Dixie governors schedule meeting

POINT CLEAR, Ala. (ANP)—When the Southern Governors' Conference opens here this week, one of th main topics will be public school segregation, although the chief executives have not scheduled it officially.

First of the governors to arrive was Texas' Allan Shivers, in whose state the Texas Supreme Court last week declared that all laws calling for segregation in schools are unconstitutional.

Shivers has been an outspoken advocate of continued segregation, despite the fact that more than 70 communities in the state have already integrated their schools

In and around Annapolis

By BOB PINKNEY

ANNAPOLIS — The Annapolis Chapter of the Frontiers of America, at the recent meeting in the Northwest Street YMCA heluded Dr. Arlington Allen and Mrs. D. Elwood Williams, newest members of the Board of Education for their decision in not upholding the construction of a new school in the Freetown area until additional time has been added to give the case a thorough study.

The resolution adopted by the Frontiersmen said it felt that a plan advanced to acquire land on Northwest street adjacent to the Stanton Elementary school for expansion of that school had been taken without any consideration for residents occupying the land or without enough study for an adequate site.

Dr. Allen told the group that he suggested a new site which could be purchased at a smaller token than the Northwest street property.

Cold facts show that if the surrounding property of Stanton would be taken, despite having overcrowded facilities, a big problem would come about as there would be many homeless people in the Fourth Ward area.

Annapolitans haven't yet gotten over moving in order to make way for a State Office building in the Carroll and Northwest street areas.

AROUND Freetown the story is altogether different as the local PTA groups from Marley Neck, Magothy and Freetown have taken over the situation.

Elsewhere in the news Dr. David S. Jenkins superintendent of county schools said that one of every four teachers in Ann Arundel County employed for 1955-56 school year, lacks a bachelor's degree.

He said 35 have high school educations and 234 have had some college work but lack a bachelor's.

"The figures show how desperate we are to get somebody who can do the job of teaching," he added.

Salk vaccine shots in Anne Arundel County will resume the first week in November, Dr. J. Howard Beard, County medical officer announced last week.

With the number of polio victims in the County far below previous averages of the last three years, Dr. Beard said school children who received their shots in the first and second grade classes last spring will get their ultimate shots, with the permission of the parents.

ALDERMAN Roscoe J. Parker, casting a vote of approval for the increase of personnel of the Annapolis Police department at the monthly City Council meeting, said he hopes the department considers colored policemen in the future.

Alderman T. Norwood Brown also stated that he felt it was time to launch a list of applications for appointment to the police force without regard to race, creed or color.

In closing, he stated, "I wonder if this request would get consideration." 7 colored females and six colored males were born in Annapolis during the September months the County Health department reports.

THE ASBURY Methodist Church on West Street started its annual camp meeting revival on Friday and will run through the first Sunday in November.

The affair features as guest speakers some of the outstanding ministers in the County.

Once again the Bates High School band has been invited to participate in the colorful 14th Annual Cabital Classics to be held at Washington's Griffith Stadium October 2.

Under the supervision of William Reid, the true value of the high school band is known by everyone here but the locals are all but new to the Classics grounds.

Speaking of the festival Washington affair, Annapolitans have been talking about it for sometime, and particular interest looms here as Morgan State College, one of the participants in the football game, has a homegrown son on its squad in Robert Jacobs, a center.

MEMBERS of the Junior and Senior chapter of the United Youth Organization will attend the tenth annual meeting of the UN youths program in Baltimore October 24.

Odaris Johnson, a sophomore at Bates, will serve as discussion chairman of one of the groups which will meet at the Public Library No. 15.

Odaris spoke on history at a recent PTA meeting and the purpose and organization of the UN.

In addition, the local PTA gave $25 in order that Bates may send a representative to the UN headquarters October 26 - 27 in a trip sponsored by the Mayor's Committee for UN Day.

AND THERE'S the fine work of Hoppy Adams of WANN, for the past eight months in Cambridge, that will come to a close October 29. The regular Saturday afternoon broadcast has done so much in helping thwart juvenile delinquency in that town.

Due to a shortage of time the affair will be curtailed.

We would like to thank Hoppy for doing such a good job with the youngsters of Dorchester County for the past months.

And congratulations to the Merrill Pittmans on their newly arrived daughter — Lynn.

Looking back on Catonsville history we recall that in 1921 Alexander Jenson opened a beginners class in music at Mt Olivet Church.

Also in 1921 Matthew Traverse erected several houses in front of Grace Church. They were later occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Henson Smith, Miss Margaret Ebbs and Mrs. Nannie Hall.

In 1921 the Rev. Charles Murray was pastor at Grace.

$65,000 in property values is teacher's bequest to NACW

WASHINGTON

The National Association of Colored Women's Clubs is the beneficiary of $65,000 in property values from the estate of the late Mrs. Cora W. Stewart, Mrs. Harris B. Gaines, national president, has announced.

She made the announcement at the recent meeting of the administrative board at Association House, 1601 R St., NW, in Washington.

THE BOARD discussed policies and plans for 1956-57, including the 20th biennial convention, set for July in Miami.

Mrs. Gaines also reported new developments in a community project on which she has been working for the past year.

She reported that a well-known foundation has undertaken sponsorship of the project. Details will be made public at a later date.

LITIGATION over the will of the late Mrs. Stewart had delayed announcement of her legacy to NACWC.

Mrs. Stewart, well-known teacher of Evansville, Ind., died in 1951. She was the ninth president of the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs.

During her term of office Mrs. Stewart organized the National Association of Colored Girls, now an important phase of the work done by NACWC.

FOR SEVERAL years before her death, Mrs. Stewart was also president of the Frederick Douglass Memorial and Historical Association, an affiliate of NACWC.

During her administration a caretaker's cottage was erected on the Douglass Home property at a cost of $10,000.

Among those attending the board meeting were:

Mrs. A. E. S. Johnson, Marlin, Texas, vice president; Mrs. Omega V. Mason, Salem, N.J., chairman of the executive board; Mrs. Susan J. Blackson, Sewickley, Pa., treasurer; Mrs. Ines W. Tinsley, Boston, first recording secretary.

* * *

REPRESENTING the five NACWC regional organizations were:

Mrs. Ruby Stutts Lyell, Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. Katherine Helm, Wichita, Kans.; Mrs. Mabel V. Gray, Los Angeles; Mrs. Thelma Umbarger, Portland, Ore.; Mrs. Dora Needham Lee, St. Albans, N.Y.

Other members present included Mrs. Carrie M. Hackley, Washington; Mrs. Fannie Baxter-Obadiah, Chicago; and Mrs. Pauline Adams, West Palm Beach, Fla.

Observers included Mrs. T. J. Barnes, president of the Mississippi State Association; and Mrs. Peachie Jackson, president of the Virginia Association.

Trolley operator loses change bags

When a prankster pulled the pole of the No. 21 trackless trolley from its overhead electric wire, Samuel Macer, 1800 block McCulloh St., left his vehicle to replace the pole on Sunday night.

When he returned, police said, he found that someone had lifted his two change bags containing $12.
