—Coffee

Parade has dropped "There's An Awful Lot of Coffee in Brazil." There isn't.

Horacio Cintra Leite, U. S. representative of the Brazilian Coffee Institute admits that "Unhappily we have less coffee than we want to have."

Brazil's production normally is about 17,000,000 bags of coffee per year, but because of last year's frost, production was limited to slightly more than 14,000,000 bags.

To make matters worse, Brazil has been shipping out 1,200,000 bags of coffee a month. At this rate, the country could export all present supplies before the new crop is harvested in July.

Not Too Black

But around Baltimore, the black coffee situation isn't quite as bleak as it's painted.

The Acme supermarkets are advertising Asco coffee for only 89 and 99 cents per pound.

Smaller stores such as the Druid Hill Avenue establishment operated by Ged Coston can't quite meet those prices. The coffee he sold for $1.05 per pound two weeks ago, has now been upped to $1.10.

This same coffee was only 90 cents per pound a year ago. Two other brands of coffee are on sale there, one for $1 per pound, and another for 95 cents.

Restaurants Hold Prices

Although restaurant owners are paying more for coffee, most of them are still selling it for ten cents per cup. For this reason, they have noticed no decline in the number of coffee-drinking customers.

Misses Mildred Jackson and Mae Collins, waitresses at the York Hotel had one hotel guest who expressed surprise at the 10-cent charge because he had paid 15 cents elsewhere.

The York buys two ten-pound boxes of coffee per week.

Club 107 also holds to the 10-cents per cup rate. Thomas J. Osby, assistant manager, says this club buys one case of 24 pounds of coffee per month.

According to Miss Jenny Richardson of the Club Tijuana staff, no price increases have been effected. Coffee sells for ten cents per cup in the dining room, and 12 cents in the take-out carton.

Large Coffee Trade

The 10-cent price also prevails at the Alhambra. Mrs. Ida Chinn, waitress, boasts that "In the morning, particularly, we have a very large coffee trade."

According to Mrs. Hilda Henderson, an employee of the Vitalia tavern, "the price is 10 cents, as always."

At the Rice Inn, coffee still sells for 10 cents in the dining room and 15 cents on take-out service, according to Miss Louise Scott, a waitress.

But if you still want something to complain about, take the coffee situation in Venezuela, which is a coffee native country.

Commodity prices in Venezuela are geared to about double the prices in the states, so bonsuyes there pay 33 cents for a can of soup which costs only 16 cents here.

And coffee sells for $1.25 per kilo (a little more than a pound.) By United States standards, the price should be only 68 cents.

There's a corny old joke which ends: "Everybody to his own taste," said the old lady as she kissed the cow." At today's coffee prices, we can understand that kiss.

Ford article in college bulletin

How Morgan State is co-operating with high schools of the State in an effort to bring about better articulation between high school and college English is described by Dr. Nick Aaron Ford, head of the Morgan English department, in an article in the current issue of "College Composition and Communication."

The publication is the official bulletin of the Conference on College Composition and Communication and is edited by George S. Wykoff of Purdue university.

Entitled "A Maryland Project in Articulation," the article describes the formation of a committee of high school and college teachers of English in the State of Maryland to probe the problem of articulation.

Dr. Ford reports on a two-day conference which was held at Morgan May 1-2, 1953 to consider the problem, "How can the Gap between High school Achievement and College Expectation be Narrowed."

Dr. Ford points out that plans are under way to hold a second conference this year.

Mrs. Arnetta Wallace warns A.K.A.'s Opportunity with responsibility void

"Equal responsibility is the challenge of equal opportunity," Mrs. Arnetta Wallace of Nashville, Tenn., told a capacity audience at Enon Baptist church, here, Sunday.

Pointing out that the world is not keeping pace with science morally and spiritually, Mrs. Wallace added that neither freedom, education nor materialism are the answers to the present world disorder.

Said she:

"We must be self disciplined. We must learn to place first things first in order to live disciplined lives and to live with optimism. We must develop the techniques that combat insecurity, destruction, doubt and unrest. We must be honest in our search for truth and in the evaluation of ourselves.

Dignity Required

"We must keep alive the memory of those who have done great things before us, and we must cherish beauty of soul in ourselves and respect for the dignity of others. In other words, we must accept the standard of Christ and develop the ideas of perfection instead of being divided by creeds and races."

The occasion was the worship service of Epsilon Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, which celebrated Founder's Day, over the week end.

Mrs. Wallace, elevated to the post of grand basileus at the recent boule in St. Louis, was also speaker at the chapter banquet on Saturday night, when sorrors presented a program chiefly of social welfare, education and health.
