Strangled girl buried in D.C.

WASHINGTON

Funeral services were held Wednesday for a 33-year-old government worker, allegedly choked to death by her estranged husband.

The victim, Mrs. Beulah Isler, 1710 Trenton Pl., NE, was buried at Lincoln Memorial Cemetery following brief services at the McGuire Funeral Home. The Rev. Nelson Smith, pastor, Walker Memorial Church, presided.

The dead woman's husband, Joseph Isler, 1290 block Owen Pl., NE, was ordered held under the grand jury on charges of homicide following an inquest Tuesday.

CURTIS MITCHELL, defense counsel, said he would request a psychiatric examination for his client.

At the hearing, Isler appeared calm and composed, a few rows back sat the victim's three sisters.

Police testified Isler surrendered to Precinct 11 last Friday and confessed killing his wife.

They went to Mrs. Isler's home and found her lifeless body lying under blankets on her bed. Her two children, they stated, were asleep in a nearby room.

Dr. George Watts of D.C. General Hospital testified he pronounced Mrs. Isler dead at 1:20 a.m. Saturday, after artificial respiration efforts failed.

Pvt. Vernon C. White, station clerk on duty when Isler surrendered, asserted Isler appeared calm at the precinct.

"He sounded like he was asking for street directions," declared Pvt. White.

HOMICIDE SQUAD Sgt. Patrick A. Dennihan said he questioned Isler a few hours after the slaying. He quoted Isler as saying his wife had been "running around for some time."

Dr. A. Magruder McDonald, District coroner, reported Mrs. Isler died from asphyxiation (strangulation) caused by severe pressure on her throat.

THE CORONER'S jury deliberated 20 minutes before holding Mr. Isler responsible.

He victim was a clerk at the Naval Annex in southwest Washington. She is survived by two children, Diane Reed, 7, and Charles Reed, 9, by a former marriage;

Three sisters, Mrs. Katherine Scott, Mrs. Ruth Stewart and Mrs. Josoh Henry, and brother, William Charlton.

Tot drowns in home on fire

PHILADELPHIA

Two-year-old Jacob Earl Taylor had been taught to cry "bum bum" when he wanted to go to the bathroom. But by the time he got "bum bum" out on Friday morning, it was too late.

Jacob and the baby, Sarah, seven months, were in the care of their slightly-older sisters, Naomi, five, and Andrea, four. The four tots were alone in the first-floor rear apartment at 5436 Chestnut St. Their mother, Nioma, 33, was not at home. Their two brothers, a bit older, were in school. Then "bum bum" cost Jacob his life.

TRAGEDY TRAILED the Taylors twice that day. A fire that broke out in the apartment perilled the other youngsters and Jacob faced death twice.

Had Jacob been burned, it would have been the second time within a year that he suffered so. He still bore scars from being seared by a stove.

This occurred while his mother was frying potatoes on an electric cooker. She left to go to the bathroom. Jacob pulled the cord and was in the midst of the red hot upheaval.

Friday's fire broke after Andrea had been playing with the gas stove. Fortunately, firemen, called by other residents of the house, quickly put out the blaze. It was confined to the kitchen where only the linoleum was charred and the back door paint blistered.

JACOB LOST his life after his two older brothers did what they thought was best to clean him up after the "bum bum." Stephen, 10, and Tyrone, seven, were confronted with the problem when they went home during noon recess from Holmes School, 55th and Chestnut Sts.

The brothers undressed Jacob, put him in the bathtub and washed him. Leaving their baby brother playing and splashing around in the water that half filled the tub, Stephen and Tyrone ate lunch and returned to filled the tub, Stephen and Tyrone.

After the fire, which occurred about 2:30, an unidentified woman handed Naomi, Andrea and Sarah over to a policeman who was standing by.

"These children belong here," she said, "but they are not safe with their mother." Holmes is at 5747 Ludlow St." Police took the three girls there.

DURING THE afternoon recess, Stephen and Tyrone found out that their house had been on fire. Accompanied by William Brown, a teaching assistant to the principal at Holmes, the boys went home. They were adopted by Coleman Fuskin, the landlord, and Frank Gomez, caretaker.

Since everything in sight appeared to be all right, Mr. Bishop and the brothers returned to school. Disorderly conduct. The boys went back home.

Jacob, apparently forgotten in the excitement of the fire, was still in the bathtub. His head was under water.

"He looked like he was sleeping," chorused Stephen and Tyrone when they found Jacob out of the tub and placed him on the floor. They hastened to the home of their great aunt, Mrs. Alma Hynes, of 457 N. Moss St., and told her what had happened.

MEANWHILE, THE mother had arrived at the Ludlow St. address where her sister, a Mrs. Morris, lives. Neither her daughters there, she learned of the fire.

The mother said she was "too tired" to walk the five squares home. She sent her niece, Loretta Morris, 11, to find out. She waited for a taxicab. Both arrived at the same time.

Glimpsing Jacob's body on the floor, the mother went next door and called the landlord, Mr. Gomez. Glancing at the lifeless form, he advised, "You had better call the police."

Police took Jacob to Misericordia Hospital. He was pronounced dead on arrival at 5:15.

MRS. EVA MAGWOOD is hanging from a window of her fifth floor apartment in Newark as her husband, James, hangs grimly to her wrists. Leaning over her husband to grasp Mrs. Magwood's arms to relieve Magwood is Sgt. William Garrard.

MOMENTS LATER the Fort Monmouth sergeant released his grip and dropped Mrs. Magwood safely into a life net held by firemen 75 feet below. One fireman was slightly injured. Mother of four children, Mrs. Magwood said: 'I don't know why I did it.'
