Pastor drops dead reached at Kittrell College, N.C. He said: "It is very shocking."

The bishop added that the Rev. Mr. Gibson was happy about the change.

He said: "Rev. Gibson had intimated that he wouldn't mind a change if a change came. So during the conference on Monday, I called him and his wife to me, and asked them if it were true. They said they would be very happy to move if Campbell was open.

"He is a graduate of Howard and knows the work there. The people at Campbell, knowing of his training and reputation as a very scholarly man, were very happy to have him.

"REALLY, HE was a very sick man. He should not have been out at that one-day conference." Bishop Reid added, pointing out that the Rev. Mr. Gibson "was very pale that day," and had not been feeling well since he had returned from the AME Conference in Miami.

"But that was the kind of spirit he had. He always wanted to be right in the midst of everything; he never wanted to seem to give any evidence of asking special favors."

Relatives said that the Rev. Mr. Gibson had been taking blood transfusions and had not been able to keep food on his stomach for several weeks.

Bishop Reid said that he was working to get train reservations and expected to be in Annapolis in time to preside at funeral services for the Rev. Mr. Gibson which have been set for Saturday at 1 p.m. at Mt. Moriah Church. Burial will follow in Mt. Zion Cemetery, Baltimore.

Bishop Reid said that he will take "two or three weeks to study" appointment of a minister for Campbell. He said in the meantime he has assigned his son, the Rev. George Reid, to act as supply pastor.

BORN 53 YEARS ago in Delphia, La., the Rev. Mr. Gibson was the son of an AME minister, the late Rev. James Gibson, and Mrs. Mary L. Gibson.

While a youngster, he contracted infantile fever which left him crippled, but he overcame the handicap and played softball, football, and other sports.

He was a familiar figure with his crutches at many civic and church events and never allowed his handicap to hold him back.

He was a graduate of Howard University and Drew University. He pastored AME churches in Elkton, Wheaton Kensington, Md., and served as presiding elder of the Centreville (Md.) District.

He had been pastor of Mt. Moriah in Annapolis for six years.

BISHOP REID told the AFRO that the Rev. Mr. Gibson "was one of our finest trained men, and had an unusual record as a presiding elder and pastor.

"He also had the honor and distinction of being secretary of the Judicial Council for the whole Church which shows the esteem in which he was held throughout the connection."

Surviving the Rev. Mr. Gibson are his wife, Mrs. Elsie Gibson. They celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary last Christmas.

Also, a brother, Army Capt. Moses S. Gibson, Elmhurst, L.I., and a sister, Miss Cynthia B. Gibson of Chicago.

The Rev. I. A. Miller, pastor of Trinity AME Church, Baltimore, said of the Rev. Mr. Gibson's death: "His health hadn't been good for sometime.

"He was a likeable fellow and a very able man. He was a cripple all of his life, but he finished college and theological school and made a very able minister and pastor."

more, was sent to Mt. Moriah AME Church, Annapolis, Md., formerly pastored by the Rev. John M. Gibson.

The Rev. Gibson was transferred to Campbell in southeast Washington. (Editor's Note: The Rev. Gibson died suddenly Wednesday. See story in this issue)

THE CHANGE followed weeks of reported rumors of discontent at Turner Memorial following the assignment of the Rev. Powell to replace the Rev. I. A. Miller last Easter Sunday. The Rev. Miller was sent to Trinity Church.

"EVERYTHING is all right now", the Rev. Powell announced after he moved into the church parsonage at 508 P St., NW, in June. A successful rally was held last Sunday to raise funds for the mortgage note on the church purchased under the Rev. Miller in 1953.

The Rev. Mr. Miller told the AFRO: "We're in the AME Church. We have an itinerant system. That's the way it is. I have served in the Baltimore Conference before. Some years ago, I was in Harford County.

"I am leaving Campbell with some feeling but I will go wherever the Bishop sends me," the Rev. Guiles stated. The 34-year-old minister is a graduate of Allen and Howard Universities.

He has been active in civic and social welfare groups in the southeast community and took an active part in the original suit for desegregation of Washington schools.

ONLY OTHER change announced by Bishop Reid in the brief session was the assignment of the Rev. George Barber Jr. son of the Bishop, to the Emory Church of College Park, Md., to replace the Rev. Edward Braxton who died recently.

The conference also heard quarterly reports on the new AME budget.

"He added that he and his family are now occupying Trinity Church parsonage at 1024 W. Lanvale St.

IN COMMENTING on the changes, Bishop Reid told the AFRO: "There has been quite a bit of confusion. I'am hoping that these changes will give relief."

On the matter of the Rev. Mr. Miller who built Turner AME Church and recently moved it into a new $100,000 building, debt-free, the Bishop said:

"Many people . . . felt that since Rev. Miller built that fine church . . . . they were moving he would get to stay. But the eight-year rule moved him.

"He was a CONMENTING on the changes, Bishop Reid told the AFRO: "There has been quite a bit of confusion. I'am hoping that these changes will give relief."

"Mr. Miller built Turner AME Church and recently moved it into a new $100,000 building, debt-free, the Bishop said:

"Many people . . . felt that since Rev. Miller built that fine church . . . . they were moving he would get to stay. But the eight-year rule moved him.

"He was a great demotion was Rev. Miller. But it couldn't be helped. His demotion was something around $700 a month in salary.

"But it was one of those situations you couldn't reverse after it had once been done. I couldn't reverse my predecessor's judgement."

The Bishop was obviously referring to the fact that the change had been made by Bishop Nichols whom he just succeeded two months ago.

The Rev. D. A. Wilson, presiding elder of the Baltimore Conference, described the changes as "for the good of the churches and the pastors involved."

Sign language

for her condition the victim named her husband.

During the nearly three hours in which the victim was on the witness stand Tuesday a capacity crowd in the courtroom sat hushed as the Rev. Mr. Foxwell questioned the girl by means of sign language and then repeated her answers to prosecuting and defense attorneys.

The victim's mother said on the witness stand that she intends to file divorce proceedings against Mr. Baker. She said she married him three years ago.

"Why didn't you say something to your mother while you were out of Clarence's presence about what happened?" Norman Polski, assistant State's attorney, asked the victim at one point during direct examination.

"Afraid," was the answer given by the interpreter.

"What caused her to be afraid?" Mr. Polski wanted to know.

"She was afraid of him (Mr. Baker)," came the interpreted answer.

ELLIS LEVIN, defense counsel, queried the victim closely about why she failed to disclose the criminal attacks until it was learned she was expecting. The baby is due about Christmas.

The victim steadfastly maintained that she did not tell about the attack because of Mr. Baker's threats.

DURING THE grueling and dramatic direct and cross examination of the victim through the interpreter, she seemed completely bewildered at times.

Some of the questions had to be repeated to her over and over by the Rev. Mr. Foxwell before she supplied the answers.

Commenting on the girl's handicap in his final argument, Mr. Polski said, "Your honor, here's a girl who, since she was one month old, has been living in a world of silence."

Here, the assistant State's attorney was giving his explanation as to why he thought the victim was slow in comprehending some of the questions.

MR. BAKER, who took the witness stand in his own behalf Thursday, denied raping the girl. He testified that since last September he has been intimate with her about 20 times on each occasion she was the aggressor.

Mr. Levin argued that the girl had ample time to complain after the first alleged attack in February but "remained silent—as a tomb."

In announcing his findings, Judge Mason had this to say:

"I believe the question of belief. I believe her rather than her stepfather . . . So, if I say I believe her and don't believe him, he stands convicted on the rape charge."

The victim, wearing a simple white dress, stared directly at the Rev. Mr. Foxwell as he relayed questions to her. Her answers came in rapid sign and gesture with her right hand as she held her left hand to the side of her face.

Following preliminary questions, Mr. Polski asked, "Did anything unusual happen between Clarence Baker and yourself?"

Through signs she related that sometime in February she was in her room combing her hair when her stepfather banged on the door and asked her to fix him something to eat. He became angry when she was not preparing the food to suit him, she said.

Later, her story continued, Mr. Baker grabbed her by the arm and pulled her into the bedroom. She stated earlier that this took place on a Saturday afternoon.

"What happened on this Saturday in February when he pulled you into the bedroom?" the prosecuting attorney asked.

AFTER CONVERSING with her in sign language, the Rev. Mr. Foxwell said, "She doesn't want to answer."

"Why don't you want to answer

Pleads not guilty in Helen's death

"Not guilty."

That was the plea of Barclel Wilson, 36 - year - old confessed slayer of pretty Helen Delores Johnson, when he was arraigned before Judge E. Paul Manos Thursday afternoon on a charge of murder.

William Sinsky, attorney for Mr. Wilson, entered the plea and requested a jury trial for his client. The trial date has not been set.

In a statement to police Mr. Wilson, married ex - boyfriend of the 18-year-old girl, said the fatal shooting took place on a rain-drenched lot near Thomas G. Hayes School No. 102 early on the morning of May 23.

However, the defendant contends that the shooting was accidental.

ATTIRED IN the same clothes he wore at the preliminary hearing last week—a light blue sport shirt, gray trousers and brown summer shoes—Mr. Wilson was visibly nervous as he sat in the courtroom approximately two hours before his case was called up.

While defendants in other cases talked among themselves during lulls in the proceedings in Criminal Court, Mr. Wilson quietly sat and looked ahead as if staring into space. Occasionally he would twiddle his thumbs, stare down at the floor or glance at a wrist watch on his left wrist.

The decomposed body of Miss Johnson was discovered on June 7 after it washed ashore near the Potomac River Bridge just outside of Newburg, Md. There was a single bullet wound in her chest and pieces of concrete blocks around her legs and waist.

Mr. Wilson, who resides at 1742 E. Lanvale St., has been confined in jail since his arrest for investigation shortly after Miss Johnson's body was discovered.

A SISTER of the dead girl, Miss Pauline Johnson, 181 N. Broadway, testified in Homicide Court that Mr. Wilson picked her sister up at home shortly before midnight on the night of her disappearance.

Miss Johnson described the defendant as being jealous of her sister. The witness said "Helen had been out with another man" the last night she saw her alive.

'Was dissatisfied,' husband testifies of city school nurse

Mrs. Friend, who is on the staff of School No. 181, and Mr. Friend, were married April 5, 1942 and separated in April, 1954. She lives at 1743 W. Lafayette Ave.

Urge strong rights stand by Democrats

SAN FRANCISCO—More than twenty colored Democratic leaders from various northern and border states, in attendance at the NAACP Convention, met today met informally to discuss the necessity of the Democratic Party's adopting a strong civil rights plank and nominating a presidential candidate who unanimously will support such a plank.

These leaders stated that they were convinced that if the Democratic Party is to win the presidential and congressional elections in November, it must nominate a liberal candidate and adopt a civil rights plank which specifically sets forth that the Democratic Party will utilize all its resources to implement the Supreme Court's decisions declaring segregation unconstitutional.

"I was further agreed that the performance and voting records of Democrats in the present Congress on pending vital civil rights bills, including the Powell Amendment, would be evidence of the party's good faith.

THEY EXPRESSED THE belief that a middle-of-the-road candidate and a weak civil rights plank would result in the loss of many colored and white votes in both the presidential and congressional elections.

They declared that in sixteen pivotal states and in 60 congressional districts the colored vote is decisive.

The group mapped plans for working in their respective states for the purpose of convention delegates and party leaders for achieving these objectives so as to enhance their party's chances of victory this year.

Representatives of the leading contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination were among those present. They were:

Andrew T. Hatcher, West Coast Regional Representative of the National Stevenson Campaign Committee; Frank D. Reeves, Assistant to the National Chairman of the Kefauver Committee; and Earl Brown, New York City Councilman, and Herbert B. Evans, assistant counsel to the Governor of the State of New York, representing Governor Averell Harriman.

OTHERS PRESENT were: William Pollard of Los Angeles; D. G. Gibson of Berkeley, and Jefferson Beaver of San Francisco, Calif.; E. L. James of Charleston, W. Va.

Chester I. Lewis, Jr. of Wichita, Kansas; Rev. D. A. Carty and Leonard Carter of St. Paul and L. Howard Bennett of Minneapolis, Minn;

William Oliver of Detroit, Michigan; Robert B. Watts of Baltimore; Charles P. Lucas of Dr. James E. Levy of Cleveland; Jerry L. Williams of Dallas, and Oliver W. Hill of Richmond; and Bravel M. Nesbitt of Elizabeth, N. J.

'Stop Bubby, please stop,' she yelled before knifed

"She kept hollering 'Stop Buddy, please Buddy, stop' and later police came and kicked in the door."

This is the way Mrs. Marjoty Franklin, 2835 Remington Ave., described what police said was "the worst fatal stabbing in the Northern District".

Victim of the brutal attack is Mrs. Emma Baker Sommerville, 40, 2829 Remington Ave., who was stabbed several times in the body and once in the heart with a hunting knife, police said.

She was pronounced dead on arrival at Union Memorial Hospital at 2:45 a.m. today (Friday).

Police are holding a 46-year-old man, whom they identified as Nathaniel Raymond, of the Remington Ave. address, in connection with the case.

ACCORDING TO the officers, Raymond attempted suicide by slashing his wrists and had written a letter to his wife, son, sister and brother and his employer.

Police said that in the suicide note Raymond wrote he was "sorry I had to do it this way. Goodbye to everyone."

Raymond also requested that his car be turned over to his son, Lawrence.

Police arrested Raymond at Maryland General Hospital where he was taken by his son.

POLICE SAID that the stabbing resulted from a fight between Mrs. Sommerville and her assailant. Police are sure that she cut Raymond on the left hand and wrist with a parring knife before she was stabbed.

Mrs. Franklin, who has lived on Remington Ave., "at least 50 years," told the AFRO that this was the first time she have ever had a killing over here.

She said that on Thursday, Mrs. Sommerville "seemed very much afraid and had shown me notes which she said Raymond had written. She said they looked liked wills to his family.

"Emma said she found the notes while cleaning house. Mrs. Franklin told the AFRO. "She was quite upset over it."

2 found guilty on liquor charges

Two Baltimoreans were found guilty of violation of liquor laws by Judge Roszel Thomsen, in Federal Court Friday.

They were Frank S. Glenn, 29, 1600 block Carolina St., and Eubanks Johnson, 60, of the Caroline St. address. Mr. Glenn was given two years and placed on probation for the duration of his sentence. Mr. Johnson was sentenced to 18 months, fined $1,000 and ordered to pay an additional $500 in penalties.

Mr. Johnson, whose 6 feet 4, 245-pound frame belies his age, admitted ownership of a still discovered by agents in Hereford, Baltimore County. The men were arrested on May 14.

Thurgood denies rift with NAACP

NEW YORK—Thurgood Marshall denied today reports in San Francisco newspapers of a rift between himself and the resolutions committee at the NAACP convention.

Mr. Marshall also disposed of rumors of disagreement with Roy Wilkins, NAACP secretary.

Both Mr. Wilkins and Mr. Marshall stamp these reports as absolutely untrue.

Said Mr. Marshall "Roy Wilkins is doing a superior job and he deserves the cooperation and support of every NAACP official and member."

REPORTS OF A rift stem from the fact that Mr. Marshall left the San Francisco convention after a session with the resolutions committee.

Members of the committee in session recommended more emphasis on law suits against segregation in public housing.

Thurgood said that the matter would have the thorough study and consideration of the proper NAACP administrators.

He left the convention before it adjourned to address a scheduled conference in Denver. A group of women there last year made a substantial contribution to the NAACP Legal Defense Fund. (The Links).

"THERE is nothing to the San Francisco rumor," Mr. Marshall said, "that I am resigning from office to accept a $24,000 job in Hawaii.

"I have got too many important things to do here with the NAACP," he said.

"I am attending an important conference at Fisk University this week, and on next Monday I go to Virginia where the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals sits in a school segregation suit. Next Thursday I will be in Charlottesville to try a school case."

"I am gratified by the action of the House in approving the Powell Amendment last week," Mr. Marshall said, "and a special word of thanks is due to all of those who worked and voted for it."

(Editor's Note: The House later reversed itself).

Mrs. Norma Marshall will take an apartment in New York soon to be near her son and daughter-in-law who are expecting an heir.

Woman's guilt in misconduct laid to 'milk for baby'

"I got laid off, and we decided that was the only way we could exist."

William Brown, 22, 1000 Argyle Ave., testifying in Criminal Court Monday morning, was explaining why he encouraged his 22-year-old wife, Christine, to engage in acts of prostitution.

Mrs. Brown told Pine St. police that part of her earnings were used to purchase milk for their six-month-old child.

"The money she obtained was used to buy food and other articles in the house," the defendant said in a statement to police.

BROWN, HIS wife and Fred Grandison Jr., 35, 1600 block Madison Ave., were arrested June 15 by Sgt. Anthony Blazer of Northwestern District.

Brown was charged with operating a disorderly house and pandering; his wife was accused of prostition, and Grandson was charged with disturbing the peace.

Judge E. Paul Mason found each guilty as charged and imposed the following sentences:

MRS. BROWN, not more than six months in Maryland Reformatory for women; Mr. Brown, one year in the Maryland House of Correction on each charge with the terms to be served concurrently; Grandison was fined $25 and costs.

The arresting officer said that he found Mrs. Brown and Grandison in bed at the Argyle Ave. address on June 15. Mr. Brown, he said, was standing in the doorway to the residence "acting extremely nervous."

Ex-police head buried Thursday

Funeral services were held Thursday for Judge Robert F. Stanton, 86, who served as Baltimore's police commissioner for five years and who turned down a proposal to set up Police Boys Club, declined to appoint additional colored officers to the force, and refused to place colored policemen in uniform.

There were four colored officers on the force when Mr. Stanton as commissioner took over in 1938, and in the years that he served, other colored men successfully passed the police examinations, but Judge Stanton never made an appointment or put those already on the force in uniform.

When the AFRO suggested that Boys Clubs be set up like those in Washington and New York, Judge Stanton turned Thumbs down on the idea.

Judge Stanton, a former member of the Supreme Bench, died unexpectedly of a heart attack at his home on Tuesday.

'I wanted to speak to her daughter'

"I did go there at two o'clock in the morning and asked to speak to her daughter. I didn't beat on the door. She came down and opened the door and her daughter came out the house."

Willis Parker, 22, 400 block Chapel St., was speaking in Northwestern Police Court Tuesday. He was charged with disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Estelle Edgers, 1500 block School St., testified: "He came to my house and at three o'clock, knocked on my door and asked for my daughter. I didn't want him to break my door down. I came downstairs when he fell against the door."

Magistrate Simon Koger fined Mr. Parker, $25 after telling him, "I was inclined to send you to jail. If she comes back here one mere time, you're going away. You'll take a leave of absence."

Prince Edward school case set

RICHMOND. — Trial of the Prince Edward County school board members and others for delaying the start of integration as ordered by the Supreme Court is scheduled for Monday (July 9) here.

A three-judge Federal court is scheduled to hear arguments on the NAACP motion to cite the board members for contempt of court.

Three days later, July 12, hearings in the NAACP suit against the Charlottesville school board are slated to open in Charlottesville. Meanwhile arguments in Norfolk and Newport News cases have been scheduled for Nov. 17.

New Yorker gets 5 years in car theft

A 20-year-old New Yorker, Marvin Butts, was sentenced to five years in Federal prison by United States District Judge when he was found guilty of interstate transportation of a stolen station wagon.

John R. Hargrove, assistant United States attorney, said Mr. Butts stole the vehicle in New York on June 10. He was arrested here on June 19, according to Mr. Hargrove, when caught stealing gasoline from a parked car.

Mr. Mr. Hargrove pointed out that the defendant has four prior convictions for stealing automobiles. Judge Thomsen commented that the best way to keep the man from taking cars is to put him behind bars. The judge then imposed the maximum penalty.
