years, probably from previous beatings. This is the worst beating I have ever seen."

LT. E. L. Story, who conducted an investigation of the case with other officers, testified before Judge Murray on Wednesday that questioning of the mother and other relatives and neighbors brought out the following:

1. The mother had previously "slapped" the child once for putting his hands on a hot stove, and he had a nose bleed. On another occasion, she had hit him; and he had a nail stuck i his head but received no medical treatment.

2. Care of the children is left to the grandmother, Mrs. Lillie Virginia Harris, 43, a former Crownsville Hospital patient. (Jan. 1953-May 1953), and she is known to have struck her daughter with a piece of wood.

3. The grandfather, William I. Harris, 45, does not live at home, and reportedly moved away because of the daughter's treatment of the children.

4. Neighbors, including the Rev. Howard Wallace, pastor of the Chase, Md. Methodist church, indicated that the children's mother was not a fit person to care for them, that she consorts with men and uses foul language and lavishes the children.

—o o o—

HOWEVER, the grandfather, who was in court, told Judge Murray that the claim he did not live at home or had moved out was untrue.

"I work at a paint company in the daytime and at a bar at night. I work to put food and things there and to help my daughter care for the children."

Asked whether he had ever seen any mistreatment, the grandfather said: "No, I'm not there all the time."

—o o o—

THE REV. Mr. Wallace hedged on earlier testimony he had given police when he was called to the stand. He explained his change of testimony to Judge Murray by saying: "I don't want to be put on the spot. What do the other neighbors say?"

Judge Murray advised him: "I'm interested in the children. You're a minister and a minister and a judge are always on the spot. You have a higher responsibility to say what you know about this family."

Here's how the questioning of the Rev. Mr. Wallace went:

Q—The policeman here quoted you as saying that this girl is not a fit mother. Do you know the girl?

A—Yes, as a neighbor. I live next door.

Q—There's a charge here of neglect of children. Do you have any knowledge of neglect?

A—I feel the children should be given more attention.

Q—You told the officers she was an unfit mother and had numerous affairs with male friends and that's obvious with five different fathers.

A—Well, there are cars there late at night, 1 and 1:30 in the morning.

Q—You are quoted as saying you have heard her use foul language. Does she do it regularly?

A—No, not regularly.

Q—Have you ever seen any marks on the children or seen her beating them?

A—No.

Q—Do you think the grandmother and grandfather are fit persons to care for them?

A—I think there should be more investigation. I don't want to be put on the spot.

Q—I'm interested in the children.

A—So am I, but what do the other neighbors say?

—You're a minister and ministers and judges are always on the spot.

A—I wouldn't recommend taking the children away from her because she's the mother. Now the child that they claim was beaten to death, I never saw him.

Q—The only thing I see to do is conduct a thorough investigation. I would suggest to you neighbors (There were 12 in the courtroom) that if there is mistreatment or good treatment, you are not being fair or doing anybody a favor by trying to hide it. If you know something, good or bad, please tell me.

"And I say to you, sir, (looking at the Rev. Mr. Wallace), that if you know anything about this family—good or bad—you are a minister and you have a higher responsibility.

"I'll continue this hearing until the investigation is complete, and permit the children to remain where they are."

—o o o—

THE REV. Mr. Wallace also conducted funeral services for the dead child on Tuesday at his church. During the eulogy, he told the congregation:

"Some people, especially young people, cast their children aside, but that's the wrong thing to do and God will hold them responsible for not being good mothers.

"As soon as a child is born, and even before the child is born, the mother is held responsible for his welfare and being. One of the greatest tasks on earth is to be a good mother."

—o o o—

PRECEDING THE hearing the children's mother, Miss Harris, expressed surprise over the fact that she had been brought to Towson for a court hearing.

While seated in a room near the judge's chambers, she asked an AFRO reporter: "What's this all about? What's a hearing? I wonder if they are going to try and take the children."

On the witness stand she broke into tears and blamed "neighbors who don't like us for telling these lies on me. Those people have been mad at our family for years."

Judge Murray reminded her the charge against her was neglect. She said: "No, I work and clean for the children.

—The children look well kept.

A—I've tried to look out for them. Already, I've bought them snow suits.

—o o o—

LATER, Judge Murray asked where the Harris home was in relation to Scott's ice house. A policeman said it was five doors away and someone announced Mrs. Scott was in the courtroom. The judge asked:

Q—Is your husband living?

A—No, he's dead, but my son, Joe, is here.

Q—I know that area—it has some mighty fine colored residents—they're fine people down there. Tell, me, Mrs. Scott, what do you know about this case? Have you ever seen any mistreatment of these children?

A—No, I'm a little far away.

Q—But you're just five doors away.

A—That's a good distance in the country. No, I haven't seen any.

During the hearing, the three Harris youngsters moved about the courtroom.

At one point, Judge Murray called the four-year-old to his side, gave him some gum. Later, his sister joined him.

The youngsters paid little or no attention to the proceedings. In fact, during the questioning of the mother, one of them was examining the judge's pants leg.

At another point, Judge Murray took the small boy on his knee and he looked up at him with a disarming smile.—B. M. PHILLIPS.

Bus accident victims now set at 22

Twenty-two persons were injured Monday morning when a transit bus skidded on rainswept streets and crashed into two trees on Gwynns Falls Pkwy., near Poplar Gorve St.

An earlier report gave the total number of passengers treated at Provident and Lutheran Hospitals at 23, but one of the persons listed was erroneously included.

She was Mrs. Elizabeth Dixon of the 2600 block Prestman St. who was reported treated at Lutheran Hospital for a back injury.

MRS. DIXON, it was later learned, was already at the hospital when the bus victims were brought in having hurt her back at home.

The bus, a No. 51 Dolfield, was driven by Sidney Bozemarf, 54. He told police an automobile got in front of the westbound vehicle and he applied his brakes causing him to skid on a parkway and to strike the trees.

The driver was treated at Lutheran Hospital for lacerations of the skull. He was charged with reckless driving and is scheduled to have a hearing in Traffic Court on Oct. 6 at 3 p.m.

Only seven of those injured were admitted to the two hospitals for treatment the others were treated and released.

Bus collides with auto; two injured

A man and a woman were injured Monday at Federal Sts. and Milton Ave. when an automobile in which they were passengers collided with a No. 13 BTC bus.

Miss Hattie Johnson, 23, of the 1300 block E. Biddle St. and Andrew Chandler, 35, of the 1200 block N. Eden St., were treated at St. Joseph's Hospital and released.

Miss Johnson sustained cuts on her left knee and forehead and Mr. Chandler was treated for an injured right foot.

Both were passengers in a car driven by Leander Killan of the 900 block N. Broadway St. Mr. Killan and the bus driver, Gene Currey, 36, of the 700 block E. Preston St. escaped injury.

A hearing has been scheduled for Oct. 15 in Traffic Court.

PERMIT AVAILABLE—As the result of a reversal by Judge James K. Cullen on the action of the Liquor Board, this self service grocery store in the 1600 block N. Bond St., can now secure a Class "B" beer, wine and liquor permit once held by a bar on the opposite corner. The move was protested by the Eastside Community Committee and over 216 homeowners.

permit for white trade although located in a colored neighborhood.

—o o o—

THE BOARD'S DECISION was reversed Monday, according to Judge Cullen because the Board's decision was "unreasonable and arbitrary."

At the July 22 hearing, Mr. Stein, who owns a neighborhood self-service store in the community, requested that he be given a permit held by Mrs. Lucille W. Clark who owned a bar in the 1700 block N. Bond St.

The transfer was requested because the adjacent property had been purchased by Robert F. Williams to build a funeral parlor.

At the time the move was protested by the Eastside Community Committee. A petition containing the names of 216 home owners who opposed the transfer was presented at the hearing.

—o o o—

A TOTAL of 65 residents appeared in person to voice their opposition and were represented by Milton B. Allen, attorney.

Seven persons including two colored spoke in favor of the transfer. The Board turned down the request on the ground "The neighborhood was already adequately served with enough bars."

As a result of the decision, Mr. Stein appealed before the Baltimore City Court.

In rendering his decision, Judge Cullen, a former Liquor Board member, said the Board made "contradictory" statements in its findings.

He pointed out that the Board had said that Mrs. Clark could continue operating with her permit at the same location if she so desired.

At the same time the Board, he said, had advised Mr. Stein he could not take the permit under a lower classification by selling package goods on a six-days-a-week basis.

—o o o—

THE CLARK tavern was operating on a seven-day basis for the benefit of both races.

Judge Cullen said the Board's statement that Mrs. Clark could transfer to a new location must mean that the permit is "necessary for public convenience."

On the other hand, he said, a permit in the possession of another person at the same location would not be of public convenience.

In effect, Judge Cullen concluded, this means that the Board will allow one person to operate but not another.

Unless, he ruled there is something against the type of operation or the character of the applicant, such a decision on their part is "arbitrary and unreasonable."

—o o o—

IN ANSWER to the reversal, a representative for the Board of Liquor License Commissioners told the AFRO Tuesday:

"Legally Judge Cullen was right. In a desire to be helpful we went beyond what the law allows. There was a desire on our part at the time to decide in favor of the majority.

"We are reminded for the moment," the speaker said, "that decisions in these hearings must not be classed as popularity contests."

—o o o—

ASKED TO comment on the decision Mr. Stein said: "I'm satisfied other than that I have no comment."

Angry over their reversal, residents in the area have called a community meeting for Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the 1800 block N. Broadway.

According to Haywood Musgrove, president of the Adjacent Neighborhood Improvement Club: "We are going to appeal this case."

"We had a lot of people against this thing," he stated, "and were pleased when the Board rendered their decision."

"Personally," Mr. Musgrove continued, "I'm going to ask our neighbors to boycott the establishment.

"I have children and we want a decent community for them to grow up in."

James H. Holliman, sergeant at arms in the Neighborhood Club told the AFRO: "I feel that we ought to do something. The neighbors do not want it (liquor) in our community. I think if it is permitted it will lower our standards."

Cafe owner handed two heavy fines

Food, equipment fouhd rottening more than once

A West Biddle St. lunchroom proprietor who, authorities say, operated his place of business without a meat, milk or restaurante permit, was given two maximum fines in Housing Court Tuesday.

Fines of $100 and costs each were levied against Leo Leazer, 50, of the 500 block E. Biddle St.

According to Mervin Johnson, sanatarian from the Bureau of Food Control, "everything in the lunchroom was rotten."

In a hearing before Magistrate Helen Brown, Mr. Johnson testified that in spite of repeated warnings Mr. Leazer had made few improvements.

On Sept. 7 he stated he found 5½ pounds of smelly pork chops in a refrigerator with a small amount of good food.

Another sanitarian, Abraham Shecter, testified that the owner operated his cafe without a permit, his stove hood was greasy and black, a kitchen fan was noisy due to grease on the propeller blades, and a refrigerator case was rusty.

—o o o—

MR. JOHNSON intervened to say that on July 17, he found no screens on the establishment, swarms of flies inside, a dead rat, and a number of rat holes.

Also, defective plumbing, dirty floors, an amount of trash, and a large and unused refrigerator which was also dirty.

James H. Edwards, another Food Control Bureau representative, told the court that the lunchroom was in fair shape before Mr. Leazer took over.

The unsanitary conditions found there now, he declared, are due to the fact that the Mr. Leazer does not want to close up long enough to clean up.

High Court sets hearing for Dec. 6

WASHINGTON

The Supreme Court will start hearing arguments on Dec. 6 on how its historic decision ending jim-crow schools should be carried out. All briefs must be filed by Nov. 15.

Each of the original parties and each State wishing to join in the arguments will be given an hour to present their views.

The question to be decided is how and when the high tribunal will issue its final decree for ending separate schools.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court has put its integration ruling into effect on Capitol Hill by appointing Charles V. Bush, 14, of Washington, as a page. Young Bush thus became the first of his race to enter the Capitol page school. He reports for duty at the Supreme Court on Monday.
