Mrs. Charles S. Woodland files for husband's post

Mrs. Helen G. Woodland announced this week that she is a candidate for ward executive of the 17th ward in the Fourth Legislative District.

This is the position her husband, Charles S. Woodland, has held over 25 years. Mr. Woodland has been ill now, however, for some time.

Mrs. Woodland, the mother of Dr. John C. and George S. Woodland, dentists, and Dr. Charles T. Woodland, physician, filed for the post on Monday.

Young Republican Rally

She publicly announced her candidacy Wednesday night when she appeared as the only colored speaker at a rally sponsored by the Young Republicans of Northwest Baltimore in the Deutsches Haus.

Governor McKeldin was the principal speaker at the rally. He gave the 150 in attendance the stragety for a Republican victory in another election.

From all indication the stragety is to boast of the record made by Mr. McKeldin and his party since his election.

Among his accomplishments, the Governor pointed out his interests in interracial relations and called attention to the colored appointees he has made to state offices.

EFFICIENCY AWARDS—Col. Alfred H. Anderson, commanding officer of the Baltimore Signal Depot, presents an army efficiency award to Albert H. Brooks, as William C. "Nationalism in South and Southeast Asia" was the conference theme. Thomas E. Hicks, another Morgan student, also attended.

Lawyers speak at mass meeting

A community mass meeting under the sponsorship of the Eastside Community Committee was held on Thursday in the auditorium of Faith Baptist church, Bond st., and Ashland ave.

A panel discussion on "Community Needs As We See Them" was held with Robert B. Watts, attorney, as moderator.

Panelists were W. Emerson Brown, Milton B. Allen, Harry A. Cole and George L. Parrish, attorneys.

The invocation and benediction were given by the Rev. Simon Williamson, pastor of the church. Music was furnished by the Holliman's children's orchestra.

Motorist rams car into bus

Northeastern District police were searching for a motorist Thursday, who collided with a No. 21 trackless trolley and fled the scene on foot without identifying himself.

As a result of the collision which occured at Caroline and Eager sts., a passenger in the automobile was taken to Johns Hopkins hospital and treated for a head injury.

The injured man was identified by police as Jesse Fowlkes, 24, of 1016 E. Chase st.

A traffic cruiser was summoned to the scene, witnesses said, when the 1938 Plymouth sedan collided with the trolley operated by Charles Parks of 1532 Mt. Royal ave.

Although the owner of the auto was not operating it at the time, records show that it is registered in the name of Delbert Stafford of 322 E. 22nd st.

Local Elks to participate in national educational project

Lloyd Randolph, grand trustee and exalted ruler of Monumental Lodge of Elks No. 3, will lead a delegation to Washington, Feb. 1, for the observance of National Education for Citizenship Day.

Local interest in this observance is being intensified, Mr. Randolph explained, in accordance with plans to give increased attention to the wholesome development of the youth of the community.

Through closer cooperation with the Elks grand lodge department of education, Mr. Randolph hopes to open through his lodge here several benefits for youth members now in force elsewhere.

The public has been asked to cooperate.

To Visit President

The Washington affair will include a delegation of Elk officials visiting the White House to meet President Eisenhower. Huey Shepherd of California, winner of the Elks national oratorical contest of 1953, will be presented to Mr. Eisenhower. Mr. Shepherd will present to the President a bound copy of his prize - winning oration on the Constitution.

Columbia Lodge No. 85 will be host to visiting Elks and guests from 3 to 6 p.m. There, several Elks are scheduled to receive citations for meritorious service to the department of education during 1953. A panel discussion and open forum on "New Heights for Elkdom in 1954" will be held.

Featured Speakers

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, and Hon. Carroll B. Reece, congressman from Tennessee, will be featured speakers at an 8 p.m. banquet in Baldwin Hall at Howard University. This will climax the observance.

Hon. Joseph W. Martin, Republican Speaker of the House, will be guest of honor at this affair.

Along with its national activities, the Elks department of education has helped to educate more than 600 youths since its founding in 1925 by Judge W. C. Hueston.

Wishful thinking termed harmful to polio research

In view of the increasing volume of publicity which has accompanied the proposed poliomyelitis vaccine field trial, the State Board of Health at its monthly meeting on Jan. 15, expressed its concern that the real nature and purpose of this study shall not be obscured by wishful thinking.

Some of the statements which have already appeared seem to have originated more from the imaginations of the overzealous than from the scientific facts at hand.

"It should be clearly understood that as yet there is no scientific proof that this vaccine is effective in preventing polio in humans," Dr. William H. F. Warthen, deputy state and county health office said.

Official Statement

The following statement has been prepared by outstanding poliomyelitis experts and represents the position of the State Board of Health at this time. It is planned that the statement will be revised when the scientific facts accumulated warrant such change.

"For some years it has been apparent that the best hope for the control of polio lies in vaccination with the virus itself.

"More recently it has become clear that protection from paralysis can be produced in experimental animals by vaccines containing virus inactivated by chemicals — that is, virus incapable of causing disease.

"Preliminary trials of such vaccines in human beings indicate that they are harmless and that they produce immune responses which should be adequate to ward off paralysis.

"The proposed trials of vaccine are aimed at showing whether or not this is actually the case."

According to the board, present supplies of vaccine probably do not allow of trials extensive enough to furnish a completely conclusive answer this year, but it is felt that the amounts which will be available this spring may give suggestive answers and will indicate the important lines to follow next year.

MR. DEPENDABLE—Although two of the coldest days of the new year kept many workers from their jobs recently, Bernard Joseph of 1647 Poplar Grove st., upheld the tradition of the Post Office department and carried the mail through.

CLOTHED IN A BLANKET OF WHITE—The 2500 block W. Lafayette ave. made a picturesque scene with its shrubbery, cars and lawns banked with snow. The delights of the wintry weather which provided snow ball fights and sled rides for energetic youngsters failed to impress the harried car owner whose auto got stuck and the head of the household who had to shovel the walks. Last week's storm hit the entire Atlantic Coast area from Virginia to Maine, with some localities reporting as much as 15 inches of snow.

FUTURE TEACHERS GET THEIR VITAMINS—This quartet of freshmen students at Coppin State Teachers college, 2500 W. North ave., take time out from study to enjoy lunch in the new school's cafeteria. Seated clockwise, they are Misses Phyllis Russell of 829 N. Fremont ave.; Evelyn White, 229 Chesnut ct.; Jean Montgomery, 2309 W. Lexington st., and Elsye Moody of 1608 N. Caroline st.

WINTER WEATHER FUN—Thirteen-year-old Linwood Vaughn of 2230 Guilford ave., has fun with a sled he rented from a friend named Charles. "I paid him five cents yesterday," said Linwood. "He's supposed to get it back this evening." A 5A pupil at School No. 136, Linwood lives with his aunt, Mrs. Mary Woods.

ONE SODA POP FOR THREE—Despite the snow, these youngsters of Mr. and Mrs. Gamel Darby, 1508 N. Eden st., insisted that all three go to the store for one bottle of pop. While Reginald looks on in the background, Rena begs a drink from Jimmie, who looks unhappy at having to share it. But finally he gave in.

ON RED CROSS JOB—A working member of the American Red Cross for ten years, Miss Lucy Johnson of 2459 Brenwood ave. does mimeograph work at the chapter headquarters, St. Paul and 23rd sts. She also takes care of the organization's mailing and is a member of the motor service unit. She drives Station Wagon No. 14.

THE FEMININE TOUCH — Mrs. Emma Jackson of the 1800 block W. North ave. took shovel in hand to do a favor for a relative who had sprained an ankle. After waiting two days for the snow to melt, she decided "to take matters into my own hands."

SNOWBALL FIGHT COMING UP—When city schools were closed because of the snow, Albert Terry, 8, left, of 2301 N. Hunter st. and Michael Hastie, 12, of 218 E. 23rd st., turned their energy into more delightful channels. Here they are making ammunition for snow fight. Mike is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Hastie; Albert, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Terry Sr.
