his money last, if he buys other stuff as he bought that paint?

Better buy the best paint; it makes the least bill and least-often.
