MORE SCENES OF WALBROOK AREA

RESIDENTS STILL FIGHTING:

Walbrook area solidly against taxicab site

(This is the second of two articles on the dispute between taxicab garage and headquarters in Northwest Baltimore).

By BUDDY LONESOME

The Diamond Cab company wants to put a taxi-cab garage on a lot behind the 2000 block of Braddish ave.

This location, in the heart of the Walbrook residential area, has long been one of the choice sections for colored home buyers in Baltimore.

When the cab company first announced its intention to locate in the Walbrook area, the residents let out a howl of protest. Many of them formed neighborhood clubs to fight the move.

The cab company is presently located in the 2800 block of Greenmount ave. Because of the Waverly redevelopment project, Diamond Cab will have to move. The company's first choice was the site of the old Oriole baseball park. White neighborhood improvement groups in the area loudly proclaimed they didn't want the cab garage in their midst.

Plans Dropped

The plans to locate at Oriole Park were quickly dropped.

The colored residents in the Walbrook area weren't so fortunate.

They also protested loudly—but to no avail.

In fact, their representatives in the City Council ignored the wishes of the community residents and backed the cab company.

At public hearing on the issue was held in the City Council. Residents from the Walbrook area jammed both floors of the council chambers.

The overflow crowd clogged the corridors of City Hall.

Civic Agencies Also Protest

Representatives from the Urban League and the Citizens Planning and Housing Association were on hand to protest the shift of the cab company to Walbrook.

Nine persons present were in favor of the taxicab shift.

Despite the overwhelming opposition voiced by residents of the area, the City Council passed the measure with but one dissenting vote.

The lone dissenter was Councilman Meredith Boyce (D., Third District). He spearheaded the fight against the cab company locating in Oriole Park.

Plan Legal Action

The residents in the area are still fighting, however.

They have raised more than $500 and have petitioned the NAACP to help them. Robert Watts, NAACP lawyer, has been assigned to the case.

Mr. Watts expects to file an appeal to the City Council decision in the local courts early next week.

The various neighborhood groups in the Walbrook area are demonstrating a solid show of force in protesting the taxicab shift.

Club Official Speak

Charles Harper, 2000 block Braddish ave., is vice-president of the 1900-2200 blocks of Braddish ave. Neighborhood club. Mr. Harper said:

"If there is any way humanly possible to rectify their mistake, the City Council ought to act. They flatly disregarded the opposition of the residents in the area."

James Murray, 1605 Moreland ave., is president of the Moreland Avenue Improvement and Protective Association. Mr. Murray said:

"We feel, for the most part, that even though we aren't in the immediate neighborhood, it affects one of our sister communities and demands a show of force.

"Then too, Diamond Cab doesn't seem to want any colored drivers—so why should we suffer with their noise and racket?

"This is one ordeal we have got to win," Mr. Murray said.

La-Burt Club In Fight

Mr. Mae Medders, 908 Ashburton st., is president of the La-Burt Improvement Association. Mrs. Medders said:

"We're against it because even though we aren't in that neighborhood it represents what can happen. It also shows how politicians can be used to take advantage of the ordinary citizens."

Samuel Daniels, 1516 Payson st., is president of the Pavsonite Neighborhood Club. Mr. Daniels said: "It would create a headache for the people living in the immediate neighborhood."

Lester Hudgins, 1535 Pulaski st., is president of the 1300 block Pulaski st. Neighborhood Club. Mr. Hudgins said:

"Anytime you put any type of enterprise that large in a residential area, it's going to cause a certain amount of property depreciation.

"Then too, when an area is zoned commercial, anything might happen."

Rupp-Pulaski Club

William Proctor, 1621 Pulaski st., is president of the Rupp-Pulaski Block Club. Mr. Proctor said:

"There are several reasons why I am against it. But I think the most obvious reason is that it would be right in the midst of a residential area.

"When the white residents protested the move to Oriole Park it was dropped almost immediately. The cab company will also create a traffic hazard for children in the Walbrook area."

Individual Neighbors Protest

The neighbors in the area have also registered their individual protests.

Mrs. Ruth Walker, 2023 Braddish ave., said: "I'm against it because it will tend to make the neighborhood commercial. We could even wind up with a hairraising parlor in every basement.

"This was a nice residential neighborhood when I moved in here in 1950. That's the way we want it to stay."

Mrs. Anita Myers, 2027 Braddish ave., said: "It's going to be a great mess. I hope that we'll be able to prevent them from moving in.

"It will make property depreciate, and will also be dangerous for the children." Mrs. Myers moved into her home in 1951.

Mr. Hailey Protests

Harold Hailey, 2045 Braddish ave., said: "The entire neighborhood has been fighting the taxicab traffic. It has been pretty far but I hope we can stop it.

"It will also create a traffic hazard. This is a small street and can't stand a constant number of cars." Mr. Hailey moved in the neighborhood in 1951.

Mrs. Mae McClain, 2650 W. North ave., has been living in her home since 1932. "I don't want it for it will bring the neighborhood down," she said.

"I can think of several reasons, right off - hand why I wouldn't want it. I can't think of one reason why I would want a cab company at my back door."

'It's An Outrage'

Howard Cottles, 1709 Moreland ave., said: "It's an outrage that our City Councilmen would allow a cab company to locate in this community.

"While the cab company's proposed location won't directly affect me, I can well understand the objections raised against it. I hope the community fights against it is successful."

Mrs. Mary Boardley, 3009 Walbrook ave., said: "I was shocked when I heard that our City Councilmen had let us down. To think that the only man voting against the cab company—and for us—was from another district.

"We have a long memory though and will remember our friends as well as our enemies."

'Don't Feel So Go-d'

Clifton Foster, 2221 Duke'and st., has been living in his present home since August. "I don't feel so good about this situation. I will have a cab company right in my back yard almost."

Mrs. Jacqueline Schiff, is a white resident living at 2227 Dukeland st. Although her house is up for sale. Mrs. Schiff said: "I don't think they should have a cab garage here.

"I think they should have used the ground as a playground for the children. They've talked so about having a playground and a shopping center on that ground—and now it's going to be a taxicab garage."

NAACP SPEAKER—Dr. Margaret Just Butcher, member of the Washington, D. C. school board, will be the principal speaker Houston Memorial server at the NAACP's Charles ices, April 25 at Trinity Baptist church.

COUNCILMAN, RESIDENTS 14

sentiment at Mr. Goodman's statement.

Mr. Ewing sensed the audience's mounting indignation and loudly rapped for order.

Running For Senate

As Democratic councilman from the Fifth District, Mr. Goodman represents the people in the area surrounding the cab site. He is presently running for the State Senate from the same district.

After he dropped his bombshell, Mr. Goodman left the meeting to "keep another appointment."

In his earlier remarks at the forum, Mr. Goodman was also raked over the coals.

He devoted a large portion of his talk to a personal attack on Earl Koger, local insurance man and civic official who printed 8,000 copies of an open letter denouncing Mr. Goodman and other City Councilmen who voted for the cab company.

Bob Watts Reminder

The audience listened to him quietly.

When Mr. Goodman had finished however, Robert Watts, local attorney, reminded the city Councilman that "the important issue at hand is not Mr. Koger's letter but an explanation of your stand on the ordinance which led to the cab site."

"I vote as I feel. If I had a chance I would vote for it again," Mr. Goodman replied.

Miss Doris Freeland then expressed resentment at Mr. Goodman's stand and said: "It's your place to vote for what we want as our representative and a member of the Fifth District delegation in the City Council."

"That's a matter of opinion," Mr. Goodman answered.

Another member of the audience asked Mr. Goodman: "What criteria do you use in voting on whether to change an area from residential to commercial?"

"Vote As I Feel"

Mr. Goodman answered: "I vote as I feel, that's all I can say."

A member of the audience asked: "Whom did you try to please? Youvare supposed to please us."

"I did what I thought was right," Mr. Goodman said.

Councilman Flynn Talks

Councilman Frank Flynn, also from the Fifth District, followed.

Taking a different approach from his colleague, Mr. Flynn said: "I am always happy to be with my constituents."

Commenting on the resentment engendered by Mr. Goodman's statement, Mr. Flynn said: "Self-preservation is the first law of nature and I don't blame you for feeling had if you feel you are not getting a fair shake."

Lives In Walbrook

Mr. Flynn then described himself as a resident of the Walbrook area for 32 years. He now lives at 3308 Windsor ave.

"Your right to live, and I am all for it," said Mr. Flynn, "does not transcend the right of the other man to live.

"The Diamond Cab co. has done a lot for this city. The City of Baltimore walked out in this place and they had to move somewhere.

Cites Big Rats

"There's an old lot on the cab site that is presently used as a playground. Rats in that section approach the size of cats.

"Notwithstanding the fact that I live in the neighborhood, I felt it more desirable to have the modern brick garage, proposed by the cab company than the present rat-infested lot," Councilman Flynn declared.

He concluded by stating that the cab company had agreed to enter and leave the garage only from an entrance on North ave.

Carroll Sums Up

James Carroll, member of the New Area Neighborhood assn. and a local school teacher, summed up the attitude of the residents who objected to a cab company locating at the Walbrook site.

Mr. Carroll said statements contained in Mr. Koger's letter were mild in comparison to feelings voiced by other members of the area.

The school teacher than recounted an attempt by the Cab co. to relocate in a Greenmount ave. location.

"This proposal was quickly dropped after Meredith Boyce, 3rd District councilman, put up such a fight against the location," Mr. Carroll asserted.

Chides City Councilmen

"Our City Councilmen (The Fifth District delegation) should have put up a similar fight.

"In a statement to the AFRO, Councilman Alpert declared that 'we usually go along with the councilmen from the district.' The Fifth District delegation should have spearheaded our fight," Mr. Carroll declared.

Toward the end of the meeting, Linwood Koger, Republican candidate for the 4th District Congressional seat, appeared.

An old acquaintance of Frank Flynn, Mr. Koger recounted instances when Mr. Flynn had asked his advice. His advice wasn't sought by the City Councilman on the Diamond cab site, he said.

"Frankie, my boy, I believe this is one time your heart told you wrong," Mr. Koger declared.

SERVES FOR COLONEL

Airman Basic Bailey Y. Dodson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo D. Dodson, 1644 Buxton ave., was recently "orderly for the day" for Col. Clair L. Wood, commander of Sampson Air Force Base, N.Y.

Falls two stories in mystery plunge

Critically injured when he fell on a second story roof, William Miller, 33, of the 1800 block Fremount ave., was fighting for his life at Provident hospital late Thursday.

Mr. Miller was found unconscious in the yard of a home in the 1400 block Madison ave. Wednesday night. He was taken to Provident where physicians reported that he had a fractures skull and a possible cerebral concussion.

Late Thursday, Mr. Miller was still unconscious at the hospital, making it impossible for police to piece together the full story of how he fell from the roof.

Found In Yard

In an early report on the incident, police said they received a call that an injured man was in the yard of the Madison st. house, shortly after 8 p.m. on Wednesday.

They found Mr. Miller lying in the yard, and on the steps leading to the second flor. They found a pair of shoes and a hat believed to belong to the injured man.

After establishing that Mr. Miller did not live in the house, police went to an address in the 1100 block W. Franklin st., where they obtained some papers belonging to the injured man.

Moved Away

They learned that Mr. Miller had moved away from the address almost a year ago, and was presently living at the Fairmount ave. address.

The owner of the house, Mrs. Pearl Palmer, identified Mr. Miller as a roomer, police said.

They were balked in their attempts to learn how and why Mr. Miller entered the house, since there were no witnesses to the fall.

Fraser elected to NARST unit

Dr. Fraser's committee has the responsibility of preparing a critical review of published research studies in science education on the college level for the period July, 1953 to July, 1954.

The Morgan professor was formerly vice-chairman of the 18-member committee. The present vice-chairman is Dr. Clarence H. Nelson of Michigan State University.

Brooklyn school admits law student

WHOA, WILLIE, WILLYA!:

'Mays may make me mad,' Hicks howls over homer

By JAMES L. HICKS

I love baseball players like an old Kentucky colonel loves his rock and rye—but this man Willie Mays seems to want to turn my love into a "Richochet romance" the way he is treating them Brooklyn Dodgers.

Maybe before I go any further I'd better tell you how it is with me. After years (most of them lean) of living among the flatbushs of Brooklyn, I am first last, sideways, and always a Dodger rooter.

Nobody but nobody gets between me and "Dem Bums"—nobody that is, but this kid Willie Mays.

You Take Mays

Now take this kid, Mays—(no, YOU take him). Willie is all right. He's a "Club Member" he's a nice guy, he can hit, run and really cover that garden spot out there.

And I like him. No kidding, I like him about as much as any Brooklyn fan can like a guy who works for Leo Durocher.

But the kid's conduct in public has me worried. Take that opening game Tuesday at the Polo Grounds.

He's we are up there with 32,397 people in the stands on opening day and Heavens knows how many watching on TV.

Like They Should

Roy Campanella goes up there and slaps two homerums just like he's supposed to do, Jackie Robinson is swiping bases like and running those bases like the Dodgers are supposed to do, and even this rookie kid Amoros is going "one for one." and looking like a real Bum.

Things are going real great before that great crowd, and we go into the sixth inning "even Steven" with them Giants and giving the crowd a real show.

And then what happens? This kid Mays steps up there and breaks up the ball game!

Who Does He Think He Is?

You see what I'm talking about? Here we are kidding around with them Giants and giving the crowd a break, and what does this fresh kid do? He hits a 425-foot homerun out the park!

I get mad every time I think about it! Who does this kid think he is anyway? Eisenhower or somebody?

Here he comes marching home from the Army and embarrasses the great Dodgers before 32,000 people.

What's wrong with him: Hasn't he been reading the papers? Didn't he read the papers last October? He's probably read the Army's fault. They don't read the papers enough in them Army camps.

This is "Next Year"

Anybody who reads the papers after the last World Series knows plumb well that Jackie Robinson and the Dodgers told us Dodger fans to "wait 'til next year."

Doesn't Willie know that when we said "next year" last year this was the year we were talking about? Well what's the matter with him?

I know, I know, I know, the Dodgers have said "Wait 'til next year 'many times before, but this time they mean it. This is the year to take them Yankees.

And we can't take them Yankees without some of the gang around the Theresa will get to him and talk to him and tell him not to be so brash and embarrass the Dodgers like that again.

I hope so, because I don't want no richochet romance with Willie. But we Dodgers fans can't stand that kind of embarrassment this early in the season and Willie ought to know it.

It's subversive. That's what it is!

Hey that gives me an idea! I think I'll ask old Joe McCarthy to check up on this boy Mays.

'Course I know Mays has never done anything UnAmerican in his life, but neither had Annie Lee Moss, but McCarthy got her kicked out of her job for awhile even, if the Army did give it back to her.

Maybe we could get old Joe to call Mays down for an "investigation" until we Dodgers can get about a 13 game lead on them Giants.

Anyway, this kid had better stop embarrassing Dem Bums. It's too early in the season for that kind of trash!

out to me which was the home team. I asked him how he knew. He said because they are wearing white uniforms. They were, at that, so I didn't argue the point.

Just before the game got under way, the umpires walked out. I knew who they were because they were wearing dark uniforms. Everybody booed, even before they had a chance to call any plays wrong.

Vice-President Nixon threw out the first ball after making a short speech. He said he hoped the new Orioles would be "as strong and as good as the old ones." The crowd hoped they would be better.

McKeldin Beamed

Governor McKeldin just beamed. Then the action started.

I would use the names of the players, but their names weren't on their uniforms. So all I know their numbers.

Another thing, while I'm at it. About the balls and strikes, I can't call 'em as I saw 'em, because I didn't know one from the other. I just took the score board's word for it.

At the time the score board was wrong and had to be changed. I think they did that just to confuse me.

Anyway, Chicago was at bat first. No. 17 got on first base. No. 2 popped up and out. No. 31 walked. No. 4 popped up for the second out. No. 8 popped flied (or is it flew)? out.

Then they changed sides.

Things were really speeded up at the courthouse on game day. The offices all closed down at noon.

Posted on the door of Room 422, the Circuit Court clerk's office, was a written sign saying, "Closed on account of watchman sick."

Another sign was on the door of Room 405, the jury assembly room. It said, "Attending grand mother's funeral," and was signed by Vincent D. Campbell.

The Orioles came to bat next. No. 5 popped out. So did No. 3. No. 16 walked. No. 20 struck out. Then they changed sides again. My advisor said that ended the first inning.

So Was The Judge

Judge James K. Cullen was heard in criminal court Friday morning. After the second witness testified, attorneys asked if he could be excused.

"I was 11 a.m. "She certainly may be excused," Judge Cullen granted, "And so will the judge."

He left the bench. The case was continued until Monday.

In the second inning, Chicago's No. 10 singled. No. 7 struck out. No. 5 singled. No. 23 struck out. So did No. 17. Then they changed sides again.

Why aren't those bat boys in school?

The loud speaker asked former Magistrate Martin K. Lanter to call home at once. Said it was important. (Mr. Miller is running for a political office. Hah.)

Wha' Happened?

The Orioles were at bat. No 15 was put out at first. No. 4 made first base. No. 6 was put out at first. (I must have missed something. I'm here because my notes don't show what happened.

but I'm sure there was a third out before they changed sides again.)

Something must have happened when I discovered the running in my stocking. Honestly, I just took my eyes off the game for one second.

A Matter Of Tenses

For Chicago in the third inning, No. 2 pop flew. Funny, this dictionary doesn't clear up the matter of tenses here. So did No. 31. Then No. 9 struck out.

The loudspeaker told an old company executive from Philadelphia to call his office. He was asked to call his secretary because of an emergency.

There were some suggestive remarks made about that, but this is strictly a baseball story.

For the Orioles, No. 11 hit a home run. The crowd cheered. No. 33 was put out at first. No. 5 was put out at first. No. 3 singled, and walked.

They Liked The Pitcher

There was a paid attendance of 46,354. Of this number 46,354 white handkerchiefs started waving.

My advisor said they were waving at Chicago's pitcher. I don't see why they would single him out for such enthusiastic greeting. Everybody was just as glad to have the rest of the team as our guests.

Anyway, the handkerchiefs were still fluttering, the Orioles' No. 20 walked. No. 15 popped out. The man on base was put out at second.

Well, that's the way things went throughout the game. Either the guys got on base or they didn't.

After a few more handkerchief demonstrations, Chicago substituted No. 19 as a pitcher. He threw one ball, the batter got on base, so they substituted No. 12.

Maternity Case

The loud speaker was kept busy. It summoned several doctors to the phone. At one time, it called one spectator to call the maternity ward of a hospital.

Everybody howled so loudly, nobody heard the name of the hospital. But I suppose the new father knew which one.

Well, as I said, that's the way it went. We got two home runs. The visiting team made one run, but it wasn't the home kind.

The crowd applauded sometimes and booed sometimes. They stretched in the seventh inning. You see they were tired of sitting down, and baseball doesn't provide any half-time relief.

We Got Gypped

This baseball guide refers to food quite often. It says some thing about a Baltimore chop, a bean ball, an apple, a meat hand, a grapefruit league and a strawberry.

Well they didn't serve any of that on Thursday, but the hot-dogs were delicious.

—Lacy

in right and Stephenes' scattered the fans in the leftfield seats.

Chicago failed her only run in the seventh when, with two down, Chico Carrasquel, Fox and Boyd singled in rapid succession, the latter getting the RBI.

But with the tying run on third, Minoso ended the threat by whiffing.

Fielding gem of the day was turned in by Minoso when he stole a bases—loaded hit away from Sam Mele in the third and turned it into an inning-ending force-out.

The Orioles had filled the sacks with a single by Eddie Waitkins and walks to Gil Coan and Vic Wertz, with two out.

Mele slammed one of Trucks' fast balls into the bleachers, two short and third and the crowd gave with a roar as it envisioned two sure runs for their cause.

Minoso, however, threw himself at the ball, gloved it while sprawling on the ground, scrambled up and tossed to the rookie baseman Nellie Fox for the force on Wertz.

A diving stab by Ferris Fain and his subsequent toss to Trucks, covering first, was another neatly executed defensive play that nipped Courtney in the fourth.

Baltimore had her thrills in the defense department to Mele's catch of a foul hoist by Fain in the first was a sparkling grab off the leftfield stands.

Trio of gridders figure in Marquette spring drills

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (Special) —At least three tan athletes will figure prominently in the spring practice plans for Marquette university's football squad which will open its off-season drill April 20.

Coach Fred Connally, Evanston, Ill., will be fighting for a starting right halfback post while two upcoming new prospects, Floyd Campbell, Milwaukee and Alonzo Thompson, Kansas City, who will be candidates for a halfback and guard post respectively.

Connally, a fleet-footed hard charging back, earned his first varsity letter last year after serving two years in the army. He is considered a top blocking back and last year scored one touchdown for the Hilltoppers.

Campbell, an A student and former Lincoln high school star, transferred to Marquette from Indiana university last year. He was considered a good varsity prospect at the Hoosier school but chose to make the switch to Marquette when he decided to enter Dental school. He is the fastest man on the squad and although lacking in size, he has the ability to become a dangerous two-way player.

Thompson, an important centerpost fullback, may earn a reserve role with the varsity and help bolster the Marquette centerposts in the Marquette line.

Approximately 80 candidates will report to Coach Frosty Forzacca for the first of the 20 spring practice sessions. Marquette's spring drills will be a scrimmage with the annual Blue-Gold intra-squad game, Friday night, May 21.

INTERESTED SPECTATORS—On hand to witness the biggest parade in Baltimore's history, the Soden family of 505 Bloom st., took a ringside seat unmindful of the rain at Druid Hill ave., and Howard st., Thursday to welcome the Orioles home.
