Figures in Alhambra raid tried in Northwestern Wed.

Lottery charges against the owner of the Alhambra Tavern in the 1500 block Pennsylvania Ave., two of his employees, and a beautician, were dismissed on Wednesday in Northwestern police court.

Released were:

Maurice (Moe) Lipman of the 2300 block Park Ave., the tavern owner.

Julius Askins, 45, 2900 block Key Worth Ave., tavern manager.

Norman Bowers, 44, 1800 block Division St., kitchen manager.

Miss Nathalia Jessup, 27, 13[illegible] block Riggs Ave.

Nabbed In Tavern

The defendants were arrest in the tavern on May 12 by t Vice Squad, in a raid whic Sgt. Arthur McGee linked to th operation of an alleged lotter ring doing an annual busine of $1,000,000.

The Vice Squad made th estimate on the basis of an alleged lottery tape found in the tavern, which reportedly listed a daily business of between $3,000 and $4,000 a day.

Two other men nabbed in the same raid were ordered held in $2,500 bail each for grand jury action. They are:

Melvin Wood, 1200 block Madison Ave.

Leroy Wood, 42, 2700 block Riggs Ave.

Magistrate E. Everett Lane ordered the four persons released when Vice Squad members failed to establish a definite link between them and alleged lottery slips which were reportedly found in the tavern.

Leroy Wood was held when Sergeant McGee testified that two alleged lottery slips, representing $418 in plays, had been taken from his wallet during a search.

Seated At Bar

Melvin Wood was held when officers testified they found lottery slips lying between Miss Jessup and Mr. Wood who were seated at the tavern's bar. The slips reportedly represented $194 in plays.

Officers also testified that they found a suspected lottery tape in a garbage can in the tavern, which listed the daily play of several number writers.

Mr. Lipman and the two employees were freed when their attorneys argued that the slip could have been placed in the can by a tavern patron and there was no way to identify it as the property of any specific person.

Dixie solon blocks hearingon bills to ban travel JC

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — A Mississippi congressman Wednesday blocked an afternoon hearing before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on eight bills to ban race segregation in interstate travel.

After the 15-minute warning bell rang for the convening of Congress at noon, Rep. Charles A. Wolverton of New Jersey, committee chairman, said he would ask the House for permission for the committee to sit during the afternoon.

Rep. John B. Williams (Dem., Miss.), objected. He said he saw no "great rush" in handling what he considered to be "nothing more than a political football."

Express Resentment

Several members of the committee immediately expressed their resentment of Rep. Williams' charge that the bills to ban segregation in Interstate travel were a "political football."

Rep. Steven B. Derounian (Rep., N.Y.), said he did not think the charge was "quite fair" and asked Williams to state for the record that "there has not been any politicking done by this committee or any member of it."

"I state categorically that if it were not for politics this legislation would not be before the committee," Rep. Williams insisted.

Sees Common Justice

Rep. John W. Heselton, (Rep., Mass.), denied that he had any political ideas whatever. "To me it is a matter of simple common justice," he said.

Rep. Wolverton said he resented Rep. Williams' charge. "If this is politics, it is good politics;" he declared.

But there was nothing the chairman could do toward having an afternoon session. Under the House rules, unanimous consent must be obtained for a committee to sit while the House is in session.

Meet: Theodore Perkins, acting Provident Hospital administrator

Only 34-years-old, Theodore Perkins is holding down one of the most taxing and important positions in a local hospital.

As acting administrator of Provident Hospital, Mr. Perkins position is roughly comparable to that of a commander in chief, as his major task is to coordinate the activities of the various departments so the hospital will operate as an efficient unit.

The hospital board of trustees placed Mr. Perkins in his present position early in March, after John Procope, hospital superintendent, suffered a heart attack.

Mr. Procope has not been able to return to his desk, and in his absence, Mr. Perkins is in charge of hospital affairs.

Business Manager

Prior to Mr. Procope's illness, Mr. Perkins was the manage of the business office, a post he had held since February of last year.

Mr. Perkins was born in Richmond, Ind. He attended Central State College at Wilberforce, Ohio, where he received a bachelor's degree in businss administration. His master's degree in hospital administration came from School of Public Health at Columbia University.

Mr. Perkins spent a year as an administrative resident at Freedmen's Hospital in Washington. After spending an additional two years at the hospital as an administrative assistant, Mr. Perkins came to Baltimore.

Changed His Mind

He makes his home at 3032 Gwynns Falls Parkway, with his wife, the former Miss Antoinette Abrahams of Washington.

Mr. Perkins admits that when he first arrived in Baltimore, he was not sure that he would like the town, because of a number of unfavorable comments he had heard about Baltimore.

Since then, Mr. Perkins has discovered that the comments contained more fiction than fact, and he has a warm spot in his heart for this city.

Asked to comment on the principal qualification needed by a hospital administrator, Mr. Perkins came up with the following:

"The most important things is being able to get along with people. You find that you have personnel problems that demand an understading of the various personalities you encounter in a hospital."

Little Free Time

Mr. Perkins said that in addition to the routine work carried on by a hospital administrator, he is also called upon to attend a large number of meetings and to carry on a certain amount of public relations work, that reduces his free time to almost zero.

For relaxation, Mr. Perkins enjoys photography, and sports —with special emphasis on football and basketball.

He is a member of the American Association of Hospital Accountants, American Hospital Association and Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity.—J. D. W.
