Derby Day and Lincoln Fields and Hawthorne in Chicago.

From season to season, he follows the ponies and hundreds of other professionals from one track to another.

Asked what Mrs. Moore thought of his traipsing all around the country, he said:

"She loves it, she comes with me. She's with me right now and she goes everywhere I go."

It was Mr. Moore who described Pimlico as "the prettiest, smoothest-running race track in the country."

His home is Saratoga Springs, NY., he says, but the look in his eye when the ponies are running tells you where his heart is.

IN FACT, the reporter tried to find someone working around the track who did not like horses —who despised them.

No such persons could be found. And there are no more rabid bettors to be found at Pimlico than the men who work with the horses day in and day out.

Not just sentimental bets on horses they happen to "know personally" but heavy, earnest betting on each race.

Of course, there are those who can tell you just what horse finished how in any given race. And they're not all old-timers either.

TAKE THE comparatively young grooms and exercise boys, in their cap-clad heads is a wealth of race track statistics that would probably stagger Univac.

The seemingly indolent groom lounging in front of a horse stall would surprise a mind reader if he could peer into his brain and see the facts and figures being manipulated more nimbly than some of his charges can work their feet.

WHEN WE caught 22-year-old James Cameron, he was grooming Dinner Music, a three-year-old colt whose only previous credit was a third place last week at Laurel.

This extra attention must have been just what was needed for Dinner Music place first in the second race Wednesday in a claiming race for non-winners of three races. Cameron, the groom, is a native of Washington where he attended Terrel Junior High School.

He quit school seven years ago to devote his life to the bang-tails.

There are others — exercise boys who rise at 4 a.m. to trot their horses around, the salivatest man, commissary workers who toil in the huge behind-the-stands lunch counter for track workers, and many more who work out of sight, behind the scenes to make a day at Pimlico a smooth, care-free holiday.
