New Normal School Dedicated

In the presence of many noted educators and distinguished visitors, the new State Normal School Buildings, at Towson, were dedicated last Friday afternoon. At the close of the exercises an inspection of the magnificent dormitories and commodious academic building took place. Those present were loud in their praises of the fine equipment provided by the State for the education of its teachers.

The four brick buildings which constitute the new State Normal School are among the finest of their kind in the United States. As a group they are strikingly distinctive. They are set high on a knoll which commands an extensive view of the surrounding country, and the grounds about them have been laid off with walks and shrubbery, giving an artistic effect.

Ralston Smiles

We have no patience with a shoe that will not nearly ALWAYS do. The half-and-half sort are a pest—there are no varied grades of "BEST."

When Ralston-shod, you need not fear, that they might strike some folks as "queer." In office, on the links—a stroll—they always seem to make a goal.

You may be dining with a pal—or spooning with some fellow's gal: you may be sitting in a show, or where the stylish gentry go—no matter—RALSTONS are "in place"—the vogue and leading ev'ry race. With proper pride, you look 'em o'er, as friends and strangers have before. You say the while:—"they're pretty fit—there's not a single doubt of it."

A Moral here for Mr. Man, who tries some other sort of plan. Why not a shoe of sterling worth, th' peer of any line on earth. Then—be ye home or ANYWHERE, your shoes need never cause you care.
