Baltimore's Best Store Gets The New Styles First

When you come to Baltimore to shop—as you probably do at intervals during the year—you will naturally feel safest in the store whose stocks are always fresh.

It is a matter of pride with us—and a matter of principle as well—not to allow old-style or shop-worn merchandise to accumulate. Periodically, we hold special sales in which this merchandise is disposed of at ridiculously low figures. We would rather give it away than permit it to remain in stock.

As a result, whatever is shown to you as new at Hochschild, Kohn & Co's. is new. The woman who does not keep in close touch with the styles can buy here with perfect safety—and our people will be glad to give helpful advice and assistance to anyone who is in doubt as to what to choose.

"DON'T SOW YOUR WHEAT UNTIL THE HESSIAN FLY IS GONE," SAY THE EXPERTS.

BUT GET A GOOD SEED BED.

The Good Preparation of The Field Will Satisfactorily Overcome Your Late Sowing.

Sow winter wheat after the Hessian fly has disappeared and save the next year's crop from the ravages of the pest, say the Department of Agriculture's experts. This advice may still be applied during the present month in the great wheat belt lying between the thirty-fifth and forty-first parallels of latitude. If the fly has been starved out by buring or disking all stubble and ruined wheat fields, and all volunteer wheat has been plowed under or otherwise destroyed, an infestation the following year may be prevented by sowing after the approximate fly-free date.

The Hessian fly of the second or fall generation is likely to infest all volunteer wheat and all wheat sown before the fly-free date. "Flaxseeds" of the second generation remain on the fall-sown wheat plants till the following April, when adults issue and produce young which begin another season of infestation. The adult flies of the second generation emerge from the "flaxseed" stage from the middle of August to late October, according to the latitude. The female fly does not live beyond five or six days, and thus it is that late sowing, after the flies have largely disappeared, is the most practical and effective method employed to control this pest.

According to experimental sowings carried on for a series of years, the approximate dates to sow winter wheat to avoid the Hessian fly during years of normal rainfall have been determined. There are some points with regard to these dates which all farmers within fly-infested districts must take into account. They should be familiar with the conditions of their own localities, as to weather, soil, and latitude. They should also be familiar with their own fields. Dry weather retards the development of the fly and also that of the most important of its natural enemies, precisely as it retards the coming up of the wheat if it be sown in very dry soil and without sufficient rainfall. There is also an approximate difference of about one day to each 100 feet of elevatinn.

BUT PREPARE YOUR SOIL WELL.

There is, of course, a serious objection to the late sowing method to control the Hessian fly, and that is the danger that the plants will not make sufficient growth to withstand the winter. This objection, however, may be largely overcome by proper cultural methods. Much of the delay in the growth of late-sown plants in the fall can be eliminated by paying close attention to the preparation of the soil and to the quality of the seed. The best advice that can be given is to begin the preparation of the field in the fall precisely as though it was expected to sow at a very early date, but instead of sowing use the disk harrow and the roller, even after it appears to be a waste of labor to till the field further.

When a finely pulverized, compact seed bed has been secured, the seed should be selected, and this should be done with the point in view that unnaturally shriveled or otherwise imperfect kernels cannot produce healthy wheat plants. When the kernel sprouts it at once sends fibrous roots down into the soil from which to draw nourishment for the young plant, and if little or no nourishment is secured the wheat plants are put into somewhat the condition of stunted calves, pigs or other farm animals which are underfed.

Wheat plants cannot secure prompt and ample nourishment if the roots must make their way about among clods due to poor preparation of the soil, or in soil that lacks in fertility. The farmer, then, should begin the preparation of his soil with the object of delaying the sowing of the wheat and afterwards of pushing the growth of the plant to the utmost until the beginning of the cold weather.
