Chestertown People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them.

Passages are sometimes frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is often present day and night.

at Great

Why do great m children?

I propound this ax phraseology in order to state the converse proposition that men do have great children," which fact I shall proceed to demonstrate.

The law of sex is determined by the superior parent. The superior parent produces the opposite sex.

Like many great truths, this is directly contrary to almost, if not quite, all human predilections and idiosyncracies.

Yet it is a self-evident fact to any practical observer—provable by even a cursory reflection on immediate surroundings, not only of the human, but also of the brute creation.

Every male calf resembles his mother and every female calf its male progenitor. This rule extends through all animal procreation, and even fowls preserve it; e. g. notice you recently hatched chickens.

The answer then to the orginal proposition—Why do great men never have great children? is: "Great men do have great children, but they are females"; in other words, the father begets the girl, and the mother produces the boy. This is evidently the Divine plan for preserving the equilibrium of the world.

The popular expression: "There never was a great man who did not have a great mother," is absolutely correct; he had to have a great mother or he could not have been a great man.

And the failure to recognize this universal fact has been the fruitful cause of the world's stagnation and decrepitude, for deep in the human mind is the false idea that the boy must necessarily be great because his father was eminent and the son is expected to be a prodigy because his father was renowned.

On the contrary, men are attracted by opposite characteristics; and an active mentality seeks repose and solace in gentle acquiescence and invariable obedience. Great minds seek consolation in companionship with doll-like fashion-plates, whose simpering assent is pleasing to their vanity and consoling to their pride, so often provoked by the fierce antagonism of conflict on the world's arena.

The result is inevitable in a male progeny of molly-coddles, flaunting a great name under pre-natal impediments.

And if we p s subject to its legitimate c we find the solution of t day problem of female lead man had been kept so lo ary and unjust tutelage th tu rebellion was the inevitable quence; hence, in recent years, she en gradually asserting her natur alienable rights, and emancip f from an enforced subserv

Unde w of sex" the result will b e succeeding generation of m ing the virility of their mo oubtedly be worthy of the ancestral lineage, because its renown will be restored by the legitimate action of the law of procreation. Woman restored to her proper sphere will produce a race of men who will partake of her practical efficiency, and we may hope that the next generation of men will resume their rightful leadership lost by present effeminacy, profligacy.

There Will Be No Peace in the World.

NUMBER II.

TO THE EDITORS:

A very remarkable idea obtains in the minds of many, and that is that the war in Europe is the last great war, and that it is a war for peace.

"All that is now necessary is to break Prussian militarism, and then the millennium is assured," many say. So while the war is raging, men are proclaiming for the future, "peace and safety."

How few know that the prophetic word is being fulfilled in this awful conflict! Our great boasted civilization has broken down; for while man has undoubtedly been refined and educated and "cultured," it is scarcely more than veneer, for in battle he oftentimes seems as barbarous as in the days of Attila or Alaric.

In a cartoon that appeared in one of the late magazines, the savage's view of this war was well and truly presented. In his native wild sits the savage, reading a "war special," under a tree, against which leans his great spear. And as he reads the terrible records of destruction and barbarity, he exclaims in disgust: "Och! the heathen!"

It is undoubtedly true that this war between so-called "Christian nations" must strike the non-Christian onlooker very strangely. I am reminded of an experience which an American missionary in the Fiji Islands had shortly after the war broke out between Great Britian and the Boers. He was editing a little paper at the time, in the Fijian language, and some articles concerning that war were presented to our Fijian readers.

One day a Fijian Christian sought and obtained an interview. He was exercised over the war. His statement of the case from a native standpoint was pointed and convincing. It was much as follows: "The English and the Boer are both Christian people. They b employ chaplains to accompany encourage their soldiers. These lains on both sides pray to th God for the success of their r armies. How can God ansy When the English missiona the Fijians the message listened to it. Would it some Fijian missionarie land and preach a simil What could be said
