Observance of Lent brings happiness if it's understood

By REV. BARTHOLOMEW F. HINES, S. S. J.
St. Peter Claver Church

Many times we find people who look upon Lent as a time of great sadness and unhappiness.

Sometimes they even excuse themselves from its observance on the grounds that they have little enough pleasure in this world without giving some of it up for Lent.

It is sad but true, but these people do not understand the meaning of Lent.

The person who fully understands its meaning and enters into its spirit wholeheartedly finds that rather than being a time of sadness, its observance brings happiness.

Self Discipline

The self discipline of lent is not the mere giving up of something, for giving up is a loss.

Actually it is the exchange of something which we do not need for something we do need.

By disciplining ourselves during Lent, we discover that we can get along very well without the selfishness we have been acquistomed to at home or at work, without the intemperate use of food or drink, without the sensuality that imposes only agony of soul.

And so we find that what we have given up during Lent we are well rid of and its place we have gained a peace of soul which brings happiness never before experienced.

The second national conference on "Juvenile Delinquencies and Their Causes" will be held at the Department of Interior in Washington April 29-30.

According to William S. Taylor, co-ordinator of the Eastside Community Committee of Baltimore, and publicity manager of the planning committee, the slogan for the conference will be "Mobilization for the Conservation of Youth."

The conference will be a "grass roots type of assembly," sponsored by lay people who live with the problems of delinquency in their communities.

It is hoped that the conference will strengthen participating social and civic-minded groups, and will serve as stimulus for joint objectives providing youth with facilities affecting their community living.

Mr. Taylor gives credit to the following persons for helping to secure a meeting place for the national conference:

Senator J. Glenn Beall, of Maryland; Douglas McKay, secretary, Department of Interior; Golden B. Darby, co-ordinator, Southside Community Committee Chicago, and Governor Theodore McKeldin.

Modern life decisions must be faster says psychologist

"There is no place in life for blind purpose or indecision, for there are consequences to be reckoned with." This was the statement of Dr. Roger K. Williams, head of the department of psychology at Morgan State, speaking recently at Christ Methodist church.

Dr. Williams appeared in the closing program of the church's 19th annual Men's Day Observance.

Faces Two Problems

"At every point in life, the man who is worth his salt," said the psychologist, "faces these two problems:

"(1) the necessity of making a decision and of thinking critically; and (2) the necessity of growing in the consequences of his decisions."

"Modern life is not different from that of yesteryear except that decisions must be faster and more efficient. The modern man must grow in the consequences of his decisions."

Principles Of Growth

As principles to aid men in growth, Dr. Williams urged his audience:

"To cultivate friendliness and helpfulness; to set the kind of examples we should like others to set for us; to try to pass the test of courage; and to be honest with ourselves."

The Rev. Frank L. Williams is pastor of Christ church. Men's Day was presented under the auspices of the Methodist Men whose president is James Parker.

Dr. Williams was also guest speaker at the recent youth day observance at Waters AME church. The Rev. W. B. Nash is pastor.

Bishop backed in K. of C. struggle

The Most Rev. Floyd L. Begin, auxiliary Bishop of Cleveland, received support from Baltimore this week.

Last week Bishop Begin flayed the Cleveland Knights of Columbus council for its racial prejudice.

The Bishop charged that three colored persons who sought membership in the council had been "blackballed." The order's charter committee later refused to issue a charter to an interracial chapter.

In Baltimore, members of the Knights of Columbus called a meeting to discuss Bishop Begin's scathing denunciation.

According to William F. Allenbaugh, grand knight of the council, "the majority of the members agreed that we should back Bishop Begin."

A statement signed by Mr. Allenbaugh was distributed to other Knights of Columbus councils in Maryland.

The statement urges "immediate re-examination of the principles of the order, the actions of the Supreme Board and a program of action to eliminate unwise administration which might lead to self-destruction of the order."

Bishop Begin assailed the Knights who contributed to the rejection of the interracial council's charter as "traitors." The only reason they're keeping them out is their color.

"Anyone who denies that is a pussyfooting liar," the fighting Bishop charged. "They should grant the charter and be done with it and not inquire about the color of the member's skins."

Meanwhile, Bishop Begin has offered to join a new mixed council of the Cleveland Knights of Columbus, when and if a charter is granted.

When the interracial council was first suggested, more than a hundred men paid portions of their dues and some made payments on their Knights insurance.

The Charter Committee of the Knights of Columbus refused to issue the necessary papers. An appeal was carried to the Supreme Council, which upheld the refusal.

Several prominent civic officials, among them Charles P. Lucas, executive, secretary of the NAACP, have praised Bishop Begin's stand.

There are colored members of Knights of Columbus councils in other Ohio cities and communities throughout the United States.

Business Trends

AFRO Personnel Director

As final touches are put on the tax bill going to the House, the Washington air is filled with the hullaballoo of horse trading, compromising and political posturing.

There is much headline confusion but no real confusion on how the main ideas line up behind the scenes.

This is how it lines up at present:

Most of the Ways-and-Means proposals will pass both Houses.

2. Most excise taxes are likely to be cut to a ceiling of 10 per cent except for liquor and tobacco. You can discount statements to the contrary. They are part of the hush-hush policy that is always followed when excise cuts are in the works.

If publicly announced in advance, customers would hold off buying to take advantage of lower tax rates.

3. An increase in personal exemptions is still likely—even if President Eisenhower, as rumored, takes to TV and radio to plead against it.

Possible Compromise

A possible compromise that is gaining favor behind the closed doors is a hike of $50 in exemptions, plus a new five percent cut in individual rates.

This may be the Republican counter-move to the Democrats' proposal.

4. A sleeper in the picture may be the widely overlooked GOP idea of reviving an earned income credit, which was used until 1954.

Income up to $3,000 was considered earned, and taxpayers earning up to $14,000 could exclude 10 percent of earned income from normal tax.

Congress could adjust the formula to yield somewhat larger savings, in line with the reductions contemplated in the other proposals.

How Taxes Would Ease

Comparing the major proposals, here is how taxes would ease for a married man with two children:

Total Gross Income	Tax at Rate	If Exemption Raised $100	If Exemption $50 and rate cut 5 percent
$4,000	[illegible]	$160	$100
$10,000	$1,372	$1,284	$1,262
$15,000	$2,616	$2,512	$2,436

The question is, how much economic stimulation will this tax easement give to the country?

Assuming the $100 increase in exemptions is passed, the $4,000 a-year man would find about $1.45 extra in his paycheck weekly.

This could mean continuing time payments on an item with less strain than before, or it might mean even the purchase of that new $1 down, $1 per week appliance or furniture.

The $10,000 per year man would find only about $1.70 more weekly pay and the $15,000 a year man would enjoy only $2.00 additional money per week.

Could It Be Spent?

The second question of course is whether the money would be spent. Nobody knows the answer because no one knows enough about WHY a consumer buys or doesn't buy at a given time, to be able to predict.

Deputy Labor Commission Wickens, in answer to questions about income rise and fall and people's pending patterns replied:

"When income rises, the family continues for a time to live in the same house, to buy about the same kinds of food and clothing. It is only after some time elapses that it adjusts to a higher level of income.

"This stickiness in the spending pattern also follows as income diminishes," he said.

B&O railroad employee fights two policemen

A B and O railroad freight-man exchanged blows with two railroad policemen, early Friday.

An hour later, Joseph O. Evans, 34, 500 block Sanford place was hauled into South western police station. He was charged with disorderly conduct and assaulting the officers.

Magistrate Simon Schonfield found Evans guilty and fined him $35 and costs. The fine was withdrawn, however, when defense counsel, Robert Watts, NAACP attorney, filed an appeal.

Released On Bail

Evans was released late Friday on $200 bail.

The new trial is expected to be reviewed soon before Judge Michael J. Manley of criminal court. The date will be set by the state's attorney's office.

The altercation occurred as Evans was driving through a gate at Pier 6, in the freight yard, to get his pay check.

Though his car lacked the necessary sticker for identification, Evans said he was waved through by the guards.

'Get The H-I'

As he drove pass the officers, one of them blew his whistle and hailed him back. Evans quoted one of the guards as saying, "Get the h-l out of the yards."

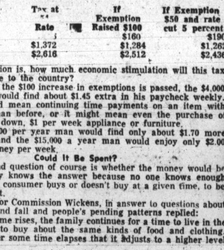
"As I started back, the two men stepped me, opened the door and started beating me with their fists and handcuffs," Evans said, showing the welt on his forehead.

The two guards, Edwin S. Hindman and George L. Herman, claimed the fight began when Evans reportedly called them "Big head s.o.b's" as they ordered him to turn back.

They said they went up to the car "to give Evans a lecture" when he struck at both of them.

Two other employees were with Evans at the time of the fight. They were Herbert Lyles, 1100 block N. Monroe st., and James Watson, 2700 block Baker st.

Each of the men has worked in the yards three years and claimed to have entered through the gate several times before, to get their pay checks.



MRS. DIANE WELLS

Three arrested for forgery

A 29-year-old furniture store janitor, a father and his 16-year-old son were ordered held in total bail of $18,500 Saturday on charges of passing ten bogus checks.

The accused are Charles E. Gross of the 1400 block Brunt st.; Walter Williams, 39, 500 block Johannsen st.; and Louis Williams, 16, son of Mr. Williams.

Officers testified in Northwestern police court that Mr. Gross stole checks from a furniture store in the 1100 block Pennsylvania ave., filled them out and then gave them to the youth and his father to cash.

The owner of the store, Thomas T. Smith, notified police when his bank statement revealed that a number of checks had been forged and cashed.

The youth has been turned over to juvenile authorities.

State Senate seat

At a regular meeting of the Northern Arundel Republican club, Inc., J. Lawrence Greene Jr., candidate for the State Senate, resigned as president of the club.

Earl K. Wellschlager, an attorney from Severna Park, was elected to head the organization. Serving with him are Darrell Bell, treasurer and Mrs. Bell, signed with a large "D."

An additional note was addressed to the administrator of Mr. Wells' estate and a "thank you" note to a friend. Printed on a torn piece of yellow classified telephone directory was:

'Happy Valentine; I Love You'

"Happy Valentine. I love you." The valentine message bore no name, no initials.

Under the empty sleeping pill bottle was still another note, saying: "Bill: I had 30 of them." The writing then trailed off and became illegible, according to officers, as she apparently dozed off.

The body was identified by William Colupbany (apparently the person mentioned in the note about the sleeping pills), a friend of the Wellses, who formerly operated a dance studio in Fairbanks.

Blonde beauty skips trial; ends own life

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Indicted with jazz drummer Johnny Warren in the slaying of her rich husband in Alaska, Mrs. Diane Wells took her own life in a hotel here Tuesday.

The beautiful and blonde Mrs. Wells and the musician had been scheduled to face trial next month in the killing of her husband, Cecil Wells, in one of of Alaska's most sensational murder cases.

Indicted Last Year

Mrs. Wells, 31, and Mr. Warren, 33, were indicted by a grand jury in Fairbanks in the mystery shooting of her husband, last Oct. 17.

Mr. Warren, free under $5,000 bail in Fairbanks and employed as a grocery clerk and playing in a band, told newmen he had "no comment" on Mrs. Wells' death.

When the story "broke" last year, Mr. Warren told the press that there was a romance between himself and the blonde beauty. She denied any romance, but admitted that she had been seeing Mr. Wells.

They had discussed breaking off the relationship and he had left Alaska for California when the fatal shooting took place, Mr. Warren said.

Arrested in Oakland, he told police he had been attracted to Mrs. Wells when she winked at him while dancing with her husband at a dance at which he was playing in Fairbanks.

"Her eyes led me to believe that she might appreciate some attention," Mr. Warren said.

Husband Worth Half Million

Mr. Wells was president of the All-Alaska Chamber of Commerce, wealthy automobile dealer in Fairbanks, his estate being valued at approximately $500,000. Mrs. Wells was his fifth wife.

The husband was found shot in bed and Mrs. Wells, her face bruised and eyes blackened, was carried to a hospital, where she remained for a short time after the fatal shooting.

She told police that she had been beaten into unconsciousness by two men who had broken into their home and when she regained her senses, her husband was dead in his bed.

She left Alaska but was arrested in Seattle, Wash., following indictment by the grand jury.

Was Under $10,000 Bond

Free under $10,000 bond, she reportedly came to Los Angeles to obtain treatment for nervousness resulting from the attack made upon her at the time of her husband's death.

Her son, Marquam, 5, had been placed in a nursery here.

Dets. B. C. Armstrong and A. W. Hubka said that Mrs. Wells, carrying no luggage, checked into the Hollywood Plaza hotel about 6:30 Monday night. She went directly to her room and apparently never left it.

According to investigating officers, her death was due to an overdose of sleeping pills.

Used Fictitious Name

Detectives said Mrs. Wells had registered under the name of Doris May of Denver, but carried a key to a room in another hotel in her purse. It was through the purse that her identity was established.

The officers also found a note which read:

"For one thing, I am guilty, too, for ever seeing Warren and Warren is guilty (sic). One thing for sure is Cecil is dead and I must be the cause of it one way or another."

The handwritten note was
